PREFACE

THIS third volume of the Calendar of Ormond Deeds covers the period 1413 to 1509. The documents contained in it are of particular interest and value because the fifteenth century and early Tudor rule in Ireland (owing to the destruction or disappearance of our records by various casualties from the seventeenth century onwards) form an obscure period. And yet the fifteenth century is recognised to have been one of great importance in the waning of the Mediaeval age and the beginnings of the Tudor monarchy in Ireland with the introduction of English rule, law, speech and civilisation. In this period also the Irish language and culture was adopted by the descendants of the first feudal settlers and indeed became common with most of the colonists, so that what with the blending of the races a new and distinctive form of culture and nationality began to prevail. For these developments, and especially for the overgrown feudalism of the great Anglo-Irish families and their domination of Ireland under a Home Rule parliament, these varied documents, which are characteristic of what was happening in all the south of Ireland and indeed wherever the Normans were mixed with the Gaels, offer new and much needed light.

The main interest naturally centres round the house of Ormond which under Earl James IV (1405-1452) attained not only to great territorial magnificence but provided also a viceroy for Ireland who represented the Home Rule nationalism which was brought to an end by Poyning's parliament of 1494-5. Everything pointed to this great and pro-English family attaining that almost permanent Supremacy which later, from 1477 to 1534, was enjoyed by the Earls of Kildare. But James, son of this Earl, taking up the Lancastrian side, was killed in the Wars of the Roses, and henceforth the family became absentee in its senior line and expired with Thomas (7th Earl) in 1515. A junior branch, the Butlers of Polestown, became deputies for the absentee Earl, and finally the head of this branch, Sir Piers Roe, succeeded after the death of Thomas and founded a second Butler line, Earls of Ormond and Ossory. The documents which convey to Edmund MacRichard of Polestown, his son James, and his grandson Piers this deputyship are given in this Calendar (Nos. 211, 229, 320); they supplement and correct what Carte (Life of the Great Duke of Ormond) tells us on this point.

An interesting feature of this second branch is that, unlike the Earls themselves, they married Irish wives, in defiance of the Statutes of Kilkenny. The most striking of these marriages was that of James son of Edmund with Sabina (Sadhbh) Kavanagh, daughter of Donal Reagh McMurrough, the Irish king of Leinster, by whom he had a son, the famous Sir Piers Roe. This marriage was a cause célèbre in the Ireland of the time and needed an act of Parliament and episcopal pronouncements to make it valid (Nos. 226, 230, 231). The will of James Butler (No. 329) is interesting not only in itself but because he styles himself "captain of his nation," testifying how far the idea of Irish chieftainship was spreading.

The Palatine powers, the hereditary Prise of wines as Butler of Ireland, and the other rights of the Ormond family form the subject of several long deeds here (Nos. 252, 261, 316, 342). Their powers as Lord Deputy are shown in Nos. 84, 177, 259, etc. The operation of Poyning's Acts, especially as regards the great act of Resumption, which affected Ormond also, is illustrated in No. 298; and the reversal of the attainder of this great family by act of Parliament in 1475 is given in Nos. 213 and 242.

The two other great Earls of the south, Desmond and Kildare, are mentioned in several interesting deeds which form new material for the history of these families and supplement the genealogical details given in Vicary Gibbs' latest edition of Cokayne's Complete Peerage. The dubious question of the succession in the earldom of Kildare after 1432 is settled by the evidence of Deeds 101 and 135. The loss of the records of the Geraldine line of Desmond at the time of their forfeiture in 1583 has greatly limited our knowledge of this interesting family, one which became far more Irish than Kildare or Ormond. This Calendar does not add much indeed, but a series of Inquisitions on the lands, etc., of the Desmond earldom in 1420-1 (See Deed 45) gives a unique record of the extensive lands of the family at that time.

The history of municipal liberties in Ireland is illustrated by Deeds 1 and 3; the latter, those of Youghal as granted by the 4th Earl of Ormond, are apparently not recorded elsewhere.

As in earlier volumes, entries in or even references to the Irish language practically do not occur, for the Butlers do not seem to have patronised Irish culture. But they also, like other great families, had to have Irish jurist-consults for their Irish tenants, and Deed 66 reveals a settlement in Ormond of a Brehon family. On the other hand the spread of English in Ireland is suggested by such Deeds as 102.

The admission to English law and liberty by letters patent of Henry VII to Cormac MacCarthy (No. 273) and to William Casshen (No. 306) are interesting specimens of this form of grant and by implication suggest what rights were denied to the so-called "Irish enemies" after the Statutes of Kilkenny.

The growth of Irish customs and tributes among the Anglo-Irish lords, which were greatly denounced in Poyning's Parliament and in the next century as "abominable Irish extortions," is revealed interestingly and in detail in Deeds 94 and 102. The various rentals of the Ormond manors show the change in land economy, tenure and agriculture that took place from the earlier to the later mediaeval period (Deeds 102, 119, 147, etc.) ; the disappearance of the " betaghs " is marked. A particularly interesting and rare rental is that of the manors of Turvey and Rush in county Dublin, 1476-84 (Deed 245). From this one could almost reconstruct a picture of this little district, the names of whose tenants are fully recorded, including a curious list of " tenants at the will of the lord," fishermen who render to the lord tribute of herrings, as implied in the name Balscaddan.

Two rolls of the Court of the Liberty of Tipperary in 1432 and 1508 gives a clear picture of the way in which the Earl's Palatine court was summoned and who its tenants were (Deeds 102, 337). The proceedings of a Sheriff's Tourn in Deeds 200 and 224 are also rare documents to find for this kind of jurisdiction.

The human interest is not lacking in such of these deeds as record court proceedings, for example, an interesting case of 1482 in which the Earl of Ormond seems to have put pressure on a reluctant father, Walter Burke, to enfeoff his bastard son Richard (Deed 255).

The finds which these documents continue to afford us are illustrated in the Calfe or Le Veel Deeds (Nos. 39, 144, 346), which bear upon the interesting question of the marriage between the famous Art Mac Murrough, king of Leinster, in 1390 with Elizabeth Calfe, heiress to the feudal barony of Norragh, county Kildare. On this point and the descent of this Barony from Strongbow's time, I have contributed a paper to the Journal of Royal Society of Antiquaries, Ireland, for June, 1935.

In Deed 272 we seem to have a deed by Lambert Simnel as " Edward VI of England and Ireland," as explained in my note.

I hereby take the opportunity to express my continued thanks to the Librarian and Staff of Trinity College, Dublin, for the facilities they have put in my way in this work, and to other helpers such as Miss Margaret C. Griffith, who gave me valuable assistance in that portion of the Addenda to this volume which comes under No. 342.

NOTE.—The charter of Liberties granted to the burgesses of Wexford by Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, is printed in the original latin in Chartae, Privilegia et Immunitates (p. 47). It is there dated as 25 Julii undecimo E. II, E Rot. Pat. 1 Eliz. M. 18*d.*

The Inspeximus above in English (Elizabeth) does not make too faithful a version of the original. The Inspeximus of De Valence's charter made under Henry V is undated, but the words 'our brother,' applied to Thomas of Lancaster, give us an approximate date. Henry V ascended the throne on March 21, 1413 [N.S.]. His brother, Thomas of Lancaster, was acting as Lieutenant of Ireland till September of that year. The date therefore may be put between April and September, 1413.

Liberties of the town of Youghal. (Text in latin).

James le Botiller, Earl of Ormond, Lord of the Liberty of Tipperary, and Lord of the Barony of Innescoyne and the town of Youghal, to all seneschals, bailiffs, serjeants and sub-serjeants, and all deputies and ministers of his in the said barony, greeting.

The Earl grants for himself and his heirs to his burgesses of Youghal " that they and their successors shall have and hold the said town with all their lands and tenements within and without their farm [interlineated : in ways, paths, moors, marshes, woods, etc., passage, tolls (thelonagium) and all other commodities whatsoever to the fee-farm belonging] for ten marks of us, our heirs and assigns for ever, to be paid yearly in two portions at Easter and Michaelmas for ever. And they and their heirs and successors shall have all liberties and free customs which follow [interlineated : they shall be free throughout the whole barony and manor aforesaid, even throughout our whole lordship and power in county Cork] viz. that they shall choose each year at Michaelmas a suitable and sufficient burgess to occupy the office of Reeve (officium prepositure) in the said town, and that the reeve who shall be so chosen shall take oath before him who preceded him in that office or before the burgesses who are or shall be suitors of the court of the said town in the Tolsel (Tolsild') of the same, without his having to appear out of the town of Youghal before our Seneschal or any deputy of his in the above barony. Also the Hundred [court] of the town shall be held before the Reeve once every fortnight in the Tolsel there. Also the Reeve may occupy the said office by himself or a sufficient deputy by the assent of the burgesses. Also we grant that no burgess shall be drawn to answer in any plea before any Seneschal of ours in the above barony, but only before the reeve in the Tolsel. Also the burgesses shall be as free throughout our said barony and even all our whole lordship in Ireland as the burgesses of Clonmel or Kilkenny or any other burgesses of Munster or Leinster are.

Also the burgesses may freely contract marriage for themselves, their sons, daughters and widows without any licence necessary from us, our heirs, etc., unless they hold of some extern tenement of us in chief outside the borough of Youghal. Also they may give, sell or pledge all their purchases (conquestus suos) in the town and suburbs of the same, at their will, saving only to men of religion and enemies or rebels of the lord King. Also they may freely dispose of all their tenures within and without the walls of the said town at their will in messuages, gardens (virgullis), houses on the river and wherever elsewhere they be, in free burgage as abovesaid. Also they shall not be summoned, called or in any way vexed, to appear at musterings (mustrizonas), parliaments (parliamenta) or other conventions whatsoever before any deputy or seneschal or any other ministers of ours in the above barony outside the town of Youghal.

Also the burgesses shall have from us and our heirs for ever for the relief, maintenance and fortification (relevacionem, sustentacionem, fortificacionem) of the said town, all forfeitures and escheats which in any way are due to us and our successors by reason of our lordship in the town of Youghal in the same, on account of the divers losses and dangers (propter diversa dampna pericula et incomoda) which by invasions and attacks of the enemies and rebels of our Lord the King the said burgesses there have endured and do daily endure, so that the lieges of our Lord the King the more willingly (tanto avidius) may thither resort and foregather (confluant et accedant)."

[A cross has been drawn through all the text from "also the burgesses shall be as free throughout our said barony," etc., to "by reason of our lordship in the town of Youghal"].

"Also of our more special grace to the said burgesses and their successors of us and our heirs and successors for ever, considering the complaint of the said burgesses how that their town from of old and ever up to this time has been for the greater part maintained and sustained by merchants both natives and foreign there coming and residing and exhibiting their divers merchandise, but that they have been by undue taxes, impositions and cessings (taxaciones impositiões et assessiões) of divers tallages and other intolerable burdens laid upon them, both burgesses and merchants, for their merchandise by divers persons dwelling in the adjacent country (per diversos patrie adiacentes) most unjustly (minus rite et voluntarie) burdened ; on which account they have left the said town for the greater part desolate and refuse to come there with their merchandise and wares, to the destruction and desolation of the said town ; therefore we wish and firmly enjoin upon all and singular our deputies, seneschals, officers, etc., of our said barony that the above-said burgesses, their heirs and successors, or merchants who are there now or at any time may be, shall be quit and totally discharged of all these taxes from henceforth and for ever by these presents. We command also all and singular our deputies, seneschals, serjeants and all our officers of the said Barony by the tenour of these presents that they shall permit the said our burgesses and community of our town of Youghal to freely use and enjoy these said liberties.

In witness whereof we have had these our letters patent made.

Witness myself at Clonmel on the 24th day of May in the first (line drawn through and VIII^o substituted) year of Henry V."

(Added in margin : " We have also granted to the sovereign and burgesses of the said town who now are or shall be, the right to receive the fines and ameracements of our Hundred courts of the said town from our reeves who now are there or shall be, by indenture to be made between the sovereign and the reeve from year to year, to be expended in reparation and fortification of the walls ; also all forfeitures, escheats, etc., which at any time may befall, etc.")

May 24, 1413, or 1420.

NOTE : This interesting and curious document has no seal attached. A portion of the wording is lightly crossed through, as if meant to be erased. The year " primo " in text is also erased and " VIII^o " substituted. I find no other evidence for a grant of civic liberties to Youghal at this date. Chartae Privilegia et Immunitates (Irish Record Commission, 1889, p. 70) has a grant by Edward III, July 4, 1375, pro superiore mercatoribus et communitate Ville de Youghill. The "Council Book of the Corporation of Youghal" 1610-1800, (edited R. Caulfield) begins with "Annals" or early notices of the town's history (pp. xxv-lxiv); among these are a murage grant by Edward III in July 18, 1358, to the sovereign of Youghal, and four other grants of this King, also several of Richard II, Henry IV and later monarchs, but our charter above is neither given or mentioned.

James, Earl of Ormond, who witnesses the grant, was Lord Lieutenant from February 10, 1420, to the spring of 1422. If this grant of liberties was made in a later year (8 Henry V) he was then testing as Lord Lieutenant.

The manor and castle of Inchiquin (Innescoyn, Incheocoygne, etc.) lie four miles south-west of Youghal.

[The year is a little obscure. Thomas Butler was Prior of Kilmainham from 1403 to 1418 or 1419. Nothing is said in the above as to whether Prior Thomas is acting as deputy-Governor of Ireland. As the year Henry V is almost obliterated, it is possible that the year is 1 Henry V, for the Prior was then acting as Deputy to Thomas of Lancaster, Lord Lieutenant, from March 1409 to September 1413].

[No date is given to this deed. It perhaps applies to the reign of Henry IV or may be as late as 1423 when Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, came to Ireland as Lord Lieutenant. The services due to the Earl of March are given. So are those due to the Earl of Stafford. The latter by descent was lord of a portion of the Liberty of Kilkenny. In 1392 at the request of the then Earl the King granted to James, Earl of Ormond, the custody of this portion. Edmund fifth Earl of Stafford was killed in 1403 at the battle of Shrewsbury. He had married Anne, daughter of Thomas, Duke of Gloucester, youngest son of Edward III. By her he had Humfrey, later Duke of Buckingham. Anne later married Sir William Bourchier, created Count of Eu in 1419. Their son was Henry Lord Bourchier. For deeds relating to Sir William Bourchier see deeds 5 and 6 of this volume].

[Circa 1423].

On the dorso there is written in a later hand : Receptio servicii regalis apud Kildare coram Thoma Comite Dessemonie Deput. locum tenentis Hibernie de veneris prox. post festum Nativ. S. Johannis Baptiste anno r. r. Edwardi IIII septimo. [June 19, 1467].

The writing is much faded and the whole entry is brief ; it contains the names of James Troy, serjeant, Gilleduf Bourke, Nicholas O'Brodin for Kilmaboigh and Baltarstyn and " purparty of the Earl of Ormond there." The total sum amounts to about 55s.

It refers to the time when the Earldom of Ormond was in the hands of the Crown by attainder (1461-76) and Thomas, Earl of Desmond, as Deputy took into the hands of the Crown the royal service due from the Ormond lands.

In margin in later hand: Cregg, Laghbally, Sucheston and Mayneston.

Note : This grant of lands to a member of an hereditary family of Brehons is particularly interesting. Professor T. F. O'Rahilly shows that the MacGlanthy (Mag Fhlannchadha) family were the Earl of Ormond's brehons in the sixteenth century. (See his paper on Irish Poets, Historians and Judges in English Documents, 1538-1615, in the Proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy, June, 1922). Here we see an Anglo-Norman lord admitting to freehold estates in his territory a trained member of the Brehon order so as to deal with cases arising under Irish law among his native tenants and vassals, and, by the grant to Donald and his heirs recognising the hereditary descent of these learned sept.

The latin text is as follows.

“ Hec indentura facta inter dominum Jacobum le Buteler comitem Ormond ex una parte et Donaldum Macglanghy juris peritum ex parte altera testatur quod predictus Comes concessit prefato Donaldlo pro bono servicio et fideli consilio sue facultatis eisdem comiti et heredibus suis inposterum inpendendo omnia messuagia terras et tenementa que habet in le Greggy Leghballi Sucheston et Mayneston cum quadam parcella vocata Walteresland cum omnibus suis pertinentiis habenda et tenenda eidem Donaldlo et heredibus masculis de corpore suo legitime procreatis eandem facultatem habentibus et eidem comiti et heredibus suis bene et fideliter seruientibus de capitalibus dominis feodi illius per seruicia inde debita et consueta. [Deed is undated. Number 21 of these entries shows the Earl granting some lands in ‘le Cregg’ etc. to one Patrick de Pantry in September 1428, but that the above Brehon family got a permanent estate in county Kilkenny seems certain].

(Second skin begins.)

Pleas held at Clonmel before Theobald le Botiller, seneschal of the Liberty of Tipperary, on Thursday next before St. George's day in the 3rd year of Henry VI. [April 19, 1425.]

The cases are of the usual nature, namely pleas of debt, unlawful detention, robbery, bloodshed, etc. The writing is much faded. Comyne, Robert, prior of Athassel, Robert son of David Wodelok, Edward Rede, Richard Cardyff, Robert Barry.

The most interesting entry is a royal writ of admittance to English law and liberty made by Roger Mortimer, lord Lieutenant, in 1396. Evidently the recipient was a subject of the Earl of Ormond, hence the writ is proclaimed and repeated in his court. The latin text is as follows.

“ Ricardus dei gracia Rex Anglie et Francie et Dominus Hibernie omnibus ballivis et fidelibus suis ad quos presentes littere pervenerint salutem. Court of James, Earl of Ormond, held at Knocktopher on Thursday next after St. Canice's day in the 7th year of Henry VI before Walter Shirlok, seneschal of all the Earl's lands in county Kilkenny and elsewhere in Ireland: on which day Richard Prout, bailiff and attorney of Emma Flete, and Richard Fyll, came in person before the same seneschal, declaring that on Tuesday next before the feast of the Assumption of the B.V.M. in the 6th year of Henry VI. [August 12, 1428] in the Monastery of the B.V.M. of Jerpoint by the judgment of Richard son of Geoffrey Walsh and Thomas Fyll they took their oath on the gospels before the said Richard Walsh and Thomas Fyll and Thomas Holestre that they would appear on the abovesaid Thursday in the same court to seek, have and hear the inquisition and verdict of twelve lawful men both freeholders and gavellers of the same barony, and to await jurisdiction and judgment of same court according to the force and effect of the verdict on certain causes and articles as follows, namely that the said Richard Proute as Emma's bailiff says that Richard Fyll unlawfully and without reasonable cause holds of the said Emma four acres of arable land with appurtenances lying in the field called 'le Skardagh' in the tenement of Robyneston within the barony of Knocktopher, because the said land was a parcel of sixty acres which lately descended to Emma by reversion as right heir of Nicholas fitz John by virtue of a certain entail made by said Nicholas and was thereof seised. He therefore asks that the abovesaid four acres should be restored to him as the right of Emma together with damages. Richard Fyll answers that said land is not a parcel of the abovesaid sixty acres which descended to Emma, but is a parcel of fifteen acres which he has of the gift and enfeoffment of Arnold Cogan in Robyneston and he holds this as his own right and seeks to have it proved.

Richard Proute says that said Arnold never was seised in part or whole of the said land nor had any power to sell that land or to alienate it to any one and that it is not a parcel of the said fifteen acres but that it is a parcel of the abovesaid sixty acres, etc.

The two parties agreed by unanimous consent that if it is found by verdict of twelve lawful men on the same Thursday that said land is a parcel of sixty acres as above then it shall be lawful for Emma to enter upon the said land and to possess it for her and her heirs for ever without any challenge or claim. Similarly if it is found to be a parcel of fifteen acres as above Richard Fyll shall possess it to him and his heirs for ever. And to this both parties bound and submitted themselves. So it was resolved by the court that the truth should be verified by the following: Thomas Bathe, junior, Thomas son of William McGriffyn, William Flemyng, John Nongill, Geoffrey Thundyr, Eustace Howlyn, Richard son of John son of Philip McGriffyn, Richard Doune, William Archer, Reygnagh Thundyr, David Dorref, John Wollaghan, jurors. Who say on oath that the whole land of Scardagh as above is a parcel of the sixty acres which descended to Emma Flete and not a parcel of the abovesaid fifteen acres and that Arnold Cogan was never seised of the said lands. So it is resolved by the court that Emma shall occupy the four acres to her and her heirs for ever. In witness whereof the seals of said seneschal and jurors are affixed to these presents.

2) Indenture in French made between the King and James, Earl of Ormond, on taking office as King's Lieutenant.

The tenour is as follows :

The King by his letters patent has appointed the Earl his Lieutenant in Ireland on certain conditions agreed upon therein. The Earl shall occupy the said office for two years commencing on the day that he shall leave port to pass over into Ireland. He shall safely guard the land of Ireland according to his loyal power, taking as fee 2500 marks yearly to be paid in the following manner. In the first year 1250 marks paid on the day of the making of these indentures from the Treasurer of England or his deputy ; and 416*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* at Easter next and 416*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* at Michaelmas after that, from the revenues of Ireland. For the second year, 1250 marks at Easter next after that Michaelmas, 1250 marks at Michaelmas next following, and further as much as the King of his special grace wishes to grant him for the defence (garde) of Ireland by the hands of the King's Treasurer of Ireland for the time being from the revenues of the same as those revenues beyond the charges may provide.

And if the revenues of Ireland do not suffice, then on this being certified in the King's Chancery of England before his Chancellor there under the Great seal of Ireland, the Earl shall be paid what is wanting by the hands of the Treasurer of England or his deputy. For the payments the Earl shall have out of the Chancery of England or that of Ireland at his own choice as many and such writs (briefe) as shall seem good and reasonable to him for the said payments. And if the revenues of Ireland do not suffice then he shall have out of the Chancery of England as many and such writs as shall seem good and reasonable to him for the above payments. The Earl shall be at the port of Bristuit (Bristol) to pass over to Ireland on the 20th day of March next to exercise the above office, and for his passage shall have taken at that port sufficient and reasonable shipping (eskippesoun) for him and his soldiers at the King's costs. The Earl at the end of the said two years shall be freely discharged of that office towards the King or his heirs.

“ Know that James, Earl of Ormond, for our good service done and to be done granted to us the forfeitures of all lands and tenants, goods and chattels of William O’Shethe, Nicholas son of Richard Kanalyn (?) O’Shethe and Katherine wife of said Nicholas, outlawed and forfeited for felony within the said Liberty; which William, Nicholas and Katherine were indicted before the justices of the said Liberty concerning divers transgressions and felonies, and on account of a contention and claim which said William, Nicholas and Katherine made to all the lands and tenements of Crompestoun and Elyotesheys which a certain Adam, father of John Birton, formerly let for a term of years to a certain Thomas O’Shethe, ancestor of said Katherine, which term has not yet expired, as they say. And we, by reason of said contention and claim, took those lands into the hands of the Earl and occupied them in virtue of his grant as above. And because it appears to the Earl and his council that said Adam had not in those lands and tenements anything but a fee-tail—in which case the death of the father does not prejudice the son in the fief—and similarly because the said John Birton, as son and heir male of Adam, in the assizes held at Clonmel before Theobald le Botiller, seneschal of the Liberty, on Thursday next after the Epiphany in the 8th year of Henry V by a certain writ of the form of donation (per quodam breve forme donacionis in discendere) recovered said lands against William, Nicholas, Katherine and a certain Anastasia, daughter of John Everard, therefore the Earl by advice of his council has ordered us by writ of Chancery of his Liberty that we immediately remove our hand from the same lands and restore them to the said John Birton. We therefore in virtue of this order, and for three marks of silver which said John Birton has paid to us to the use of our castle of Grelaghesford, have restored them to him before God and all the people. So that we the said John Butler and our heirs will never make claim in future upon the same or any parcel thereof.

Given at Clonmel on Thursday next after the feast of the close of Easter in the 7th year of Henry VI.”

Royal writ to the Escheator of Ireland touching an inquisition into the lands of Gerald, Earl of Kildare.

Henry Stanyhurst, deputy of Robert More the King's Escheator, recites the King's writ in these words :

" Henry, King of England, to Robert More, his Escheator in Ireland, or his deputy. We have learned by various inquisitions taken before Henry Stanyhurst and Walter Glerne your deputies and returned in the Chancery of Ireland that Gerald, late Earl of Kildare, was seised in his demesne in fee tail to himself and the heirs of his body on the day of his death of the manor of Maynooth with its appurtenances, excepting the water mill there and fifty acres of land in 'le Waterton,' a parcel of the said manor ; also the manors of Rathmore, Rathymgan, Lea and Geashill, with their appurtenances, by the gift of a certain Richard Barby ; and that he held the same in chief of us by military service. Also that he was seised in his demesne, etc., (as above) of the manor of Taghmohok by the gift of said Richard Barby, and held the same of Richard, Duke of York, as of his manor of Dunamase by fealty and service of one rose yearly for all service. Also that James Flattesby held a third part of the manor of Naas of the said Gerald on the day of his death by homage, fealty and knight service ; and that William Byrt held another third part of the same by homage, fealty and knight service ; and that Christopher Preston held a moiety of the other third part of the same of the said Gerald by homage, fealty and knight service ; and that Elizabeth Brun held the other moiety of the third part of the same manor of Naas of the same Gerald. And that the Earl held the said manor of Naas of us in chief by fealty and service of one rose yearly for all service. Also that he was seised in his demesne as of fee in the manors of Rathbryde and Kilcork and held the same on the day he died of the Prior of the Hospital of St. John in Ireland as of the right of the Hospital by fealty and service of one rose yearly for all service. And that he was seised in his demesnes of fee of the manor of Taghmoho, and held it on the day he died of John Bellew and Anastasia his wife and of Thomas Harbryk and Margaret his wife as of the right of the same Anastasia and Margaret by fealty and service of one rose yearly. Also that he was seised in his demesne, etc., of one messuage and eighty acres of land in Cradokeston, and held them of us in chief by fealty and service of one rose. Also that he was seised, etc., of the manor of Balysochan, and held it of us in chief by knight service. Also that he was seised in his demesne in fee tail to him and his heirs on the day he died of the manors of Croom, Adare, and Esgrene by the gift of the said Richard Barby, and held them of us by knight service. Also that he was seised of the manors of Aclakath, Grene, Carrykytyll and Typernevyn and held them on the day he died of us in chief by knight service. Also that he was seised, etc., of a moiety of the manor of Corcomoyd and held it on the day he died of James, Earl of Desmond, as of his manor of Inskyfty (Askeaton) by fealty and service of a rose yearly. Also that he was seised on the day of his death of the manor of Glassare and held it on the day he died of James le Botiller, Earl of Ormond, as of his castle of Kilkenny by fealty and service of one otter skin. Also of the manors of . . . coyn, Oglassyne, Kilblan, Bewer, Corbyn and Greyeweyn and held them on the day he died of us in chief by fealty and the service of a rose yearly. Also of the manors of Sanraynach, Portolehan and 'le Boyle,' and held them on the day he died of James, Earl of Ormond, as of his manor of Nenagh by fealty and service of a rose yearly. And that Elizabeth his daughter, lawfully begotten between the said Earl and his wife Agnes, is the nearest heir and is of age thirty-four years and more, and was married to the said James le Botiller, Earl of Ormond, long before the death of Gerald, and that the said Gerald died on Thursday next before the feast of St. Luke the Evangelist last past (October 13, 1432).

We have taken the fealty of the said Earl of Ormond and Elizabeth his wife due to us for two parts of the said manors, messuages, lands, etc., and have of our special grace respited until the feast of Michaelmas next the homage of the Earl of Ormond similarly due to us, for 100s. paid to us in the Hanaper of our Chancery of Ireland, and have restored to them the two parts of the said manors, etc.

Therefore we command you that, having taken security from the said Earl of Ormond and Elizabeth his wife for their reasonable relief for the two parts aforesaid which are held of us and which have come into our hands by the death of the said Earl; you make them to have full seisin thereof, saving the rights of others, not entering upon the other two parts, etc., which are held of the Duke, Prior, Anastasia, Thomas, Margaret, the Earl of Desmond and the Earl of Ormond, etc.

Teste Christopher Plunket, knight, deputy of Thomas Stanley, knight, Lieutenant of Ireland, at Dublin on the 10th day of December in the 11th year of the reign (1432)."

The said Deputy, Henry Stanyhurst, therefore, in virtue of the above writ has made seisin to the Earl of Ormond and Elizabeth his wife of two thirds of the said manors, etc., which are held of the King and which by the death of the said Earl were taken into the King's hand.

In witness whereof he has had the King's seal of the office of Escheator of Ireland affixed.

Given on the 14th day of December in the 11th year of Henry VI.

December 14, 1432.

[This Deed is important both as giving the manors of the Earl of Kildare at this time (1432) and as fixing the date of the death of this Earl Gerald. Cokayne's Complete Peerage (1929) states that there is no evidence for the precise date of his death except that it was in the year 1432. According to Cokayne, this Gerald, son of Maurice, was 5th Earl, from 1390 to 1432. His wife in second marriage was Agnes Darcy who survived till 1439. Our Deed above gives the precise date of his death as October 13, 1432.

As Earl Gerald died without legitimate male heir the castle and town of Kildare reverted to the King. The disposal of his other manors is recorded above. After him there is a gap in the history of the Earldom until the succession of Thomas, 7th Earl, in 1456. The succession in that period is dubious, but John, his brother, is reckoned as 6th Earl].

Court of the Liberty of Tipperary.

[A skin four feet long and nine inches wide written on both sides with a writ attached of James, Earl of Ormond, given at Clonmel on the 4th day of September in the 11th year of Henry VI].

The writ in latin is from the Earl as Lord of the Liberty of Tipperary to the sheriff of the same, as follows :

" You shall summon by good summoners archbishops, bishops, abbots, priors, counts, barons, knights, and all freeholders of the said Liberty from each town (villa) four lawful men and the reeve, and from each borough (burgo) twelve burgesses throughout all your bailiwick, and all those who ought and are accustomed to come before the Seneschal of our Liberty to be before our seneschal at Clonmel on Monday after All Saints next to hear and to do our command. You shall also make to come before the seneschal all pleas of the crown of our said Liberty which have not been held (placitata) or which have arisen after our seneschal made his eyre (itineravit) last in those parts, and all attachments belonging to those pleas, and all assizes and all pleas which have been put to the petty assize before our seneschal, with writs of assizes and pleas so that those assizes and pleas by your default or by default of summons shall not remain to be taken. You shall also have proclaimed and made known throughout your whole bailiwick that all assizes and pleas which were taken and not finished before the seneschal of our Liberty after he made his eyre in those parts shall be before him in the same state in which they remained by our command or that of our seneschal. You shall also summon all those who were our sheriffs or coroners, up to the last eyre (itineracionem) of our seneschal in those parts, to be before him with writs of assizes and pleas for their whole time (of office). Also we order you throughout your bailiwick, both in cities, boroughs and market towns as elsewhere within the said Liberty, to have published and proclaimed that all those who by charter of the Kings of England or in any other way claim any liberties within our Liberty shall be there before the said our seneschal to show what kinds of liberties they claim to have and by what warrant, and that those who wish to complain of our bailiffs or ministers or any others, because of oppressions, extortions, wrongs, debts, accounts, contracts, or any transgressions whatsoever—saving the pleas of arson, rape, forstall and treasure-trove—shall be there to present their complaints if they wish. And you shall have all prisons, serjeants, and sub-serjeants of our Liberty to do what shall be enjoined upon them from us and you yourself shall be there to testify how all the above matters (premissa) have been performed. And you shall have there the names of archbishops, bishops, abbots, priors, earls, barons, knights, coroners, free tenants, reeves, serjeants and sub-serjeants along with this writ.”

Teste John son of William le Botiller, Seneschal of our Liberty, at Clonmel on the 4th day of September in the 11th year of Henry VI.

September 4, 1432.

On the back of the writ is the sheriff's response (in latin) as follows :

“ As regards archbishops, bishops, etc., (down to ‘ sub-serjeants ’) the execution of this writ has been made as appears in the return (cedula) sewn to this writ.”

“ There are no pleas of the Crown begun or finished or attachments pertaining to them.”

“ The assizes and pleas to be taken appear in the writs of the same.”

“ There are no coroners.”

“ Proclamation of this writ was made as this writ requires.”

“ There are no prisons before the sheriff.”

“ The sheriff is present in person before the seneschal on the day and place contained in this writ to do what this writ requires.”

“ And so I, Peter Comyn, Sheriff of the Liberty of Tipperary, reply.”

[Dorso of the return].

County court of the Liberty of Tipperary held at Lysroragh before Peter Comyn, sheriff of the said Liberty, and John Broun and Thomas Howet, keepers of the pleas of the Crown in the same Liberty, on Wednesday next before the feast of St. Nicholas, Bishop, in the 13th year of Henry VI (December 1, 1434); on which day of the county court Donatus More O'Kyally and others contained in the return, solemnly and for the first time summoned in the presence of the above-said coroners to stand to right in the court of the Liberty to reply to James, Earl of Ormond, Lord of the Liberty, for divers felonies whereof they are indicted, did not come.

County court of the Liberty of Tipperary held at Clonmel before the same on Wednesday in the feast of the Purification of the B.V.M. in the 13th year of the reign (February 2, 1435), on which day Donatus O'Kyally, a servant of the archbishop, and others, etc., (as above), being solemnly summoned for the third time did not come.

County court of the Liberty held at Clonmel before the same on Ash Wednesday in the same year (March 2, 1435), on which day Donatus More O'Kyally etc., summoned for the fourth time, did not come.

County court of the Liberty of Tipperary held at Lysroragh before the same on Wednesday after the feast of the Annunciation in the same year (March 30, 1435) Donatus More O'Kyally and others, etc. summoned, did not come, nor did any one stand pledge for them or any of them. Therefore it is resolved that he and the others named shall be outlawed as the writ requires.

Sewn to this writ.

Execucio istius brevis facta est prout patet in cedula huic brevi consueta.

Et sic ego Petrus Comyn vicecomes libertatis Tipp. respondeo.

[The following, in 15th century English, is written in a different and later hand, much faded, which seems the same as that used for the names added in the margins above. In these marginal additions the names of later prelates of Cashel, Waterford, Emly and Killaloe are put opposite the earlier entries as : John, archbishop of Cashel, Robert, bishop of Waterford, Cornelius of Emly and Tatheus of Killaloe. From these names we may date the writing as of the years 1446-1448 ; for Robert Poyer, bishop of Waterford, succeeded in 1446, and Cornelius O'Cunlis of Emly was translated in 1448. The approximate date for the following ordinances would therefore seem to be before 1460, but exactly when or in what way they were enacted and promulgated we have no evidence to show].

[Mr. Charles McNeill kindly sends me the following note with regard to this interesting document :

“ The document appears to be a copy of a writ with a sheriff’s return as well as some later additions. It was the sheriff who attached the ‘ cedula ’ of names of those from whom suit of court was required. The entries in faded ink are the other considerable addition to the return at a later time. Both these additions I would regard as made at the same period as each other and as the alternative (and later) list of bishops. The original list gave the names of the bishops of 1432 ; the additions to that list are names of their successors. Their date may be defined as within the pontificate of Tatheus of Killaloe (August 18, 1460–1463). This agrees with the archdeaconate of Richard Hedyane (iii) 1437–1463 to this extent, that he had appeared “ in person ” before 1463 ; but he cannot have been the same Richard who was set down in 1432 ; that was a predecessor of both his names. Your date, “ before 1460 ” is not invalidated by these facts, which determine the date of entry on the return, but not the date of making the statutes entered, which was necessarily earlier.

The dates of the bishops present some extraordinary confusions. In Emly there are two ‘ Cornelius ’ bishops after Thomas ; but the second of them had gone before the end of 1448. How then could he be contemporary with James of Killaloe, 1460–1463 ? The explanation seems to be that he was still alive and in possession of the title without the office ; as late as 1456 he was acting as assistant to the English bishop of Winchester. How much longer he lived I do not know. But it is curious to find him recognised in Ireland so late as 1460. According to Eubel, William O’Hedian had been translated from Elphin to Emly in 1449 and retained Emly until 1475 ; but as he was to be secured a pension from Elphin, it may be inferred that Cornelius had still an interest in Emly and drew part of the revenue.”

The "statutes and corrections" given above are of great interest but of a puzzling nature. No date is given. James 'Gallda,' who is called here the keeper of the Earl's country and 'own brother' to the Earl, is given by Carte as an illegitimate son of James the third Earl, and ancestor of the Barons of Cahir. The "Annals of the Four Masters" under 1448 say: 'James Oge, son of James Gallda, son of the Earl of Ormond, died,' but contain no other reference.

There occur also some peculiar words, Irish and English.

'Ravaynnour' (2) clearly seems to be written so, though one might expect 'retainer.' Mr. McNeill suggests however 'ravener,' "not an altogether inappropriate synonym for 'jentil man' in the 15th century on some occasions in Ireland." 'Raisers of revenue' might be suggested.

'Kehernty'e' (4) are the Earl's 'kern of the household,' in Irish 'Ceithern tigh'e.'

'Recettours and mayntenours' (1) are of course 'receivers and maintainers.'

As regards 'urlawus' (4) Mr. McNeill thinks that this may be referable to an Irish term, wrlámhas or forlámhas, authority or power. An alternative is to suppose that the word means 'outlaws' and that the scribe wrote an 'r' instead of a 't.'

'Forogr' (3) would seem to mean 'foragers' or 'purveyors'; and 'Coydhyhe' is 'night suppers' (cuid oidhche), a typical 'Irish exaction.'

'Connyw' (6) may be 'comhnuidhe,' stay or residence, as Mr. McNeill suggests, or 'coimmheadh,' 'coyny' or billeting.

'Awarle' (8) is curious; possibly it is for "ower all."

In (3) and elsewhere some form of 'oute' appears, and seems to need 'withen' i.e. except or unless.

John Cam Howet, serjeant of the barony of Lisroragh, in the court of the same before John son of Nicholas White, seneschal, on Tuesday next after the feast of St. Luke Evangelist, in the 16th year of Henry VI, presents that Thomas Benet shed the blood of Maurice O'Corry at Felereston. The seneschal asks Thomas Benet if he knows cause why he should not satisfy the lord of the barony in 5s. for the blood shed. Thomas Howet, lord of the manor of Felereston, comes and says that cases of effusion of blood belong to him because Reginald, formerly lord of the county of Tipperary, enfeoffed the ancestors of Thomas in Felereston with the following liberties : cognizance of effusion of blood, hue and cry, trespass of debt, breaches of the assize of bread and ale and flesh, and defect of watch and ward, at service of one pound of pepper per annum. Letters patent of Henry VI on the outlawry of Thomas fitzMaurice.

" Henry King of England, etc., to all greeting. We have inspected the record of an outlawry held before us as follows by the tenour of an inquisition before James Cornewalsh, deputy Chancellor of Ireland, Robert Dowedall, chief justice of the King's Common Bench of Ireland, John fitz Robert, mayor of Dublin, William Chevyr, second justice for pleas Coram Rege in Ireland, and Edward Somerton, the King's serjeant-at-law in Ireland, assigned by letters patent to enquire, hear and terminate in county Dublin, both within liberties as without, all and singular treasons, felonies and trespasses as in said letters patent is contained, on Thursday next after the feast of the Purification of the B.V.M. in the 18th year of Henry VI, by the following, viz., William Graas, goldsmith, David Hay, glover, John Notte, William Botiller, John Fleming, " flacher," Nicholas Mylys, Peter Husse, ' cotoner,' William Bourke Sherman, Hugh Saddeler, Richard White Braban, William Ley, Thomas Vyne Hoper, William Fernys, smith, and Richard John Glover. Who say on oath that Thomas fitz Morice of Kyldroght, gentleman, came to (apud) Dublin on Saturday after the feast of the Conversion of St. Paul in the 18th year of Henry VI, and there adhered to Bren O'Brenne and divers others of the O'Brynnes, Irish enemies of the King, and sold and gave to them bread and ale to the value of twenty shillings, they being then openly at war, and there with banners displayed took Hugh Corynghan, clerk, and Donald O'Flyng, " cotoner," and robbed them of two horses worth forty shillings and also robbed John Hull of linen cloth worth twenty pence treasonably and against their allegiance.

Also they say that the same Thomas came to Kylgoban with Irish enemies, viz. Brian (? : Bran) O'Brynne and others, on Thursday next after the feast of the Purification of the B.V.M. in the same year, and there burned the wheat and corn of Murgh McHarry, James Walsh Adamesson and Richard O'Brothyr being in haggard and stacks (taxis) treasonably and against their allegiance.

Therefore the sheriff was ordered to take the said Thomas under this form :

' James Cornewalsh, etc., (as above) to the sheriff of Dublin.

We order you to take Thomas fitz Morice, gentleman, of Kyldroght, indicted in the King's court before us of divers treasons and felonies against the King's peace, wherever you may find him in your bailiwick and guard him safely in the King's prison so that you may have his body before us at Dublin on Thursday next after St. Scholastica's day, to answer for such treasons and felonies, and you shall have there this order. Given on the sixth day of February in the 18th year of Henry VI. [February 6, 1440].'

'On which Thursday Thomas de la Feld, esquire (armiger), then Sheriff of Dublin, answered that said Thomas was not found in his bailiwick. He was then ordered to take the said Thomas in these words. 'James Cornewalsh, etc., as above, (order to the sheriff to take and keep Thomas and produce him at Dublin on Saturday next before the feast of St. Gregory, Pope). Also you shall take and seize into the King's hands all such goods and chattels of said Thomas as are found in your bailiwick and have them valued by oath of good and lawful men in your bailiwick and have this before us on the same day with this order. Given on the 11th day of February in the same year.

On which Saturday the sheriff answered that the said Thomas was not in his bailiwick. Whereupon he was ordered to attach Thomas before him and the keepers of the pleas of the Crown of the said county in full county court under this form.'

'James Cornewalsh, etc., as above. Order to the sheriff to summon Thomas, indicted for treasons, felonies and divers other articles specially touching the King, before himself and the Keepers of the pleas of the Crown as above, until according to the law and custom of our land of Ireland he shall be outlawed if he do not appear, and if he does then you shall take him and safely keep him in the King's prison so as to have his body before us at Dublin on Thursday next after the feast of St. Martin, Bishop, to answer etc., and also you shall take and seize into the King's hands all goods, chattels, lands, tenements, rents and services of Thomas aforesaid, felon, wherever they shall be found in your bailiwick, etc. and have the value returned before us on the said day with this order. Given on the 28th day of April in the 18th year. [April 28, 1440].'

'On which Thursday after St. Martin's day the sheriff answered that the order had been executed as appears in the document attached to the order.'

'County court of Dublin, held at Dublin before abovesaid Sheriff and Keeper of the pleas of the Crown of the same county on Tuesday next after St. Barnabas in the 18th year. Thomas fitz Morice of Kyldroght, gentleman, contained in the writ attached to this document, being a second time summoned (exactus) at the suit of the King that he should come to the King's peace to answer for divers treasons, etc., did not come nor surrender himself to the said sheriff.'

'County court of Dublin, held (as before) on Tuesday next after the Translation of St. Benedict in the said year, Thomas fitz Morice, etc., being a third time summoned, did not come or surrender, etc.'

'County court of Dublin, held at Dublin, etc., on Tuesday before St. Laurence's day in the said year, said Thomas, being a fourth time summoned, did not come or surrender, etc.'

'County court of Dublin, held at Garryeston, etc., on Tuesday before the feast of the Nativity of the B.V.M. in the same year, Thomas fitz Morice, being a fifth time summoned, did not come, etc. Therefore he is outlawed. And he has no goods or chattels, etc., in my bailiwick which can be taken into the King's hands.'

We therefore have thought fit to exemplify the record and process of said outlawry under our Great seal which is used in the chief Place (in capitali placea) of our said land.

In witness whereof we have had these our letters patent made.

NOTE.—This and a preceding Deed (101) throw light on the obscure question of the succession in the Earldom of Kildare in the years 1432-1456. According to Cokayne's Complete Peerage (1929), Gerald, 5th Earl, who died in 1432, seems to have been succeeded by his brother John, but as the latter was already old he was probably dead by 1434. His son John 'Cam' (crooked) was apparently not recognised by the government and the succession is obscure till 1456 with the accession of Thomas, son of John 'Cam,' in 1456 as 7th Earl.

The Thomas fitzMorice of the above Deed seems to be this

Thomas son of John 'Cam.' Kildroght was a FitzGerald manor. Thomas later succeeded to the Earldom in 1456 and is reckoned the 7th Earl. According to Cokayne he is called 'esquire' in a deed dated April 13, 1453.

Fitz Morice had become the patronymic of the family from Maurice, 4th Earl, who died in 1390. Thomas died in 1477 and was succeeded by Gerald 'the Great Earl.'

There was now at this time a standing feud between the Geraldines and the Butlers over the manors of Rathmore and Maynooth, hence the preservation of this Deed at Kilkenny.

Who the "Irish enemies" confederated with Thomas fitz Maurice were is not clear. "O'Bren," "O'Brin," "O'Brynne," etc., are easy to confuse as Anglo-Norman forms of "O'Brien" and "O'Byrne." As to the O'Briens of Thomond, there was a Brian-an-Chobhlaigh, son of Donough, son of Mahon, who died in 1460. As regards the O'Byrnes of Wicklow, Mr. Liam Price informs me that the genealogies in Leabhar Branach and Mac Firbis give "Bran" as the name of the father of Tadhg Mór na hIubhraighe (Newrath): the latter flourished towards the end of the 15th century. The Bran in the deed may then be the father of this Tadhg.

The dorsos contain brief entries of nine law-suits in the lord's court at Dunfert of the usual order, viz. trespass, bloodshed, not drawing the lord's corn, etc.

[These rentals contain matter of interest as showing the strength of the Anglo-Norman element in the towns and manors of the Earls of Ormond and the mixture with native tenants; also the growing adoption of Gaelic christian names, epithets, and surnames as the Anglo-Normans became absorbed; as also the systems of land-tenure, the rent per acre, etc. In the above cases the acres are small and seem to be taken for grazing purposes, though the word "cultura" indicates arable land. These rentals however are of a tedious and similar nature, and I propose in future to abbreviate them except where they are of unusual interest. For a full and clear rental of the Earl of Ormond's manors of Knocktopher, Gowran, etc., see Deed 119.]

Indenture between James, Earl of Ormond, and Edmund son of Richard Botyller, witnesses that the Earl has given and granted to Edmund the castle and manor of Powlystown with the wood and all other demesnes. To hold to him and the issue male of his body, both bastard as legitimate, for the term of his life, rendering yearly one rose at the Nativity, of St. John the Baptist, and allowing 'husbot, fyrebut, heybut' in the said wood to the Earl and his heirs and tenants of Balygaveran by view and delivery of the serjeant of the wood; which serjeant the Earl and his heirs shall appoint. After Edmund's death one of his male issue whom the Earl or his heirs shall wish to choose shall have the said castle and manor for the term of his life by the services and form aforesaid; and so with the remaining issue. And if Edmund die without issue male, the said manor and castle shall remain to the Earl and his heirs. And Edmund grants that he and his issue for the future ought to be ruled and governed by discretion and counsel of the Earl and his heirs, and all the tenants of Edmund and his issue for the future shall be intendent, obedient and respondent to the Earl and his heirs for the manor, castle and lordship aforesaid as is befitting. Also they will support and contribute freely to all burdens laid thereon by the Earl and his heirs—cessings of soldiers (turbariorum) and subsidies in county Kilkenny in future to be made, excepted. And if Edmund or his issue, men or tenants, shall become rebellious or hostile against the Earl or his heirs or these agreements in whole or part, the Earl or his heirs shall freely re-enter upon the said castle and manor. Judgment between them for the observance of these agreements to be by the Archbishop of Cashel or the Bishop of Ossory.

Judgment by Thomas (Barry), Bishop of Ossory, (1428-1459), in his court on the legitimacy of Edmund le Freyn.

"Thomas, by divine permission and that of the Apostolic see, greeting, etc. There lately appeared before us in judgment in our cathedral church of St. Canice, Kilkenny, Edmund le Freyn, lawful son of James le Freyn of happy memory and Elisia Power, who laid a complaint that certain sons of ambition and iniquity, not having God before their eyes, declare that same Edmund was born illegitimate and in concubinage, etc."

Witnesses are called, sworn and interrogated to testify to Edmund's legitimacy. First witness is John Ragyt, chaplain, aged fifty years and more. Who says that he knew said James and Elisia well for twenty years and that they dwelt at Clone in county Kilkenny near Rathbeagh ; that he knew that they dwelt together in matrimony, and that he solemnised the marriage between them in the parish church of the B.V.M. at Kilkenny at the great altar there by banns proclaimed in the same church and in the parish churches of Aghour and Rathbeagh for three solemn days. Asked as to the time of the marriage he says it was, as he believes, thirty years ago and that it was before the birth of said Edmund. Asked if they were divorced after this for any reason he says no and that they remained together to the death of Elisia. Asked as to what witnesses were present at the marriage he says Robert Talbot, Letise Braynok, his wife, Robert Fowly, Isabella fitzJohn, his wife, John Brown, butcher, Marion Power, his wife, Edmunda Grace, Elena Freyn, Roricus Carragh O'Morche and Magina Power with many others. Also that he is not moved by bribe, hate, love or fear and not corrupted or suborned. Roricus Carragh O'Morche, second witness, of free condition aged fifty years, is sworn, etc. Gives similar testimony. After whose evidence the Bishop declares Edmund born in lawful marriage. Given in the year of the Lord 1441, on the 19th day of August ; being then present Thomas Bellian, dean of the cathedral church of Kilkenny, Brother John Clynton, regular canon, procurator of the Abbot and convent of St. Augustine, Bristol, in Ireland, and Ancellin Grace, William Rowe, Patrick Pons, John Morfe, laymen of said diocese, witnesses formally called to the premisses.

Notarial sign and declaration follows, of Thomas Loundres, cleric, of Limerick diocese, public notary, drawn up at the request of above Bishop and said Edmund.

Documents relating to the Earl of Ormond's government of Ireland, 1441-1444.

Inspeximus by Henry VI of several enrolments in the Chancery of Ireland as follows.

“ Mem. that on the 30th day of March in the (torn away: ? 22nd) year of Henry VI in the King's council within the house of the Friars Minor of Drogheda | a discussion having been held between James le Botiller, Earl of Ormond, Lieutenant of Ireland, Richard, archbishop of Dublin, Richard Wogan, chaplain, the King's Chancellor of Ireland, Christopher Bernewall (torn away), justice for holding the King's Pleas in the said land, Robert Dowedall, chief justice of the Common Bench in Ireland, John Cornewalsh, chief baron of the Exchequer, William Chever, second justice of the King's Pleas, Peter Clynton, one of the barons of the Exchequer, E. Somerton, the King's serjeant-at-law, and Richard fitzEustace, knight, counsellors of the lord King in Ireland, concerning divers matters touching the state and weal of the King in the said land | as to which the lord-lieutenant declared that for the advantage and benefit of the said land he had directed letters under privy seal to Giles Thorndon, then Treasurer of Ireland, and to others of the King's council in Ireland to be with him at Drogheda on Friday after the feast of the Annunciation of the B.V.M. | yet notwithstanding that the letter of privy seal was delivered to the said Treasurer and received by him, after the letter so received the Treasurer on the tenth hour after the Nones on the day of the Annunciation of the B.V.M. stole away in the night secretly and like a thief out of Dublin castle towards Howth and there took ship for abroad to enter [England] without any mandate of the King or of the royal council of England directed to him, or that he absented himself for any good of the lord King in Ireland, nor did he declare any such cause to the Lord-Lieutenant or his Council. But because tide and wind were against them the sailors were compelled to return to Ireland on the morrow of the Annunciation, and said Treasurer had to land at Howth as the Lieutenant learned by evidence of bailiffs, wardens, sailors and others who dwell on that coast, duly examined before him. After which declaration Sir Christopher Bernewell showed the Lieutenant how that the Treasurer before his departure from Ireland by letters patent of the King of the said land (i.e. made in Ireland) ordained him deputy in the office of Treasurer in his absence. Asked by the Lieutenant if he had these letters, he said no. Wherefore | because by due examination both of the Chancellor as of the deputy Clerk and Keeper of the Rolls of the Chancery of Ireland it was discovered that the said pretended deputyship was made to the above Christopher on the 23rd day of March in the above-said year, which pretended deputyship was before the Treasurer's first crossing over the sea as narrated above | the said Chancellor being questioned whether he knew of any later deputy-ship made by the Treasurer to Sir Christopher or to any else before his later crossing to England, viz. was there after the feast of the Annunciation any such deputy-ship sealed under the King's seal, said no.

Wherefore the Lieutenant | reciting divers precedents in such cases made by the Lieutenant, Justices and other officers of the King, and moved, as he declared, by reason and the laws and ancient customs of the said land | found the office of Treasurer of Ireland vacant and unoccupied, and declared it so before the said Royal council ; all of which he ordered to be enacted and enrolled and to remain on record in the rolls of Chancery."

Inspeximus of a second record enrolled in the Chancery of Ireland to this effect.

" Mem. that in the abovesaid day, place and time the Lieutenant before the Royal council declared how that by trustworthy evidence he had learned that the said Giles, Treasurer, and Constable of Dublin Castle, had consorted with one Thomas fitz Morice, a notorious traitor who, with a multitude of Irish enemies and English rebels, had broken the King's prison and gaol in which lay Brother Thomas fitz Gerot, styling himself Prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in Ireland | whom the Lieutenant had put there on suspicion of felony and treason, and afterwards had been given special mandate by the King under his privy seal of England to keep him firmly detained and guarded until he should have other command from him | and brought out the said pretended Prior and set him at large. He (Giles), knowing Thomas to have committed felony and treason, had in Dublin castle, both in the hall at table as in the room and garden there, and also in the church of St. Mary " de le Dam " near the castle, had secret colloquies with him and received him now publicly now secretly. Which Thomas incontinently afterwards went off to the said Irish enemies and traitorously adhered to them and still adheres. Also Giles had absented himself out of the land of Ireland before this on divers occasions contrary to the statutes made thereon. Wherefore the Lieutenant, moved by these and other charges made against said Giles, as he asserted, took and seized into the King's hand all offices and fees belonging to him ; all which he ordered to be enacted and enrolled in Chancery and to remain on record."

Inspeximus of a third record of the Chancery of Ireland, to this effect.

“ Mem. that in the said year, day and place, viz. the 30th of March, the same Lieutenant declared to the King’s counsellors of Ireland, then assembled, that he had for divers reasons decreed the offices and fees of said Giles to be vacant and seized unto the King’s hand, and because it was not to the advantage of the King and public weal that they should remain vacant and because Easter was approaching, in which the King’s revenues in Ireland by various means were likely to accrue, and be received into the Treasury if a good, diligent, faithful and industrious man were appointed to the said office. And because it is the custom of the land of Ireland ever since the conquest of the same that whenever it happens that the office of Chancellor, Treasurer, or other office belonging to the King has in any way become vacant, then the Lieutenant or Justice for the time being with the King’s Council of the same land shall ordain for such offices, and by advice of the Royal council shall appoint suitable men in place of those vacating them, as long as it shall please the King and until the King out of England by his letters patent shall otherwise ordain—the Lieutenant therefore required and directed the counsellors to name and choose a suitable man for the said office. And first he called upon Edward Somerton, Serjeant-at-law (serviens domini Regis ad leges), to name and choose some one whom he knew to be suitable; and he after deliberation said that whereas Robert Dyke, archdeacon of Dublin, was a man of honest life and conversation and also famed from his youth up in divers courts of the King and in various honourable offices under him both in England and in Ireland, and already on various occasions had been named deputy Chancellor and deputy Treasurer in Ireland, he declared the said Archdeacon able and suitable for the office, whom the other counsellors also named and chose. It was therefore agreed by the Lieutenant and the Council, according to the custom of the land of Ireland, that Robert Dyke should be Treasurer of the same, as long as it should please the King; receiving the usual fees. And that on this the King’s writ patent should be made under the Great seal of Ireland to the same Robert in the form accustomed.”

In dorso is the Inspeximus of a fourth record enrolled in the Chancery of Ireland to this effect.

“ Mem. that on the 21st day of June in the 22nd year of Henry

VI [June 21, 1444] in the vestry of the chapel of St. John within the church of St. Peter in Drogheda, James le Botiller, Earl of Ormond, Lieutenant of Ireland—Richard, Archbishop of Dublin, Richard Wogan, Chancellor of Ireland, Brother Hugh Midilton, 'turcupellarius' of Rhodes, Prior of Kilmainham, Christopher Bernevale, chief justice of the King's Pleas in Ireland, William Chever, second justice of the King's Pleas, John Gogh, second baron of the Exchequer, Peter Clynton, another baron of the Exchequer, and Edward Somerton, King's serjeant-at-law, counsellors of the King in his said land of Ireland, being then present—summoned one Brother Thomas Talbot of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in Ireland then present and required him on the part of the King that there | before the royal Council and before Robert Manseld, esquire, usher of the chamber of the lord King, who had been sent to the Lieutenant and Council with credence, letters and writs from the King in order to make a true relation thereupon to the King | to offer testimony how that Giles Thorndon, late Treasurer of Ireland, at the time when the King's parliament was held at Dublin before the said Lieutenant, slandered James, Earl of Ormond, then King's Lieutenant in Ireland; which Brother Thomas humbly begged the said Lieutenant to have him excused in the same, who again required Brother Thomas on the part of the King, and because Thomas was related by the tie of kinship to the said Lieutenant, to offer true testimony on this matter. Which Brother Thomas said that he heard Giles Thorndon in the archbishop's palace of St. Sepulchre's near Dublin say to the Archbishop of Dublin, that he would make sedition against the Lieutenant and that he Giles was the first who would cut his head off and that he would bear it in a napkin to the lord King because he knew that he would get pardon from the King for that deed and reward to the value of £1000. Also he said that if said Giles were present and wished to deny said words that he would repeat them before him and would offer to prove it by his body. Afterwards then and there immediately said Lieutenant before his council and before said Robert Manseld required on the part of the King said Christopher Bernivale that he would relate what violence and insults Nicholas Woder had done in the City of Dublin to himself, then Justice, to the shame of the Lord King, which Christopher, justice, replied that in the time when Leo, Lord Wells, was Lieutenant of the King in Ireland, he, Christopher, as justice sat at Dublin, over the Chief Pleas there and as chief justice of the King's pleas, going from the street in which the pillory is to the archbishop's palace met the said Nicholas and a certain notorious felon of the King by name Tirrelagh Machenoy, indicted of felony and outlawed, with him, which Nicholas, looking him in the countenance openly and proudly questioned Christopher in these words: "why do you persecute this Tirrelagh?" To which the same justice replied and said "because he is a felon of the King and is indicted and outlawed for felony." To which the said Nicholas said "behold he is here present. I shall now see what you wish to do with him." Which justice then arrested the said felon, as he said, and ordered him on the part of the King that he should come with him, but Nicholas rashly and irreverently answered him and said that the said felon should not go with him for the same reason or for any other reason. And said Nicholas violently broke the said arrest and took him with him by force, not permitting the said felon to go with the said justice, to the dishonour and contempt of the King and the insult and reproach of said justice. Which all and singular the said Lieutenant then ordered to be enacted and enrolled and to remain on record in the Chancery."

"We have then by the tenour of these presents thought fit to exemplify the above memorandum for certain reasons specially touching us and the good and utility of our land of Ireland.

In witness whereof we have had these our letters patent made.

Teste the abovesaid Lieutenant at Drogheda on the 1st day of July in the 22nd year of our reign."

July 1, 1444.

NOTE.—These Inspeximus relate to the viceroyalty of James, Earl of Ormond, in the years 1441–1444, and the feud between him and Archbishop Talbot as to the government of Ireland, during which the Treasurer Giles Thorndon was especially active against the Earl. They do not appear to have ever been printed, I therefore give them in full as follows. For other contemporary evidence on this matter, see Graves: King's Council in Ireland, pp. 273-313, and Gilbert: Viceroy's of Ireland, pp. 336-347.

[My former pupil, Miss Jocelyn Otway-Ruthven, has kindly transcribed for me the following document relating to Giles Thorndon above, which so far as I know has never been published. It is from the Public Record Office, London, and is classed as Exchequer T. R. Warrants for Issues, Bundle 64.]

Privy seal warrant for payment of 293*l.* 19*s.* 9*d.* to 'oure trusty and welbeloued Squier Gyles Thorndon oure Tresorer of oure lande of Irlande.' Given at Windsor on the 4th day of October, 26 Henry VI. [October 4, 1447].

Thorndon has petitioned the King to the effect that "he at the feste of Estre the xxii yere of oure regne (1443) came out of oure said lande of Irlande to Abyngdon unto us for the reformation of certaine matiers particulerly shewed and declared in writyng to us by the said Gyles ayenst the Erle of Ormond, the which articles we committed to oure Counsail, to whom the same Erle because of divers matiers touching oure person beyng at October 4, 1446].

[The difficulties of payment out of Henry VI's Exchequer however are shown in a Privy Seal warrant dated Westminster, March 5, 1447, that Giles Thorndon, not having yet received the above sum in spite of an exemplification under the Great Seal of Ireland, is to be paid without delay. Another warrant of Privy seal, dated December 15, 1447, says he has been given tallies in payment but is in such urgent distress that he cannot wait, and so is to be paid ready money instead. Exch. T. R. Warrants for Issues, Bundles, 64, 65.]

NOTE.—It may be added here that Graves' "King's Council in Ireland, 16 Richard II" contains in the Appendix certain documents described as 'Original patents preserved in the Muniment Room of the Marquis of Ormonde, Kilkenny Castle.'

The first of these (ibid. pp. 269-272) is of the date March 12, 1404. It is an 'Inspeximus of an enrolment of a subsidy granted to the Earl of Ormond by the Council with the assent of the Magnates, Clergy, and Commons, as their Stipendiary and Governor at War in the absence of Stephen Lescrope, Deputy to Thomas of Lancaster, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, in consequence of the danger imminent from the enemies and rebels of the land of a subsidy of 6s. 8d. on each carucate of tilled land in Leinster, and the counties of Meath, Louth, Waterford and Tipperary and a rateable proportion from the prelates and clergy and the cities of Dublin and Waterford, etc.'

The second (ibid. pp. 276-284) is of the date 1442. It is an 'Inspeximus of a memorandum of evidence taken before the Lord Lieutenant and Council concerning certain charges against the Earl of Ormond, transmitted by virtue of a privy seal from England to Richard Wogan, Chancellor of Ireland. A portion of the Great seal, in white wax, remains affixed to a slip of parchment cut from the bottom of the document, but not severed.'

The third is in English (ibid. pp. 285-287) of the date 1442. It is a 'Letter of Richard Wogan, Chancellor of Ireland, to Henry VI, throwing doubts on the evidence laid before the Council in refutation of certain charges against James, Earl of Ormond.'

The fourth (ibid. pp. 288-294) is of the date 1442. It is an 'Inspeximus of a memorandum of the proceedings of the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland, consequent on the withdrawal of Richard Wogan, Chancellor of Ireland, and his concealment of the Great seal.'

The fifth (ibid. pp. 295-303) is of the date 1442. It is a 'Memorandum of proceedings before the Lord Lieutenant and Council of Ireland respecting the refusal to deliver the Great seal to Richard Talbot, Archbishop of Dublin, Chancellor of Ireland, subsequent on his neglecting to produce before them the letters patent of his office, or any record or exemplification thereof.'

The sixth (ibid. pp. 303-313) is of the date 1444 and is a 'Contemporary paper roll dealing with the government of the Earl of Ormond.'

[No date is given. It is probably circa 1450. Richard O'Hedian, later Archbishop of Cashel, was, according to Cotton's Fasti, archdeacon of Cashel 1403-1406. A later Richard O'Hedian was also archdeacon of Cashel in 1425, and again in 1437, and from that apparently to 1463.

Archdeacon Seymour, Donohill Rectory, kindly favours me with a note as to the above place-names. "Burgasleth is almost certainly the parish of Two-Mile-Borris, barony of Eliogarty, county Tipperary. The correct ecclesiastical name appears to be 'Borris.' 'Boteston' or 'Boytheston,' as it sometimes appears, is apparently near it."

Petition of some one unnamed [? seneschal of Wexford] to some important person unnamed, asking aid for the county of Wexford against Thomas of Desmond, Edmund Butler, Donal Reagh Kavanagh, etc.

This letter in antiquated English states that the writer has been hard set upon and put in great case by Thomas of Desmond, McGillpatrick, Donal Reagh MacMurrough and others of the county of Wexford, as well as the chief justice Devereux, who has procured the above to attack him. He proceeds to say that his correspondent has no true men in county Wexford except the "Brennys." Moreover Justice Devereux has prevailed with Thomas of Desmond to be at a Council in Dublin held before Thomas fitzMaurice, deputy-Lieutenant, wherein the said Deputy granted to Thomas forty pounds of the King's fee-farm of Limerick and is about to send Devereux to the King to get a confirmation of this grant and to have the said Thomas made lieutenant. Moreover Devereux and others take fee of Donal Reagh and have conveyed a part of the county of Wexford to Thomas of Desmond and Donal Reagh and have granted to Thomas of Desmond twenty marks to make war upon the writer and the true people of the town of Wexford.

On the dorso is written: "Ye most make iii letres on to the Erle of Willeshyre the other to John Erle of Shrewysbury and Weys and another to my lady [faded: ? NOTE.—For the text and explanation of this letter see a paper by the present Editor on the "Viceroyalty of Richard, Duke of York, in Ireland" in the Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries, Ireland, December 1932.

"The right reverent and worshipful lord" to whom the letter is addressed may be John, archbishop of Armagh, deputy-Lieutenant for the Earl of Ormond from June 1453 to the end of 1454. It may be an original letter, which, according to the instructions, is to be copied and despatched to three noble persons who were interested in county Wexford and the Butlers. Of these James, fifth Earl of Ormond (1452-1461), had been created Earl of Wiltshire on July 8, 1449, and Lieutenant of Ireland on May 12, 1453, by the influence of the Duke of Somerset. (See "Two chief Governors of Ireland at the same time," by Herbert Wood, in the Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries, December, 1928). John Talbot, second Earl of Shrewsbury (1453-1460), was son of the famous John Talbot of the French wars. His second wife was Elizabeth, daughter of James, fourth Earl of Ormond, and he had by her five sons and two daughters. The title Earl of Waterford came to him from his father, who was so created on July 17, 1446. The latter had a claim to the Lordship of Wexford through his De Valence descent, but this was contested by Lord Grey.

Thomas 'fitz Morice,' Earl of Kildare, is referred to in the letter as deputy-Lieutenant. We must date it as 1455 and associate it with a similar appeal made to parliament, in a letter from the Seneschal of the Liberty of Wexford and the Sovereign of Wexford town, telling how Edmund Butler and seven others of his nation with Donal Reagh M^cMurrough and other Irish enemies had, with banners displayed, ridden, burned and destroyed the county of Wexford for four days and four nights, (Berry, Statutes of Ireland, Henry VI, p. 361).

The other messuage which is called "Selomer bouche" lies between the tenement formerly Richard Horehan's on the south and the King's way on the north; ten acres of the above lie in the same borough; of which four lie in the field called "Vale Asshys"; one and a half lie between the land formerly Robert Graunte's on the south and that formerly Hugh Masoun's on the north; and one and a half lie between the land formerly Thomas Whyte's on the south and that formerly Gilbert Deyer's on the north. Another lies between the land formerly Thomas Mothyll's on the west and that formerly Robert Malgarphe's on the east. Two more lie in the field called 'le Blakerathe' between the Earl of Ormond's land on each side. The other ten acres of arable are in the fields of the town of Illyneston, of which two lie between the stone called 'le (Four other cases too faded).

May 1457-June 1458.

[This deed is especially interesting as showing the existence of the court known as the Sheriff's 'Tourn and Leet' (Turnus vice-comitis) in medieval Ireland and the nature of its jurisdiction. For a description of the origin and functions of the Tourn see Medley's Constitutional History of England (1898, pp. 335-6).

The MS. cartulary of the Monastery of the B.V.M. of Tristernagh in Westmeath, now in Armagh Library, which I formerly examined, contains in latin (p. xxxv) a list of articles to be enquired into on the sheriff's eyre on which he held his tourn. He is to enquire inter alia concerning ways and roads closed up (obturatis), cases moved in the church courts, persons who hold pleas in their courts which belong to the lord's Liberty (i.e. the Lord of the Liberty of Lochsewdy or Westmeath), viz. of death or maiming of English, or free tenure, gifts received by serjeants for remitting cases, boundaries and mears broken down between neighbours or a free tenement, keeping watch and ward, false measures of corn and ale, ells and weights of weavers, hue and cry falsely raised, waters impeded and diverted from their right course, thieves taken with their goods and allowed to redeem themselves without judgment, reception of these thieves and others, wardships, marriages and escheats belonging to the Lord concealed, idle vagrants spending in taverns and not having the wherewith to pay ; so with other pleas of the Crown, arson, rape, treasure-trove and forstall, false minters, fraud of millers who exact money as well as toll, malicious breakers of dove-cots, parks maliciously broken and beasts taken away, fisheries fished by theft, coins maliciously and furtively marked, persons proclaimed for felony and outlawed in the Lord's court, who proclaimed them, who should have attached them and did not do so, burglary, and homicide of English killed and buried before view of the Coroners, persons who make false deeds and seals, persons who receive thieves and proclaimed persons, etc].

Seventeenth century copies of three Deeds.

1) Indenture made on the 2nd day of July in the 35th year of Henry VI, between John Sweetman and Robert Roth, merchant of Kilkenny, witnesses that John has granted and to farm let to Robert, his heirs and assigns, eleven acres of arable land in the borough of Kilkenny, to have and to hold for the term of forty-three years, rendering 3s. 4d. silver.

July 2, 1457.

2) John Sweetman, gentleman burgess of Kilkenny, gives and grants to William Courry, merchant and burgess of the same, that moiety of all arable lands, meadows, etc., of Alris on the other side of the Nore with a mill pond and 'kiddelis,' which is not yet divided between grantor and Robert Purcell, son and heir of Richard Purcell of Dirrlyegh in county Kilkenny, to have and to hold to him and his heirs for ever.

Witnesses : Brother William White, prior of St. John's of Kilkenny, with his confreres, Sir Richard Stackboll, chaplain, Thomas Seys, merchant, and Thomas Londris, notary.

3) (In English). Robert Datown, son of Redmund Datown, formerly lord of Datouneslond, gives and grants to James, son of Edmund le Botyller, the townland (villam) called Croanwoyganroge in the lordship of Datouneslond. To have and to hold to him and his heirs for ever of the chief lords of the fee, etc.

September 8, 1457.

[Compare with this deeds 184, 185, 202, 203, 284. Why Robert above describes himself as 'formerly lord of Datouneslond' is not clear; possibly he had conveyed or meant to convey it all to James fitzRichard Butler].

Indenture (in English) made on the 12th day of September in the 36th year of Henry VI between James the son of Edmund fitzRychard Botyller on one part and Robert Datown, William Datown, Patrick Datown and Richard Datown, the sons of Redmund Datown, late lord of the Datowns, on the other part, witnesses that whereas the said Robert, lord and heir of the Datowns, by the advice of his said brethren has granted and given unto the said James by deed of enfeoffment a place called Croanwoyganroge, to have and to hold for the term of his life, as in said deed of enfeoffment appears, to the effect that the said

James shall maintain, support and help the said Robert, William, Patrick and Richard as far as he can or may against all men that would do them any hurt and suffer no man to charge them with any manner of charges of the country of "rewynours" and yielding "connue" or "bonnes" or any other unlawful charges otherwise than other lords' (lorden) and gentlemen's sons have been charged. For the fulfilment of all which the said James binds himself, his heirs, executors and assigns by this present indenture. Also the said Robert, William, Patrick and Richard by this indenture bind themselves, their heirs, executors and assigns that they or any of them will make no estate of fee for a term of years or at will unto any man of such lands, pastures, woods, waters, or any other commodities of which they or any of them are seised and may not themselves occupy and cultivate (manewyr), without its being granted by the advice, good counsel and will of the said James.

In witness whereof to these indentures the parties have set their seals.

September 12, 1457.

Compare with this, deed 102 of this volume in which much the same 'Irish exactions' as those given here are named. 'Rewynours' would appear to be the same as the 'ravynours' of that document. 'Connue' appears again to be the Gaelic 'comhnuidhe' (residence i.e. quartering, though perhaps 'coimheadh,' maintenance, billeting, 'coigny,' is intended). 'Bonnes' is the quartering of 'bonys' (Gaelic 'buannaidhe': hired soldiers) upon the tenantry.

Margaret daughter and heir of William Brahynoc grants to Elicia Brahynoc, her daughter, and her heirs for ever all her lands, messuages, etc., in the lordship of Condineston, and two acres of land in Gorthemore in county Tipperary.

Judgment in the county court of Waterford on a difference between Edmund fitzRichard Butler and Walter Butler of Ross regarding the manor of Donmore.

This document takes the form of a letter in the English of the time beginning : " Syrrys ye schal onderstand that Walter Botiller that was som tym at the Carryg oppenly wranght Edmund fitz Richard Botiller twchyn ye manour of Donmore." It goes on to say that if a tenant-in-tail aliene land that is entailed to another in fee simple, by that alienation the entail is broken, so that the tenant is no more heir and he who is in the entail may not by law enjoy the portion that is alienated but must sue before the justices in the Common Place and procure a remedy by writ of " formedon." Walter Botiller of Ross, being in possession of the manor of Donmore in the county of Waterford as tenant in tail, made an alienation to Edmund fitzRichard Botiller in fee simple. This by law broke the entail of the said manor. Walter then claimed the said manor by entail, not suing by " formedon " nor having any entail to show, nor any charter or other deed, but only his naked word, and so entered and took seisin in that manor against the law, and so openly wronged the said Edmund. The latter may therefore recover his seisin of that manor with all his damages by assize of Novel Disseisin. And though the disseisin was openly known and published in the counties of Waterford, Kilkenny, Tipperary and Wexford yet there was no session to try the disseisin. The judges are to openly and boldly declare that the said Edmund is to receive seisin of the manor aforesaid as he had it before, and that inquest shall be made as to his damages. And after possession is granted to Edmund, if Walter have any rightful title to plead for the said manor he shall show it, and Edmund shall obey him humbly like any simple man in the country and answer as the law wills and be bound in all points as the law shall direct.

[? Circa 1460.]

[This appears to be an order from the court of the Common Place in Dublin addressed to the judges of assize or other magistrates in the county Waterford, touching a dispute between Walter Botiller of New Ross and Edmund fitz Richard Botiller. Walter appears to have broken the entail of the manor of Dunmore by an alienation to Edmund and then to have tried to recover it by force. Edmund was the famous Edmund MacRichard, nephew of James, fourth Earl of Ormond. He died on June 13, 1464 and therefore this undated document must be placed before that event. But for the precise year there is no evidence. Edmund being a great man is here pointedly requested at the end of the letter to obey the law like any common subject.] See Deed 182.

Letter of William Downyll, burgess of 'Villa o payn' [Paynes-town], stating that he has placed James Troy in full seisin of an half-acre of land situated in the field called 'le Gortnusk,' in length from Richard Holyng's land and that of William Whytt, and in width from the same Richard's land and that formerly John Bared's.

Robert Weston, son of William Weston, "flochier," gives and grants to William his father a messuage in the town of Kilkenny and nineteen acres of land in Bodcolane, which in length is from the highway leading to St. Patrick's gate to the orchard of John Archer, and in width between John Wale's land on one side and that of St. Mary's on the other. The nineteen acres are in length between the land of Patrick Sleger and 'lez ysvay' and in width between the said Patrick's land and the Bishop's land. Letters patent of John, Earl of Ormond, appointing Edmund fitz Richard le Botiller his deputy and principal governor for his lands in Ireland.

“ To all and singular faithful Christian men, especially our kinsmen, friends and servants to whose notice these presents shall come, John le Botiller, Earl of Ormond, and Lord of the Liberty of Tipperary, greeting. Know that we have appointed and ordained our dear cousin Edmund son of Richard le Botiller our deputy and principal governor of all our lordship and lands, manors, properties (prediorum), and tenements in the said county and elsewhere in Ireland. Giving and granting him all our power and authority in all these lordships, etc., as belonging to us, according to the form which he had from James, our father. To have and to hold the said governance in our absence as long as it shall please us. We will also that all our kinsmen and friends, retainers (familiares) and servants (servientes) shall be obedient and intentend to the above Edmund in our absence as they would be to us. And if any controversy, which God forbid, arise between our kinsmen we will and as far as in us lies, command under pain of our indignation that they submit themselves and the points of controversy to the judgment, arbitration and ordinance of the Archbishop of Cashel and the Bishop of Ossory, to the extinction of all malice between them according to the discretion of the same.

In witness whereof we have set our seal to these presents.

Given at Kilkenny on the last day but one of January in the year MCCCCLXIII and in the 40th [sic] year of Henry VI.”

Seal of the Earl.

[This important deed, which to my knowledge has never been printed, puts the deputyship of the Ormond earldom into the hands of Edmund, head of the junior branch of the Butlers, of Polestown. James, fifth Earl of Ormond, and Earl of Wiltshire, fought on the Lancastrian side at Towton, was taken and executed later at Newcastle. In November in the same year, 1461, at the Parliament of Westminster he and his two brothers

John and Thomas were attainted; and in October in the next year an Irish Parliament attainted them also with the junior Butlers. John however landed in Ireland and raised a Lancastrian force but this was defeated by Thomas, Earl of Desmond, at Pilltown (1462). The above deed was made by Earl John on this occasion while he was in Ireland. We note that in it he does not recognise Edward IV as King.

After this attempt of 1462 John spent the rest of his life in England and died in 1477. His brother Thomas succeeded and lived till 1515. The attainders of the Butlers of Polestown were reversed in the Irish Parliament in 1465 and 1468, and that of Earl John himself in July 1475. Edmund fitz (or 'Mac') Richard died June 13, 1464, and his son James took his place as hereditary deputy for the Earl of Ormond in Ireland. It appears from the deed that the fourth Earl who died in 1452, had already appointed Edmund as his deputy in Ireland].

Inspeximus in 1637 of an Act reversing the Attainder of John, Earl of Ormond.

Inspeximus by Charles I of the enrolment of an act of parliament in Dublin held on Friday next before St. Margaret's day in the fifteenth year of Edward IV (July 21, 1475) before William, bishop of Meath, deputy for George, Duke of Clarence, then Lieutenant, and also of the rolls of the Chancery of Ireland for the same year, the tenour of which is as follows.

“ Item, at the prayer of John Ormond, knight, otherwise called John Boteler, brother and heir of James, lately Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond, that whereas, by an act and ordinance made in a parliament held at Dublin on the Friday next before the feast of Saint Luke in the second year of the reign, [October 15, 1462], before Lord Roland fitz Eustace, knight, Lord of Portlester, then deputy for George Duke of Clarence, lieutenant for our lord the King in Ireland, for divers causes more fully set forth in the act, it was ordained that the said Earl of Ormond should be attainted as an enemy of our lord the King and forfeit all his services, lands, rents and tenements with their appurtenances of which he was seized at that time or any other man to his use | and whereas after the establishment of the same act and ordinance it pleased our said sovereign lord the King of his grace to give a general pardon to the said John Ormond for all such causes up to the time when the said attainder was ordained, and further of his favourable and especial grace commanded and received the said John Ormond to attend on his most royal person in his voyage and passage to his realm of France | it is enacted and established by authority of this said parliament that the said act of attainder, enacted as aforesaid as well against the said James, lately Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond, brother of the said John Ormond, as against the said John Ormond otherwise John Bottiller, brother and heir to the said James, and their heirs, be revoked, annulled, and repealed and by force of this present act and ordinance be made void and of none effect in law. And whereas the said John Ormond, as brother and heir of the said James, and the heirs, assigns, and attorneys of the said John, have leave to enter upon and take possession of all the issues, lands, tenements, rents, reversions, suits and advowsons with all their appurtenances in this land of Ireland of which the said James lately Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond was seized ; to have and to hold to the said John and his heirs with the estate, name and dignity according as by right and title of his ancestors, and to receive all the issues, profits, rents and revenues coming yearly from the said lands etc., to the use and profit of the said John his heirs and assigns for ever, without hindrance of our lord the King, his heirs, or his officers and ministers ; any act, ordinance or statute to the contrary in any parliament or parliaments, any gift or gifts, grant or grants, alienation or alienations, to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Provided nevertheless that this act do not extend or be prejudicial to Thomas fitz Moris, Earl of Kildare, in the matter of these or any issues, lands, tenements, rents, reversions, services, or possessions which are his proper inheritance nor of any other his issues, lands, tenements, rents, reversions, services or possessions ; that is to say, the manors of Kildare, Maynoth, le Carten and le Court de Carten, Rathmore, Lucan, Kildroght, Arst, Geysshell, Ofaly, and all other lands, tenements, rents, customs, services, with their appurtenances, which belong to the ancient inheritance of the said Earl of Kildare. Provided also that the said act be not prejudicial to John Cornewalsh, knight, in the matter of any grant made to him by the said James Earl of Ormond, father to the said John Ormond, by whatsoever name the said John Cornwalsh is called in the same grant."

Inspeximus by Charles I of an enrolment of an act of Parliament passed at Dublin on Friday next before St. Luke's day in the second year of Edward IV [October 15, 1462], before Rowland fitzEustace, knight, Lord of Portlester, Deputy of George, Duke of Clarence, Lieutenant of Ireland, enrolled in our Chancery, etc. (This act, after reciting the act of Attainder against Henry, Duke of Somerset, Henry, Duke of Exeter, John, Lord Rosse, James, Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond, John of Ormond and Thomas Esmond son of Richard Botiller, Esmond son of Piers Botiller, and Piers son of James Botiller [see Berry, Statute Rolls of Ireland, Ed. IV, pp. 25-29]. Provided always that this act be not prejudicial to Christopher Plunkett, knight, regarding any grant made to him by James Botiller, Earl of Ormond, of five marks of rent in Thomastown and Betaghstoun which the said James gave to Christopher for the manor of Carton).

'We however have thought fit to exemplify this enrolment at the request of Richard Osbaldeston, attorney-general of our Kingdom of Ireland.

Notarial deed dated March 26, 1462, and made in the dwelling house (in domo habitacionis) of John Kilbery, burgess of Kilkenny, to the effect that in the presence of the notary and other witnesses Thomas Kilbery, brother (germanus) of said John, lying in the bed of sickness, made his last will and testament as follows.

"First, I bequeath my soul to Almighty God and my body to be buried in the house of the Friars Minor of Kilkenny in the chapel before the image of St. Francis. Also I leave to William Kilbery my son all my movable goods now in England. Also to John Kilbery, my brother, all lands and tenements which John White, son and heir of Henry White, had which were formerly entailed to Isabella White and Nicholyn White, daughters of John White son of Henry White, and afterwards to Robert Kilbery my father, and which now by descent belong to me, my heirs and assigns for ever. Also I leave to said John Kilbery, my brother, all the lands and tenements which belonged to William Kilbery and Philip Kilbery, sons and heirs of abovesaid Thomas Kilbery, which were entailed to said Robert, my father, and his heirs. Also know all present and to come that Nicholas Brisebon had two daughters; of whom one had a son called John Lombard of Waterford; the other had a son called Philip Kilbery, which Philip was a steward with Thomas le Botiller, Prior of Kilmainham, and when I was a boy, following said Philip at Waterford, I crossed with him to the house of the said John Lombard, which house belonged to him in virtue of his mother, daughter of said Nicholas Brisebon; and the above Philip as is said, was son of the other daughter of Nicholas, and then the same Philip intimated to me that if John Lombard died without heir of his body then that house with all its lands and tenements which belonged to said Nicholas Brisebon in Waterford, Kilkenny and Rosponste and elsewhere in Ireland ought to belong to himself and his heirs male by law of heritage and if he, Philip, died without heir male of his body then all such lands and tenements ought to remain to Robert Kilbery, my father, and his heirs for ever. And because I am the lawful heir of said Robert Kilbery, therefore I release all my right and claim to all such lands, etc., to John Kilbery, my brother, and bequeath them to him and his heirs with their reversion and appurtenances and all other lands and tenements deriving from my grandfather and also from Robert my father in hereditary right. I leave to the same John Kilbery my brother on condition that they shall not be alienated from our nation (nacione).

Also I leave in England with my special friend Sir David Brenan, rector of Dirrume, certain entails (talias) of said lands and will on condition that such letters of entail shall be delivered to said John Kilbery my brother. Also that John Whitside, Burgess of the said town of Kilkenny, shall be my attorney, to place the said John Kilbery my brother in full and peaceful possession of such lands and tenements. In witness whereof I have set my seal to these presents in the year in which Thomas Schirelok was sovereign and Geoffrey Rowe was reeve of the said town of Kilkenny, there being present Sir Patrick Callan, chaplain, my confessor, Master Thomas Loundres, public notary, John Whiteside, William de la harn, burgess, and John Stakeboll."

NOTE.—The dating of this deed is uncertain. In a parliament held before Thomas, Earl of Desmond, in 1465, royal letters patent are confirmed which grant to our beloved cousin Gerald fitzGerald, esquire, the manors of Turvey, Rush and Balscadan for life. George, Duke of Clarence, who is mentioned in this deed, was then Lieutenant of Ireland. This would seem to be the date of the deed.

Notarial deed publishing a judgment by David, bishop of Ossory, with regard to the marriage of James Butler and Sabina Kavanagh.

David, bishop of Ossory, specially deputed by the Holy see to deal with the case, recites a Papal bull of Paul II on the matter which he has received at his manor of Insnak in Ossory on the 24th day of August in the year 1465 on the part of James Butler and Sabina Kavanagh. The papal bull recites the petition of James Butler and Sabina his wife with regard to the irregular marriage contracted between them and the wars and troubles that had arisen between the two families and their peoples on account of it, and repeats a papal absolution upon the matter given by Pius II, predecessor to Paul II, dated the 13th of the Kalends of August in the 4th year of his pontificate. [July 20, 1462]. This is confirmed by Paul II on the 16th of the Kalends of October in the year 1464. [September 16, 1464].

The Bishop now promulgates the bull with his final judgment on the matter. The latin text in full follows and explains the case.

Compare this deed with number 211 appointing Edmund fitzRichard deputy and governor for the Earl on January 30, 1462. The office is now assigned to Edmund's son James. Edmund himself died in June, 1464. Henry VI is assumed to be King, whereas in fact he had been deposed in March 4, 1461, in the 39th year. Carte (Life of James, Duke of Ormond) does not quote this deed or that of January 1462, but says that on October 12, 1477, (?) John, Earl of Ormond, setting out for the Holy Land appointed James son of Edmund Butler his attorney and deputy in all cases concerning him and his lands and jurisdictions in Ireland].

Inspeimus by Edward IV of letters patent enrolled in the Rolls of the Common Bench of Ireland, for Trinity Term in the 16th year of his reign in these words.

"Edward by the grace of God, etc. We have inspected a certain act or ordinance made in Dublin on Friday next after the feast of St. Margaret last past [July 21, 1475] before William, bishop of Meath, deputy of our dear brother, George, Duke of Clarence, our Lieutenant in Ireland, at the humble request of John Ormond, knight, otherwise called John Boteler, brother and heir of James, late Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond, and remaining on record in the rolls of our Chancery of Ireland in these words." (The act that follows is in French. See Statutes of Ireland, Edward IV, pp. 25-29. This says that, whereas by acts of a parliament held at Dublin on Friday next before the feast of St. Luke in the 2nd year of Edward IV's reign before Sir Roland fitzEustace, Deputy, it was enacted that the said John Ormond stood attainted as the King's enemy and should forfeit all his lordships, lands, etc., in Ireland, and whereas after the time of that act it pleased the King to pardon the said John Ormond for all manner of causes for which he stood attainted, and had commanded him to wait on his royal person on his passage to his realm of France, it is now enacted by authority of the said parliament that the act of attainder made against the late James, Earl of Ormond and Wiltshire, and John of Ormond his brother, and their heirs be revoked and annulled in law. Also that the said John Ormond and his heirs may enter upon and take possession of all lordships, lands, etc., in Ireland, the which James, Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond, was seised. To have and to hold to him and his heirs as by right and title of his ancestors, provided always that this act be not prejudicial to Thomas fitzMaurice, Earl of Kildare, in any of his possessions of Kildare, Maynooth, Le Carten and the Courte of Carten, Rathmore, Lucan, Kyldroght, Geyshill, Ofaly and all other lands, tenements, etc., which pertain to the ancient inheritance of the earls of Kildare. Provided always that it be not prejudicial to John Cornewalshe, knight, in any grant made by him to James, Earl of Ormond.)

"We therefore at the request of our beloved Walter, abbot of St. Mary's near Dublin, have thought fit to exemplify the tenour of the said enrolment of our letters patent by these presents.

In witness whereof we have had these our letters patent made.

Teste Robert Dovedall, knight, chief justice of our Common Bench at Dublin on the 17th day of June in the 16th year of our reign."

Inspeximus by Edward IV of certain letters patent enrolled in the Exchequer of Ireland for Michaelmas term in the 17th year of his reign in these words.

'Edward, King of England, etc., to all, etc., greeting. Know that we have of our special grace given and granted for ourselves and our heirs to our faithful Thomas Butler, otherwise called Thomas Ormond, brother and heir of John Botiller, otherwise called John Ormond, knight, defunct, who held of us in chief on the day he died, that same Thomas may enter upon and seize to himself and his heirs all castles, lordships, manors, towns, lands, fees, prizes of wines, etc., etc., within the land of Ireland, of which said John or any of his ancestors was seised in his demesne as of fee or in fee-tail and which after his death ought to remain and descend to said Thomas, even as the heir of said John and other of his ancestors ought to retain, have and hold. Together with the issues and profits therefrom from the time of the said Thomas to the present without any inquisition made thereunto by pretext of any of our writs. Unwilling that said Thomas or his heirs in their right of entry and seisin shall be molested or impeded in any way by our justices, escheators or any others our officers, saving always the homage due to us from him and his heirs.

In witness wher of we have had these our letters patent made.

Teste ourself at Westminster on the 15th day of June in the 17th year of our reign [June 15, 1477]. We have also thought fit to exemplify the enrolment of these letters patent at the request of Philip Bermingham, esquire.

[The above document may be dated circa 1478. Earl John died in 1477. His attainder was reversed in the Irish parliament of 1475. His brother Thomas, suppliant here, was restored to the Earldom and died in 1515].

Inspeximus by Edward IV of an act of the Irish Parliament annulling the acts of the Earl of Kildare's parliament of June, 1478. [Deed is much frayed].

"Edward by the grace of God, King of England, etc., to all, etc., greeting. We have inspected a certain statute, act or ordinance passed in our parliament held at Trim on Friday next after the feast of All Saints [November 6, 1478] last past before our beloved Henry Grey, Lord Grey, deputy of our beloved son George our Lieutenant of Ireland, and thence adjourned to our town of Drogheda, as also there on Thursday next before the feast of St. Catherine, in these words." [For the statute itself see Donough Bryan : The Great Earl of Kildare, who gives it in full. It is to the effect that, whereas the King, by letters both of privy seal and of signet directed to Gerald, Earl of Kildare, pretending to be Justiciar of Ireland, forbade him to continue in that office or to summon any parliament in that land or to pass any subsidy, toll or tax therein, and also forbade by letters to the mayor of Dublin, etc., that any subjects should pay such subsidy if any were demanded by the said Earl in such parliament, nevertheless the Earl summoned the pretended parliament at Naas in June 1478, in which certain acts were passed and a subsidy granted].

"Upon which, by authority of the present parliament the acts, etc., of the said pretended parliament are declared null and void and penalties imposed upon all who shall keep in their possession the records, etc., of these acts."

"We have also inspected the tenour of a certain provision made in an Act of Resumption in our said parliament at Drogheda [as above] held before the said Deputy [Lord Grey] on the same day in these words: 'Provided at all times that the act of resumption shall not extend, nor be in any manner prejudicial, to Edmund Pieresson otherwise called Edmund fitzPiers Butteler, or by whatsoever other name he be named or called, with regard to a grant made to him of £40 on the fee-farm of Limerick.'

"We therefore have thought fit to exemplify by the tenour of these presents both the said act [of resumption], as well as the tenour of the said provision, at the request of Walter Bray, petitioner for said Edmund.

In witness whereof we have had these our letters patent made.

Teste Robert Preston, knight, lord Gormanston, deputy to the abovesaid Deputy, at Dublin on the 24th day of February in the 18th year of our reign."

Cogley.

February 24, 1479.

[See Statute Rolls, Ireland, Edward IV (pp. 25-29) for a parliament, held on October 15, 1462, under Sir Roland fitzEustace, deputy of George, Duke of Clarence, which passed an act of Attainder against James, Earl of Wiltshire and Ormond, and his brothers, John and Thomas. They had been attainted at Westminster on November 4 in the preceding year, 1461. The Irish parliament proceeded to attain them also with other Butlers and their adherents and to declare forfeited to the King all their lordships and lands.

In the Irish parliament of 7-8 Edward IV, beginning on December 11, 1467, and continuing with various intermissions until November 3, 1468, the attainder of James son of Edmund Butler was reversed (ibid. p. 487). The published Statute Rolls of Edward IV cease however in 1472. The attainders of James, Earl of Ormond, and his brothers, John and Thomas, were finally reversed in the Irish parliament of 1475. The above documents reciting the reversal, which we give in full are therefore interesting as being yet unpublished].

Sentence given by the Bishop of Ferns.

[Latin original abbreviated].

“ John, by the grace of God and the Apostolic see bishop of Ferns, greeting, etc. Know that there appeared before us sitting in judgment William son of David Sutton, stating that he had married Anastasia daughter of Meiler Walche contrary to law, and asked that Anastasia should be cited to hear petition in the same case. We therefore had Anastasia summoned in person on a certain day and place. Upon which day appearing before us, William proffered his petition against the said Anastasia, which being read we had a copy handed to Anastasia, the tenour of which is as follows :

‘ In the name of God, amen. Before you, reverend father in Christ, and John, bishop of Ferns, etc., William son of David Sutton declares against the said Anastasia, his pretended wife in fact though not in law, that he married a certain Joan Walche publicly in the face of the church before the contract made and begun between himself and Anastasia. Wherefore he seeks to have the contract so made declared null and void and said marriage between himself and Joan Walsch approved and restored. This petition having been read, we ordered a copy of it to be handed to Anastasia, and fixed a day for the hearing of the cause and the summons of witnesses. On which day the said William appeared, but Anastasia was contumaciously absent. Wherefore we declared her contumacious and under pain of contumacy and fixed a further day for the case. On which day we received and carefully examined witnesses produced by William for the support of his cause, whose names and depositions follow.

' Thomas Sutton first witness, of sixty years of age and more, being questioned on the point of the first marriage, says that it contains the truth. Asked how he knows, he says that he was present and saw and heard when abovesaid William Sutton contracted matrimony with Joan Walche in the church of St. Finnbar of the Island before many people. As to the time, he says that it was twenty-four years ago. Asked further as to the day, he says that it was Friday next after the feast of St. Michael in the same year.

Eugene ' Cordulator,' second witness, questioned on the point of the first marriage, says that he heard that the said William married Joan in the said church. As to the time he says that it was twenty years ago and more.

Laurence Serlog, third witness, also testifies that he was present at the marriage to Joan on Friday thirty years ago as he thinks, five years before any contract was celebrated in the face of the church between William and Anastasia.

Philip Ohikey, fourth witness, examined, etc., agrees with the first witness in all his statements.'

Consequently we published the statements of the same witnesses as by law they should be published and assigned a day and place for objections to the evidence and persons of the witnesses, and ordered a copy of the depositions to be handed to those seeking (petentibus) it. On which day and place William appeared (but Anastasia remained absent) and claimed that there was nothing canonical against the evidence and persons of the witnesses on which he founded his full intention and asked that the case might be concluded. We then fixed a further day for Anastasia to show objection, or to have her malice proved. At which term said William appeared, but Anastasia remained absent. Finally we made William swear on the gospels to tell us the truth as regards the point on which the witnesses were examined ; and he took solemn oath that all the contents of the first points were and are true. Whereupon we fixed a day and place again for the conclusion of the matter. On which day William appeared, but Anastasia remained absent. Wherefore we proclaimed her contumacious and in pain of contumacy, and fixed another day for giving judgment. On which day William appeared, but Anastasia remaining absent, we declared her contumacious, etc., and declared that she should be summoned in the form following :

‘ In the name of God, amen. Having heard, seen and read the merits and circumstances of the matrimonial case pending before John, bishop of Ferns, between William Sutton, the plaintiff (partem actricem), and Anastasia Walche, etc., the accused, his pretended wife, and because by worthy witnesses and lawful documents to which there was no canonical objection we found that the said William had fully proved his intentions, namely that he had lawfully married Joan Walche formerly his lawful wife, now dead, prior to a certain marriage union made and solemnised in the face of the church between William and Anastasia—therefore in the name of Christ and by the advice of experts in law giving us counsel, we affirm, validate and restore the marriage between William and Joan as lawfully contracted. And further invalidate, withdraw and declare null and void the contract made between William and Anastasia while said Joan was still alive. And do order that the dower and marriage settlement made between William and Anastasia on account of their nuptuals shall be restored on one side and the other by this definitive sentence, which for the sake of justice we have made and promulgated in these writings : there being present Sir Walter Foller, archdeacon of Ferns, Philip Prendergast, precentor of Ferns, and many other witnesses specially summoned, together with a public notary, master William Laffan, scribe in the said courts, who however died before these acts were drawn up in public form, whose place the said witnesses may be held to fill.

In witness whereof we have affixed our greater seal.

Given on the 22nd day of June in the year 1479, in the parish church of Fethard.’

And we Sir Philip Prendergast, chaplain of the said Lord bishop, and Laurence Byrdsall, (bedellus), were present as witnesses at all and singular the above, the public notary having died. In witness whereof we have alternatively set our seals to these presents on the said day, month and year."

June 22, 1479.

Seal of the bishop of Ferns and two others.

Letters patent of Edward IV (in English: badly frayed), relative to the Earl of Ormond's right of prise wines.

"Edward, King of England, etc., to the mayor, bailiffs and commonalty of our city of Limerick, greeting. Whereas our right trusty and well-beloved Thomas, Earl of Ormond, brother and heir of John Ormond, late Earl of Ormond, has made supplication that howbeit said John by our grace by the authority of parliament held in our land of Ireland was restored to all seignories manors, lands, tenements, prise of wines, etc., of which James, late Earl of Ormond and Wiltshire, was seised/to have and to hold to the said John, and his heirs, with the estate, name and dignity according as by right and title of their ancestors came into possession of the said James, by force of which he was seised thereof and afterwards died without issue of his body/coming after whose decease the said Thomas, Earl of Ormond, as brother and heir to John, by our licence under our Great seal entered upon and took possession of all the said seignories, etc., and was so seised in his demesne thereof as in fee, yet now by reason of an Act of Resumption made in a parliament held in Ireland before the Earl of Kildare, deputy Lieutenant unto our dear son Richard, Duke of York, he is put out of possession of said seignories, etc., and put into the former estate of Attainder to his utter disinherison and against all reason, law and conscience and to our displeasure. We therefore in consideration of the premisses have straightly charged the said deputy Lieutenant, to make such good and effectual provision, act and ordinance as by the of the said Thomas Earl of Ormond's council shall be conceived and the continuance of his inheritance entered in the rolls of the said parliament. So that he and his heirs may occupy and enjoy all the said seignories according to his right and inheritance and in as ample a manner as any of his ancestors, the act of said parliament or any act or ordinance to the contrary made notwithstanding. And if the said parliament be dissolved and finished so that this command can take no effect, we have straightly charged the said deputy Lieutenant to suffer said Thomas and his heirs to have and enjoy the prise wines and other profits of the same to his own use and to let them to farm at his pleasure, without impediment of the said deputy Lieutenant or any other, and that said Act of Resumption, as made before him touching the said John, Earl of Ormond, be repealed and utterly annulled, and said act of restitution made for said John, Earl of Ormond, be ratified and confirmed without impediment by the deputy Lieutenant or any other that now has occupancy of the said Earl's inheritance, but they shall suffer the said Thomas to enter and do his pleasure in the same. Wherefore we charge you and any of you to surcease from execution of the above act of resumption made to the prejudice of said Thomas, and to suffer him and his heirs to have all said seignories within the said city of Limerick and to receive all issues and profits of the same to his own use as have been due since the above act of restitution and to let him and his heirs assign their officers therein without impediment of you or any of you or others in your name. Any colour or point of your franchise or said act of resumption or any other act, ordinance, provision or restraint had or made to the contrary notwithstanding. And that you nor none of you fail herein in any part as you would avoid our greatest displeasure.

These letters to be sufficient warrant and discharge against us and all our officers and ministers.

Given under our privy seal at the Tower of London on the 6th day of April in the 21st year of our reign."

[For this Act of Resumption see Bryan: The Great Earl of Kildare, pp. 38, 39, 47-49.

Lord Grey, sent over as Deputy by Edward IV, found himself opposed by Gerald, Earl of Kildare, who had been elected Justiciar by the Irish Council. He held a parliament at Trim in November 1478 which continued till November the next year, and which among other acts passed one of Resumption of all the King's castles, lands, etc., wardships, fees, wages, licenses of absence, etc., going back to Henry VI. Finally Grey was superseded and the King created the Earl of Kildare deputy. Further he quashed the act of Resumption but directed Kildare to pass a new one. This was enacted in a parliament held from May to July 1480; it covers the whole period since the beginning of Henry VI's reign but includes a sweeping list of exemptions. Kildare was also empowered to make provisos and exceptions at his pleasure. The Earl of Ormond became alarmed and addressed a petition to the King which Bryan quotes in full (p. 49). This is in the London Public Record Office; Bryan dates it as soon after August 12, 1480. It is not the same document as the supplication we give above, number 248].

Public instrument made on the 9th day of July in the year 1482 in the parish church of St. John the Baptist of Cashel, to the effect that there appeared in the presence of the notary and witnesses below-named, Walter son of William Hakede, layman of Cashel diocese, to prove that if Walter, son of the late Henry de Burgo formerly burgess of Cashel, made or had made to Richard, his bastard son, certain charters, he was compelled thereto by violence of Lord James, Earl of Ormond; and he now requested the public notary to receive and examine witnesses for a perpetual memory of the matter. (The evidence of witnesses then follows).

John Rowe, first witness, examined, etc., says that he saw the above Walter de Burgo taken in the town of Cashel by John Broun, then sheriff of the Cross of county Tipperary and the reeve of Cashel, by command of the said Earl and taken by them under arrest to Kyllenayl to the same Earl; also he heard from the same Walter afterwards as well as by common fame that Walter was not set at liberty until he was compelled to give Edmund fitz Pers Boteller, James Howlyng, James Britton and other pledges to the same Earl for making at the will of the same Earl charters with regard to certain lands for Richard his son, and so witness believes upon his soul that Walter was compelled to make charters to the said Richard's son by such coercion.

Rosina Bekede, second witness, says she was formerly an apprentice (apprenticia) to John Broun, sheriff aforesaid, and saw him and the reeve of Cashel, by command of Earl James, arresting and leading Walter de Burgo to Killenayll, etc., and she heard from them after their return that Walter would have been committed to prison at Carrick castle unless he would undertake to the Earl that he would make such charters to Richard his bastard son, and so she heard and believes by common voice, etc.

Richard, son of Adam Walch, burgess of Cashel, third witness, says that he was reeve of Cashel formerly and that the lord Earl sent for him to come to him on a certain day at Fethard. And when he came and humbly saluted the Earl the latter declared that in virtue of his office he should take said Walter at his instance to Killenayl on the following day. And when witness said that he could not by his office, and ought not, to take or arrest any burges of Cashel except only for rents in the same, then the Earl ordered John Broun, sheriff, then present as also the witness, to lead Walter prisoner on the day after to Kyllenayl. And when himself and John Broun, sheriff, came with Walter to the Earl's prison in the castle of the town of Killenayl, the same Walter, seized with great terror, humbly asked his lordship that if he wished to mutilate him in foot, hand or any other member or intended in any other way to wreak his will on him to do it instantly and let him go for good. Then the Earl replied that he did not intend this, but that he wanted him taken to the prison of Carrick castle and that he ought to lie there. Then the Prior of Athassel who was present begged the Earl not to proceed so rigorously against Walter and that he should have from him whatsoever he wished at his pleasure. The Earl then had Walter brought to his room and he was there with the Earl and others in council for a long space and whatever was finally agreed between them Walter was sent home in peace. Asked what took place in that council, the above Richard said that he heard from Walter himself after his return to Cashel that the Earl sent him home on this condition, namely, that he must make charters to Richard his bastard son for his lands.

Walter Wodelok, fourth witness, says he saw said Walter de Burgo led by the above John Broun and the reeve at the command of the Earl to Clonmel to the same Earl and heard that it was so that he should make charters to his son Richard, and that he was so taken and persecuted by the Earl. He also states that he heard afterwards that Walter was taken and led at the Earl's instance to Kyllenayll and there by great threats was compelled to make charters, etc., for his son Richard. (The evidence of the fifth and sixth witnesses curiously is missing).

Margaret Iniscahayn, seventh witness, says that she saw the said Walter taken by John Broun and the reeve and that they led him to the Earl, and that the Earl also despoiled him of various goods, and that Walter had to make charters, etc., as above.

Anastasia Iny Byrayn, eighth witness, widow of Donald O

Rosina Bekede secunda testis similiter recepta et examinata requisita de articulo dicit quod ipsa fuit olim apprenticia bone memorie Johannis Broun vice-comitis supradicti et vidit ipsum Johannem et prepositum ville de Cassell ex iussu domini Jacobi comitis Ormonie arestando et capiendo ipsum Walterum de Burgo et ipsum ducendo versus Kylnayll ad ipsum dominum Comitem, et audivit ab eis post reversionem ipsorum quod Walterus esset traditus carceri castri de Carryg nisi sufficienter caveret ipsi domino Comiti quod faceret taliam Ricardo filio suo antedicto super quibusdam terris suis, et audivit quod ad hoc solummodo erat captus ipse Walterus, et sic ipsa credit et audivit communi voce et reputatione; non deponit prece nec precio odio nec amore, etc.

Ricardus filius Ade Wach burgensis ville Cassell tercius testis receptus et examinatus, requisitus super articulo dicit quod ipse fuit prepositus dicte ville de Cassell quondam et dictus dominus Comes misit ad eum quod deberet venire ad ipsum certo die ad villam Ffyardie et cum venit et salutavit humiliter ipsi domino Comiti mandavit sibi dominus comes quod intuitu officii sui deberet ipsum Walterum predictum capere ad instanciam eius ad Kylnayll sequenti die sic captum ducere, et cum ipse testis tunc dixit quod ex suo officio non potuit nec debuit aliquem burgensem capere nec arestare nisi solum pro redditibus domini Cassellensis dictus Comes tunc mandavit Johanni Broun vice-comiti supradicto adtunc presenti ac eciam ipsi testi quatenus eundem Walterum captum sibi ad Kylnayll ducerent crastino die, quod sic fecerunt. Deponit eciam interrogatus quod cum ipse ac dictus Johannes vicecomes cum ipso Waltero sic venerunt ad presenciam ipsius domini comitis in castro ville de Kynayll idem Walterus maximo timore perterritus rogavit humiliter et devote dominacionem ipsius domini comitis ut si vellet ipsum pede manu aut aliquo alio membro mutilare sive quodcumque intendebat sibi in finali proposito facere id incontinente faceret et ipsum ulterius ab eo dimitteret, et dominus Comes tunc respondebat quod hoc non affectavit, sed quod ipsum voluit duci ad carcerem castri de Carryg et quod ibi deberet iacere. Tunc dominus Prior de Athassell qui erat presens protunc, hoc audiens, supplicavit attente ipsi domino Comiti quod ita rigorose contra ipsum Walterum non procederet et quod haberet ab eo quodcumque vellet ad libitum sue voluntatis. Comes vero hoc audito fecit ipsum Walterum statim duci ad cameram suam et ibi fuit cum ipso domino Comite et aliis quibusdam in concilio privato per longum spacium et qualitercumque erat inter eos tunc conventum ipse Walterus fuit in pace dimissus ad domum suam. Requisitus numquid scit quid in illo concilio impositum aut iniunctum fuit ipsi Waltero, dicit quod audivit ab ipso Waltero postquam reversi fuerunt ad Cassellum quod sub ista condicione dimisit eum dominus Comes, videlicet quod deberet facere cartas sive sitalia (sic) Ricardo filio suo bastardo super suis terris et quod ad hoc uno proposito erat captus et hoc ideo ut dominium sive terre ipse non venissent ex parte Katerine filie eiusdem Walteri ad aliquos alios extraneos heredes aut naciones. Requisitus de fama, deponit quod de hoc erat publica fama ac communis vox et reputacio hominum protunc in villa de Cassell, non deponit prece nec precio etc.

Waltero Wodlok quartus testis receptus iuratus et in forma iuris diligenter examinatus interrogatus de veritate articuli deponit quod vidit ipsum Walterum de Burgo captum per antedictos Johannem Broun et prepositum iussu domini Comitis predicti et sic sub aresto domini Comitis ductum ad Clo[n]meliam ad ipsum Comitem, et audivit quod ad hoc ut faceret cartas ipsi Ricardo filio suo super suis terris fuit sic captus et multipliciter per ipsum dominum Comitem vexatus. Deponit eciam quod audivit postmodum quod idem Walterus erat captus per eosdem et deductus ad instanciam domini Comitis ad Kynayll et ibi per maximas minas et terrores formidabiles ipsius domini Comitis coactus fuit facere cartas eidem Ricardo super terris illis et sic communi voce audit et ita credit, non deponit etc.

Margareta Iniscahayn septima testis recepta iurata et similiter examinata, interrogata, deponit quod vidit ipsum Walterum captum per antedictos Johannes Broun et prepositum et quod adduxerunt ipsum ad Comitem. Et uxor ipsius nesciens qua de causa fuerat captus et timens quod esset per ipsum dominum Comitem omnibus suis bonis spoliata portavit macretas [sic] frumentum et alia plura de bonis suis ad domum ipsius testis custodienda, et audivit postea ab ipso Waltero et aliis quod oportebat ipsum Walterum conficere cartas ipsi Ricardo huiusmodi suo filio antequam dominus Comes ipsum ab eo dimisit et ita communiter audivit. Non deponit prece nec precio etc.

Anastasia Inybyrayn octava testis que fuit uxor Donaldi i Slatera, tunc servientis illius Ricardi Wach prepositi, deponit quod vidit ipsum Walterum captum prout alii deponunt, et interrogata de auditu fama communi voce et credulitate, concordat in omnibus et per omnia cum precontestibus. Non deponit prece nec precio etc.

Quibus quidem testibus sic receptis et examinatis supradictus Walterus filius Willelmi, ne memorie hominum et vite labilitate pensata veritas occultari probacionis copiam sibi in posterum deficere contingeret, me notarium publicum infrascriptum debita cum instancia rogavit et requisivit quatenus dicta et attestaciones predictorum testium fideliter conscriberem ac super eis pro competenti salario publicum conficerem instrumentum. Presentibus domino Adam O Hyfernayn, canonico Cassellensi ac notario publico, Willelmo Grygoyre burgensi ville de Cassell, Willelmo O Hartagayn aquebaiulo ac Willelmo O Falone mercatore eiusdem ville, et aliis pluribus testibus ad premissa vocatis specialiter et rogatis."

Notarial deed to the effect that in the year 1487 on the 21st day of June in the church of the Friars Preachers of Waterford in the presence of the notary and witnesses subscribed there appeared Richard Botiller son of Peter Botiller, who/in a cause of controversy moved between him and Peter son of James Botiller about the town of Carrickmagriffin, with the consent of James Rice and James Sherloke, judges and amicable arbiters (compositorum) between them chosen by both parties/produced the witnesses named below to be examined on certain points (articulos), the tenour of which follows.

Article one is that John, Earl of Ormond, gave and granted Carrickmagriffin in county Tipperary to Peter son of James Botiller and that Peter peacefully possessed the same by virtue of this grant for many years and so did his son Thomas after him, by his consent and that of Edmund son of Richard Botiller and James Botiller, until the aforesaid James 'vi et armis' despoiled Thomas of the said town against the form of the grant.

The second article is that at the time of the above grant made by Earl John to the said Peter the same Earl granted to Peter that if he, the Earl, wished to have and enjoy the said town first Peter ought to repay all expenses which he had incurred with regard to the defence of the same.

Matthew macTeige son of Donatus fyn, John son of Dermot O'Kynnedey, Eugene O'Donyll, William de Burgo, John Hacked son of Redmund, jurors sworn on oath, say that the first article contains the truth, for they were present at the making of the grant.

George Comyn, Thomas Comyn and Holifer Comyn, jurors, etc., agree with the foregoing and also as to the truth of the second article.

John Poer, lord of Kylmydan, Morina Inybreyn, his wife, William Mawdewill, Patrick White, Nicholas son of Richard Poer and John Duffe Poer, jurors sworn, all testify to the above and the spoiling by James Butler.

Tatheus O'Maddian testifies that when great war arose between James and Thomas regarding the said town both parties with equal power (manu equali) gave it to him, Tatheus, and he gave it to Eugene MacCrahe and he had it for a year and so the said war ceased.

Upon all which the aforesaid Richard requested the notary to make a public instrument. Present at the making of it were Maurice O'Ronan, canon of Lismore, Cornelius O'Ronan, Eugene MacCrahe and others.

Sign and declaration of the notary, Thomas Vale, clerk of Waterford diocese.

NOTE.—This curious and puzzling document cannot be of the reign of Edward IV, because in the first year of his reign the Earl of Kildare was not a Gerald. It cannot be of the reign of Edward VI, because before the first year of his reign Sir Piers Butler (Peter Butler, son of James Butler) was dead. There is moreover adequate reason to show that it cannot belong to the reign of Edward V. In the first place the document is dated August 13, and Edward V’s brief reign lasted only from April 9 to June 22, 1483; in the second place it describes the Earl of Kildare as Lieutenant, an honour which he never held under any official

King of England; and in the third place it styles Ireland a kingdom, and Edward, King of England, France and Ireland, a style which was not adopted by any monarch prior to Henry VIII; for up to that time the Kings of England were merely Lords of Ireland. The only conclusion left is that the document belongs to the "reign" of Lambert Simnel whom the Great Earl had crowned as King Edward, on May 24, 1487. The date of the document (August 13, 1487) seems at first sight to upset this conclusion, for the battle of Stoke, at which Simnel was captured, was fought on June 16, 1487. But the date is no real objection to its authenticity as a Simnel relic, for as late as October 20, 1487, two months after the suggested date of the document, Henry VII, writing to the citizens of Waterford, records that "the said Earl with the supportation of the inhabitants of our said city of Dublin, and others there, . . . will not yet know their seditious opinions, but unto this day uphold and maintain the same."

Affixed to the document is a seal which appears to be the Great Seal of England, bearing the effigy of a child king. Possibly this was an authentic seal of Edward V, which had come into the possession of the Yorkist party in Ireland.

NOTE.—This very interesting document is given in full as a complete specimen of the letters of enfranchisement into English “law and liberty” from time to time granted by the Dublin government. Henry VII, after his accession to the throne of England, though he took no general steps to admit the native Irish to the full benefits and duties of English law as enjoyed by the Anglo-Irish, authorised his viceroys to admit all who sought this privilege. In 1488 two Munster chiefs, Florence MacCarthy and Cormac MacTaig, were by letters patent “emancipated from Irish servitude” and given the laws and privileges of Englishmen. (Materials for the reign of Henry VII, vol. II, pp. 309, 313, 496.) We are fortunate in having here the deed, or a contemporary copy of it, by which the King grants letters of English law and liberty to Cormac MacTaig (MacCarthy). For another enfranchisement of English law and liberty see Deed 306 relating to William Casshene. A treaty between Sir Piers Butler and Cormac Oge son of Cormac son of Taig MacCarthy of Muskerry will be found under the speculative date 1505.

“Henry by the grace of God, etc., to all, etc., greeting. Know that We, of our especial grace and by the advice of our beloved kinsman Gerald, Earl of Kildare, Deputy for our dear uncle Jasper, Duke of Bedford, and Earl of Pembroke and our Lieutenant in Ireland, have granted to Peter Butler, gentleman, of Potterath, the office of sheriff of our county of Kilkenny to have and to hold, to occupy and to exercise, in his own person or by a sufficient deputy for whom he will be ready to answer when it pleases us, taking in the said office his fee, wages and reward due and accustomed of old, so that he answer to us for all the debts and ameracements due to us from the said county, any statute, etc., to the contrary notwithstanding. In witness whereof we have caused to be made these our letters patent.

Notarial deed declaring that "in the year of our Lord 1489 by the computation of the churches of England and Ireland, in the seventh indiction of the 5th year of the pontificate of Innocent VIII, in the parish church of St. Mary of Callan in the diocese of Ossory on the fourth day of August, in the presence of me, public notary, and the following witnesses specially called for the purpose, Thomas Fannyng, lord of Mohobbir, chief of his nation, exhibited certain letters patent of the most reverend lord and father in Christ John, archbishop of Cashel, of happy memory, signed with the seal and subscription of William Brown, notary, scribe of the court of the same archbishop, containing the process in a cause of matrimony and legitimacy between the said Thomas, plaintiff (actorem), and William Fannyng defendant (reum), and the sentence pronounced by the same archbishop in the said case. These he handed to be read to the aforesaid notary, and because he could not bring these letters to the place where sentence must be given, without danger of losing them, on account of the perils of the road and various other unpleasant things that might happen to him, he asked that the final sentence should be transcribed and exemplified, and from the copy one or more public instruments should be made. At whose request we have thought fit to exemplify the said final sentence as follows.

'In dei nomine amen. We have seen, computed, and understood the rights of a case of birth and legitimacy between Thomas Fannyng the plaintiff (actorem) and William Fannyng the defendant (reum) tried before us in our diocese of Cashel, each of whom claimed to be the legitimate son of Nicholas Fannyng, once captain of his nation, which still remains open and undecided. And because the said Thomas proved himself to have been born in wedlock publicly contracted before the church by credible witnesses of full age and because the said William did not prove his case sufficiently: therefore we, John by the grace of God Archbishop of Cashel, in the parish church of Mocayrke in our diocese of Cashel on the 16th day of March in the year of our Lord 1469 [1470 N.S.] sitting in the judgment seat, having before our eyes nothing but God and justice, by this our final sentence delivered by the advice of men learned in the law, do declare that the said William has failed to prove his case and that the said Thomas is the legitimate son of the said Nicholas Fannyng and born in wedlock publicly contracted before the church.'

This sentence was read and delivered the said year month day and place in the third indiction of the sixth year of the pontificate of Paul II, in the presence of Master Tadeus O'Laghayn, Bachelor of both laws, Brother Patrick Cantewel, Prior of the priory of St. Katherine near Waterford, John Cantewel, precentor, and Richard O'Fyan, treasurer of the church of Cashel, and many other witnesses both clerks and laymen called for the purpose. And therefore, because on diligently inspecting and scrutinizing the said copy and comparing it with the sentence contained in the said original letters we have found that it disagrees with it in nothing but agrees with it in every syllable, we have caused to be made this public instrument at the request of the said Thomas, so that complete faith may be placed in the said copy in all transactions.

Done and recited the aforesaid year, indiction, month, day and place, in the presence of William of Vico Salis, priest, Oliver Fannyng, Dermot O'Corumyke and William O'Murrayn, witnesses specially summoned for the purpose.

Sign and declaration of the notary, Nicholas White of the city of Cashel.

Of these, one messuage lies in length from the King's way of the same town on the south to the common wall on the north side, and in breadth it lies between the lands and messuage of Thomas Neell on the east and west sides. The other messuage lies in length from the King's way which leads to the bridge of the said town on the east to the common wall on the west, and in breadth it lies between Richard Wale's land on the north and the land formerly Robert Walsche's on the south. Of the two gardens, one in length lies on the west side of the town from the King's street (a vico regali) which goes to "le Spedell" on the north side as far as the water of the Suir on the south side; and in breadth lies between Richard Wale's land on the east and west. The other garden lies outside the western gate of the town and one end (caput) of it stretches from the said King's street which goes towards "le Spedell" on the south side to the land of the heirs of Henry Wale's son on the north side. The other end stretches from the land of the said heirs on the west to the King's street on the east.

Notarial deed to the effect that on the 6th day of May 1508 at Clonmel in the presence of the notary, appeared Walter son of Edmund Haket and Katherine Neell his wife and asked for witnesses to be examined as to whether Maurice Neell, father of said Katherine, after the death of his wife Margaret Flymyn, mother of said Katherine, gave certain small gardens (ortoli) in Clonmel, together with the charters for the same to Walter and Katherine aforesaid, who claim to be on Maurice's death coparteners in the same. They allege that Margaret Flymyn, in her last disposition, with the free assent of her husband Maurice, and in the presence of witnesses, left the said gardens to Walter and Katherine aforesaid. Witnesses are produced viz. Margaret Ketynth, Joan Flymyn, John Hanlan, John Stacboll, Alice Gerald, Mary Wythe, who all testify that Maurice left the gardens to Walter and Katherine, and that they had no other child but Katherine. Letters patent of Edmund Comerford, dean of Ossory, to the effect that, "on the 13th day of August in the year 1491 in the 7th year of our lord Pope Innocent VIII, in the cathedral church of Kilkenny before us sitting in judgment, Sir Raymond Stoke, chaplain, proctor of Philip Purcell, layman, gentleman, dwelling in the diocese of Ossory asked to have a certain witness, namely Sir John Archedekyn, chaplain, examined by us in due form on this point, namely as to who presented him formerly to the rectory of Kulcrahyn of which he formerly was rector and how he knew about the presentation of the rectory. Examined by us, the said witness swears that he was presented to the said rectory by Richard Purcell and was admitted by the ordinary of the place on the strength of the same presentation with no one objecting. He says also that he saw before his time three rectors presented, namely Sir Malachy O'Brenan, John O'Brenan and Walter Wyle who were presented by the said Richard Purcell and admitted as above. Deeds relating to the rights of the Baron of Knockgraffon.

1) Proceedings (in latin) of the court of the Barony of Knockgraffon held on the 12th day of November in the 7th year of Henry VII, before the following.

William Keating of Dearethan (?)
 Peter Comyn of Thollachmayn
 William Flemyng of Lokeanth
 Robert Wodlok of the same town
 James Boyton lord of Hasmayne
 John Travers of Miltune
 John Geralt of Geraltystone

 Theobald Butler of Nywtown
 Richard Butler of Hosseystowne

William Niger of Gerraltystone
 Thomas Gerault of the same
 John Wodelok, lord of Chamerleystown.

Thomas Boteler, baron of Knockgraffon, makes complaint against the burgesses of Knockgraffon because they have rebelled against the homage due to him and refused the payment of their chief rent ; on which he seeks the judgment of the jury. They say that he is one of the burgesses of the town of Knockgraffon, that the burgesses are bound to give restitution in the lord's court, that he can distrain them for chief rents, and that they have common of pasture between them. (The deed here ends with words which because of the state of the skin are valueless).

November 12, 1491.

2) Letters patent of Philip Roche, judge, concerning a case of distraint between Thomas fitzRichard Butler, Baron of Knockgraffon, and Maurice son of David (? fitzGerald) of Geraldstown with regard to a hawk (nisus) found by the said Maurice in his lordship of Geraldstown. The baron claimed this hawk as an escheat or "stray," but Maurice said that the escheats or "strays" of Geraldstown were not due to the baron ; whereupon the baron as chief lord of Geraldstown produced ancient rolls and rentals of the court or barony of Knockgraffon, in which it is shown that the lord of Geraldstown is one of the suitors of the court of Knockgraffon and holds that townland by service of 6s. 8d. per annum ; also the said Thomas, baron of Knockgraffon, says that his father who was baron before him received the escheats of Geraldstown, and so demanded a jury.

The jury is summoned. (See the names below). They return by their evidence, especially that of William Flemyng, that the value of strays is divided between the lord and the tenant of Geraldstown. (The latin of this interesting document follows, but unfortunately owing to the state of the skin the sense is not altogether clear).

[For the James Butler to whom this grant was made see Bryan: The Great Earl of Kildare. He was an illegitimate son of John, 6th Earl of Ormond (d. 1477, unmarried), by Raynalda O'Brien. He arrived in Ireland in December 1491, with the favour of Henry VII and of Earl Thomas, his uncle, who appointed him deputy for his lands in Ireland. This brought him into conflict with Sir Peter Butler, son of James, who considered he had an hereditary right to Deputyship for the absentee Earl. After playing a vigorous and ambitious part in Irish politics, Sir James was finally slain by Sir Peter on July 17, 1497. He is called in the annals Dubh ("Black"), just as Peter or Piers is called Ruadh ("Red"). See Deed 292 for his appointment as Constable of Limerick.

The Calendar of Patent Rolls, 1485-1494, p. 368, under date December 12, 1491 records a "grant to the King's servant, James Ormond, of all castles, lordships, manors, lands and rents in the counties of Meath and Kilkenny, and in the Liberty of Tipperary in the land of Ireland, being parcel of the lands of the Earl of March for two years; and after that during pleasure."]

Royal pardon to Sir Piers Butler.

This pardon, granted at the request of the Earl of Kildare, Lord Deputy, is sweepingly inclusive of all the crimes against the King and the King's peace which might be brought against a subject of the Crown in Ireland. Particularly interesting are the references to the giving or selling of horses, arms, victuals, salt, steel and English cloth to "Irish enemies and English rebels," as well as "alterage and gossipred (compaternitates)" with the Irish enemy, as penalised by the Statutes of Kilkenny, and also the taking of "coign and livery" from the earth-tillers, taking the field against private enemies or the government with banners displayed, etc., and all such "abominable customs" as are condemned in the statutes 'of Poynings' parliament.

The date of the pardon is February 28, 1498.

The latin text is as follows.

And whereas the King does not wish the said Earl to be prejudiced, damaged, or hurt by reason of the act, it is ordained, enacted and established by Parliament that the same act of resumption and every other act or acts made in the said parliament, as far as they be prejudicial or hurtful or may concern the said Thomas, Earl of Ormond, and his heirs or any feoffee or feoffees to his use or their heirs, be revoked, repealed and deemed void and of no effect in law. And that the said Thomas, Earl of Ormond, and his heirs by the same authority be enabled and restored to his name, dignity and estate, honours, pre-eminence that he had, or was of, on the first days of the said parliament. And that it be lawful to the said Thomas Earl of Ormond and to his heirs, and to all his and their feoffees, etc., and to every of them or their heirs to enter into all honours and exemptions and all other such profits, etc., as were resumed, taken or seised or to be seised into the hands or possession of our said sovereign lord by the said act of resumption or any other act or acts made in the said parliament or since or which ought to have come into the hands of the King in any way by force or reason of the act of resumption or any such act or acts, etc., as well upon the possession of the King as of any other person or persons. And they shall have, hold, possess and enjoy in like manner the form, state and condition they or any of them might have had if the said act of resumption or any other act or acts made since had not been made or any other act or acts, etc., without suit thereof, or any parcel of the same, out of the King's hands by livery or otherwise. And also it is ordained, etc., by the said authority that all patents, confirmations and grants /made to any person or persons by the King or his Deputy or Deputies in the land of Ireland, after the resumption and other the premisses or any parcel of them /be utterly void, etc. And also the said Earl of Ormond and his heirs, may by themselves or their officers take and receive all manner of issues and profits due out of the said honours, castles, fees, prise wines, etc., etc., and all other the premisses from the time of the said resumption, and so from henceforth without any impediment, etc., by the said

Deputy or any other Deputy for the time being, or any other officer or officers within the said land of Ireland. Provided always that the two parts of all the revenues, issues and profits of the premisses /because of the absence of the said Earl of Ormond or his heirs out of the said land of Ireland /be and remain to the use of our said sovereign for the defence of the said land, according to the old ordinance, uses and customs of the same. And also the said Earl and his heirs may at their own pleasure make their own stewards, bailiffs, receivers, and all other their officers of and in all the aforesaid honours, castles, garrisons, fortresses and all other the premises within the said land of Ireland, and the same and every part thereof to let to fee-farm to such persons or persons at their pleasure, the same officers finding surety to the Deputy or Treasurers for the time being to content the two parts of all the issues, profits, etc., by reason of the absence of the said Earl of Ormond out of the said land of Ireland as is before rehearsed any act or acts made or to be made in this present parliament or any other parliament notwithstanding. Provided always that this act be not prejudicial or hurtful to the reverend father in God, Walter, Archbishop of Dublin, or his successors for any annuities or yearly rent due unto him as in the right of the Archbishop of Dublin out of the manor of Portrane."

The inspeximus is tested by Gerald, Earl of Kildare, Lord Deputy, at Dublin on the 7th day of October in the 15th year of Henry VII.

Five Deeds tied together, relating to a question of prisage of wines between Waterford and New Ross, dating from 1501 to 1519.

1) Inquisitions taken at Inistioge before Oliver, bishop of Ossory, and Nicholas Everard (lawyer), Justices of the King specially appointed by letters patent, on Thursday next after the feast of St. Luke the Evangelist in the 17th year of Henry VII.

Robert Froyn of Rodestoun, gentleman
 William Bretnagh of Rosbaucon, gentleman
 Thomas fitz Geffroy of Haggard, gentleman
 Fulc de Dun of Grenan, gentleman
 John Poer of Inystiok
 Patrick Gollan of Inystiok
 David Dobbyn of Thomaston
 Nicholas Dobbyn of Inystiok
 Richard Poer of Thomaston
 Nicholas Dobbyn of Dobbyn Wodde, gentleman
 Nicholas White of Thomaston
 Robert Walsh of Inystiok.

These say upon oath that the township (villa) of Rosse lies within the bounds of Rodebak and Ryndowan, and that the said mayor, bailiffs, and citizens [of Waterford] are accustomed from a time beyond the memory of man to choose out two casks of wine from every ship laden with wine that comes within the bounds of Rodibak and Ryndowan and goes to Rosse and there unloads, and to take the wine from one of the said casks to their own use for the sustenance of the said city, and the other cask to the use and pleasure of the Earl of Ormond, peacefully and without hindrance, until lately they were deprived by the sovereign and burgesses of the aforesaid town of Rosse.

2) Letters patent (in latin) from Henry VII to Oliver, Bishop of Ossory, and Nicholas Everard, "narrator"; declaring that "whereas the mayor, bailiffs and citizens of Waterford, by petition to Gerald, Earl of Kildare, deputy for our son Henry, Duke of York, then lieutenant, and to our council in Ireland, showed how they and their predecessors were accustomed from a time beyond the memory of man to choose out two casks of prise wine from every laden ship going to the town of Ross to unlade, viz. one cask from before the mast and one cask from aft, of which casks the said mayor and bailiffs had one, to raise therefrom 100 marks towards the fee-farm of the said city, and of that right they were in peaceful possession until lately by virtue of a commission from us they were deforced of it by certain burgesses of Ross; wherefore they pray for remedy. We therefore, as well for our own rights as those of the said mayor bailiffs and citizens, and wishing that justice be done, and having full trust in your faithfulness and assiduity in this matter, have appointed you to inquire by the oath of true and lawful men of the county of Kilkenny and the Crosslands therein, as well within liberties as without, by whom you may best know the truth of this matter, in the presence as well of the said Mayor and Bailiffs as of the said sovereign, reeves and burgesses of Ross, if they are willing to come to Inistioge; whether the mayor, bailiffs and citizens of Waterford and their predecessors were accustomed or not to choose one of the said casks of prise wine from ships coming to unlade at the said town of Ross as aforesaid and whether the said town of Ross lies within Rodybak and Randowan. And you shall send without delay the inquiries, drawn up clearly and plainly, to us in our Chancery of Ireland, under your own seal and the seals of those by whom it is made, along with this writ. In witness whereof we have caused to be made these our letters patent.

Treste the aforesaid Deputy at Dublin on the 6th day of July in the 16th year of our reign."

4) Inspeximus by Henry VIII (in latin) of a record of an inquisition in the Chancery files of Ireland, as follows.

" Our lord the King sent to his well beloved Oliver bishop of Ossory and Nicholas Everard, 'narrator,' his letters patent, in these words.

' Henry, etc. as in (2) above.' On which account the sheriff of Kilkenny was commanded to cause to come before the said Justices at Inistioge on the Thursday next after the feast of St. Luke the Evangelist twelve free and lawful men of the aforesaid neighbourhood by whom the truth of the matter might best be known and inquired, whether the mayor, bailiffs and citizens of Waterford and their predecessors were accustomed from time immemorial to choose two casks of wine from every ship laden with wine going to the town of Ross and there unlading, and whether they were accustomed to keep one of the said casks to their use, to raise therefrom 100 marks towards the fee-farm they owe us for the said city; and whether the said town of Ross is within the bounds of Rodibak and Randowan or not; and that he should have there this order.

Witness the aforesaid Justices at Inistioge the 10th day of October, 17 Henry VII (October 10, 1501).

" Also the said mayor, etc., were bidden by the said Justices to be present at the said inquisition at the said day and place, if they would; and the said sovereign and burgesses of the town of Ross were likewise bidden, in this form.

' Oliver, bishop of Ossory, and Nicholas Everard, "narrator," Justices of the King specially assigned by letters patent, to the sovereign of the town of Ross and the reeves and burgesses, greeting. We command you in the King's name to come before us at Inistioge on Thursday next after the feast of St. Luke the Evangelist (October 20, 1501) to show what you can and say what you can, as well on behalf of the King as of yourselves, why the mayor, bailiffs and citizens of Waterford and their successors ought not to choose out two casks of prise wine from all ships laden with wine going to Ross to unlade, and to keep one of them for their own use, to raise therefrom 100 marks. towards the fee-farm they owe us for the city of Waterford, which right they have enjoyed, as they say, from time immemorial; and also whether the said town of Ross is within the bounds of Rodybak and Randowan.

Given at Inistioge on the 10th day of October, 17 Henry VII.'

'On which Thursday the said sheriff made execution of the said writ and made return that the said writ was fully executed. And on the said day the aforesaid mayor, etc., and sovereign, etc., came here in obedience to a solemn summons, the said mayor, etc., by John Wise their attorney, and the said sovereign, etc., did not come. Therefore the inquisition on the matter was taken by the following:—Robert Freyng of Redyston, William Brennagh of Rossbarcan, Thomas fy Geoffrey of Hagard, Fulco den de Grenan, John Poer of Inistioge, Patrick Gollan of Inistioge, Robert Walshe of the same, Nicholas Dobbyn of the same, David Dobbyn of Thomaston, Richard Poer of the same, William White of the same, Nicholas Dobbyn of Dobbynswode. These jurors say on their oath that the town of Ross lies within the limits of Rodybak and Randowan, and that the said mayor, etc., and their predecessors were accustomed from time immemorial to choose out two tuns of prise wine from every ship laden with wine coming into Rodybak and Randowan and going to Ross and unlading there and to keep one of the tuns thus chosen to their own use for the support of the said city, and the other tun to the use and pleasure of the Earl of Ormond, quietly and peacefully and without contradiction until lately they were deforced by the said sovereign, etc., In witness whereof the said jurors set their seals, on the said day and place. Which writ of the King annexed to this record, along with the inquisition, we, Oliver, bishop of Ossory, and Nicholas Everard, "narrator," have sent to our lord the King in his Chancery.

Given on the said day and place.' 'We have inspected also the tenour as well of our writ aforesaid as of the said inquisition under the seal of the said inquisitors, according to the force, form and effect of the said record. And we have thought fit to cause the tenour of the aforesaid writ and inquisition to be exemplified at the request of John Wise one of our learned counsel. In witness whereof we have caused to be made these our letters patent.

Witness the aforesaid deputy at Dublin on the 26th day of October in the 24th year of our reign.' "

5) Memorandum reciting the letters patent of Henry VII and the proceedings taken thereupon, as in (4) above.

" In witness whereof we, Oliver, bishop of Ossory, and Nicholas Everard, "narrator," aforesaid, have affixed our seals and have sent to our lord King Henry in his Chancery this inquisition with the seals of the said inquisitors annexed to this record, along with the aforesaid writ, under our seals."

302.

Two episcopal deeds relating to the marriage of James Butler and Sabina Kavanagh.

1) " Oliver, bishop of Ossory, to all, etc., greeting. Know that on the 6th day of January in the year 1501, Peter Butler, son of James Butler, having with him certain witnesses necessary to him not only for proving the articles on his legitimacy below-given, but also lest he should incur loss through false and unjust reports if in future he could not find a copy, etc., sought humbly and with insistence to have these deeds inspected and the witnesses examined. We therefore, thinking the request just, etc., summoned the noble Theobald son of Edmund and Richard son of Theobald le Butler and all others having an interest in the case, to be before me on the 17th day of the said month in the cathedral church of St. Canice at Kilkenny by general herald. On which day we, sitting in the accustomed seat of judgment and the parties, Sir Peter the principal and Theobald and Richard, etc., duly summoned, appearing before us, at the instance of Sir Peter we assigned the 18th day of the same month in the parish church of St. Mary of Rosbergon. On which day and place, Sir Peter appearing before us, but Theobald and Richard contumaciously absenting themselves, and being declared contumacious, Sir Peter proceeded to declare the articles of which this is the first; viz. that Sabina Kevanagh was related to Sir James Butler son of Edmund in a certain degree of affinity. The second is that said James, the said impediment standing, took to him (traduxit) Sabina and had two sons by her, Edmund and Theobald. The third is that in time by papal dispensation the said James and Sabina, in spite of the impediment, were allowed lawfully to marry. The fourth is that after the petition for the said dispensation and in virtue thereof, they were solemnly married publicly in face of the church. The fifth is that after the dispensation and marriage Sabina had two sons, Peter and John.

Upon all of which Peter Butler now produces witnesses whose evidence being taken the notary makes into a public instrument as follows.

'The lady Abbess 'de Bello Portu' of the order of St. Augustine in the diocese of Ossory, the first witness, duly sworn, etc., on the holy Gospels, declares the five articles to contain the truth, because she saw the dispensation and heard of the impediment and was present when the marriage was solemnised between them in the church of Lysterlyn in Ossory. Asked who celebrated mass, she said Henry Londres, then vicar of Knocktopher. Also that the above Edmund and Theobald were born before marriage, and that they were placed with the said James and Sabina at the time of the marriage under a cloak. She said also that the said Peter and John were afterwards born.

Sir Edmund O'Coman, vicar of Rosbargon, second witness, duly sworn, etc., says as regards the first article that he heard said impediment to have existed, and that he knew James to have taken Sabina to himself, and as regards the other articles that a dispensation was granted, that he was present at the marriage in Lysterlyn and saw Edmund and Theobald lying under a cloak there. Also that Peter and John were born after marriage.

William Sutton, gent., of county Wexford, third witness, duly sworn, etc., said the truth as to the impediment was well known also that the way of birth (traductio et procuratio) of Edmund and Theobald was notorious, also that he rode with James Butler from Knocktopher and was present at the marriage, etc.

David Sutton, fourth witness, testifies to the same effect. So do Oliver Grace, fifth; John Forstalle, sixth; Peter Ruffus O'Dugin, seventh; Robert Fren, eighth; Elicia Butler, ninth; Edmund Forster, tenth witness. The latter adds that Sir John Hedyan sent for the dispensation. Walter Barotoun, eleventh witness, testifies similarly. Master John Laffan, 'in decretis Baccalarius,' twelfth witness, says that he saw Donald Fuscus Kevanagh [Donal Reagh M^cMurrough Kavanagh], father of the said Sabina, sending some priests to the Holy see for the dispensation, who, as it is asserted, returned without it, and that it was sent for again, and before it was granted Edmund and Theobald were born. As regards the other articles he agrees with the former witnesses.

Sabina Kevanagh, thirteenth witness, duly sworn, etc., says that all the articles contain the truth, and that she is the person of whom the first article speaks.

Margaret 'Edmundi,' fourteenth; David Dowill, fifteenth; Brother Nicholas Bossher, canon professed of Inistioge, sixteenth; Sir Dermot O'Clery, vicar of Callan, eighteenth witness, all testify on oath to the same effect, not moved by prayer or price, hatred, fear or love.

Whereupon the said James Butler renounced the production of further witnesses and requested the publication of their evidence; for which we appointed the 18th day of March next in our Cathedral church. On which day, we, sitting in the accustomed place of tribunal, and said Peter Butler being present by proxy but Theobald and Richard contumaciously absent, decreed that the said attestations should be published, as by our letters patent.

In witness of all which to these presents we have set our greater seal (sigillum nostrum quo ad maiora utimur) and have asked our notary to write and subscribe the same; there being present Sir Edmund Quemerford, dean of Ossory, and Nicholas Whit, dean of Waterford, Brother Thomas Lathy, prior of Kells, Sir William, vicar of Knocktopher, John Butler and various other clerics and laymen, witnesses called and requested.'

'And I, John Mohland, clerk of Ossory diocese, by Papal and imperial authority public notary, was present at the above attestations, etc., before the reverend Oliver, bishop of Ossory, etc., and wrote and drew them up in this public form."

Sign and declaration of John Mohland, notary.

January 6, 1501.

(2) "Walter, by divine permission and that of the Apostolic see, archbishop of Dublin and primate of Ireland, to all sons of Mother Church, etc., greeting. Know that in the cathedral church of St. Canice, Kilkenny, during my metropolitan visitation, there appeared lord Peter Butler, knight, holding in his hand a certain petition which he exhibited to us, in these words.

' In the name of God, amen. Before you, most reverend father in Christ and lord Walter, archbishop of Dublin, etc., on the part of the noble lord Peter Butler, knight, it is presented that, whereas formerly James, father of the same Peter in the last part of his life, made him general executor and heir of all his goods movable and immovable by right of heritage due to him, and because it was asserted by some wishing to sow discord, and came to the ears of many, that another than the same Peter ought to succeed to his said father by hereditary right : on this account the said Peter wishing for all time to come to stop the mouths of all and singular who spoke this slander, and lest the truth should perish in the future, brought various witnesses to prove the truth of the matter before your suffragan Oliver, bishop of Ossory, and his official. These having been fully received and a public deposition made, we had a public instrument made of the evidence as above. And in order that this process may obtain greater security we request your grace to examine and confirm the same.

We however, considering the petition, and wishing to do justice, etc., have ordered and made to be cited by due summoners (apparitores) all those who claim an interest in the case, especially Theobald and Richard respectively sons of Edmund and Theobald. And because in the term assigned for this no one (nullus contradictor) appeared to contravene the process of those who were absent on pain of contumacy, we therefore decided to approve the above process in the fashion which follows.'

' In the name of God, amen, we, Walter, archbishop of Dublin, etc., having seen and perused the deposition of Oliver, bishop of Ossory, and the process made at the instance of James Butler, knight, touching proof of legitimacy, do confirm the same by these presents. In witness whereof we have had these present letters of testimony (litteras testimoniales) and this present instrument done and drawn up in due form by our notary below and have set our seals thereto. Given and done in the parish church of Gowran on the 8th day of August in the year 1502; there being present master Geoffrey Fyche, official of Dublin, master Nicholas White, dean of Waterford, Robert Hedian, archdeacon of Ossory, and Robert Skeret and John Englisse, canons of the church of Dublin, also the notary below-written and various other witnesses.' "

Documents relative to the will of James Butler.

Notarial instrument dated July 3, 1507, made in the city of Waterford in the house of William Whyte, mayor of the same, to the effect that Sir Peter Butler, knight, exhibited before the notary and witnesses specially summoned certain instruments signed and sealed by the Archbishop of Dublin and the Bishop of Ossory, the tenour of which was as follows. The two episcopal deeds (see Deed 302) relating to the marriage of James Butler and Sabina Kavanagh are then quoted.

The instrument proceeds to the effect that in the year 1494 in the 3rd year of Pope Alexander VI on the second week-day (secunda feria) before the feasts of SS. Philip and James, in the parish church of Barnchurch in the diocese of Ossory, Sir Piers Butler exhibited the will of his father James Butler to the notary and other witnesses and asked to have it copied and confirmed. The tenour is as follows :

"In the name of God, amen. By the tenour of this present instrument let it appear to all that in the year 1494 on the Monday before the feast of SS. Philip and James, in the parish church of Barnchurch in Ossory diocese, in my presence and that of the subscribed witnesses, the noble Peter Butler exhibited to me (Oliver, bishop of Ossory) the will of James Butler, his father, written on a certain paper deed in public hand (in quadam papiri cedula manu tamen publica scriptum) and for better corroboration of the same produced the subscribed witnesses and requested me to examine them." (The will of his father, Sir James Butler, is then quoted, as follows).

" " In the name of God, amen. I, Sir James Butler, principal captain of my nation, lawful son and heir of Edmund Butler, late defunct, although sick in body sound in mind, make my will, with witnesses standing by, in this fashion.

' First I bequeath my soul to God and the blessed Virgin and all Saints and my body to be buried in the monastery of the Augustine brothers at Callan. But all my movable goods to be distributed according to my will and that of my executor. Also I make and appoint Peter Butler, my natural and lawful son, my true heir and executor, and bequeath him my horse and gown, rendering, however, to my creditors, whose goods I have unjustly had, out of the same horse (ex eodem equo) twenty cows or satisfaction according to their will, and out of the gown six cows. Also I give and appoint to him the custody and defence of the lands of my lord the Earl of Ormond as it was given to me and as I have it. Also I give and bequeath to the said Peter a portion of the Holy cross and the shield of St. Michael, and all other relics of saints and all my precious stones and rings with my oracles (oraculis), and all jewels which by hereditary right belonged to me."

" " After which, the abovesaid being handed to me and the tenour of it perused, I then proceeded to examination of the said witnesses and examined them secretly and under seal upon the holy gospels ; whose depositions are as follows.

Brother Donatus O'Maly, prior of the brothers of St. Augustine at Callan, first witness duly sworn, etc., says that he was present with the witnesses subscribed in the castle of Knocktopher with Sir James Butler who was then in extremis, who there made his will and disposed of his goods according to what is contained in the said deed. Brother Richard Barred of the said monastery, Sir William Molghan, vicar of Knocktopher, and Sir John Horsman, chaplain ; John Molghan, public notary ; Eveline Forstall, John O'Readde, witnesses sworn, etc., all give similar evidence. At the request of Peter Butler the notary made a public instrument of these depositions, there being present Richard, baron of Barnchurch, Patrick Sleger alias de sancto Leodegario, principal of his nation, and the vicar of Barnchurch, namely Sir John Bowland.'

'And we, Oliver, bishop of Ossory, ratify all the above instruments, etc.

Given in our cathedral church of Ossory on the . . . day of the . . . month in the year 1495.'

'And I, William Fyan, clerk of Cashel diocese, public notary, having been present at these attestations, etc., have drawn them up in form of a public instrument.'

Finally Sir Peter Butler, knight, requests the notary below-named to make a full instrument of the three deeds given above which he does.

Done as recited in the said year, pontificate, etc., there being present William White, mayor of the city of Waterford, James Sherloke, bailiff of the same, and William Morese, canon of the church of Ossory, witnesses summoned and requested.' "

Sign and declaration of the notary of the whole instrument, namely Patrick Stronge, clerk, of the city of Waterford, follows.

July 3, 1507.

The will of James Butler, given in the above document, is in latin as follows :

" In Dei nomine amen. Ego magister Jacobus Butler Capitaneus principalis mee nacionis, filius legitimus et heres Edmundi Butler, nuper defuncti, licet eger corpore sanus tamem mente, coram testibus hiis astantibus condo testamentum meum in hunc modum. Item facio et constituo Petrum Butler, filium meum naturalem et legitimum, meum verum heredem ac executorem, ac sibi equum meum et jupam iego et do, reddendo tamen creditoribus meis ex eodem equo, quorum bona iniuste habui, viginti vaccas, aut satisfactionem secundum eorum voluntatem, et ex jupa sex vaccas. Item do et condo sibi custodiam et defencionem terrarum domini mei Comitum Ormonie ; prout mihi dabatur et habeo. Item do et lego eidem Petro particulam de Sancta Cruce, ac Scutum Sancti Michaelis, omnesque alias sanctorum reliquias, omnesque preciosas lapides meos et anulos cum oraculis meis, omniaque eciam jocalia que jure hereditatis ad me pertinebant, etc."

Unpublished records from the "Irish Privy Council Roll, 16 Richard II," of which the main part has been published by the Rev. James Graves in his Council Roll of Ireland, 16 Richard II (R.S. 1877).

This volume, which is in the Muniment Room, Kilkenny castle, is a large folio twenty inches by twelve inches, strongly bound in leather, into which Graves had skilfully inserted a number of documents then at Kilkenny, of which the most important was a "Roll of the Proceedings of the Privy Council of Ireland, held under James, Earl of Ormond, Lord Justice of Ireland."

Graves explains his treatment of the original records in the following note on the opening page:—

"I hereby certify, that the several parts of the ensuing document follow in the same sequence as in the rotular form, and the reason of my knowledge is that I took asunder the Roll, numbering each skin as separated from the remainder, and also each portion of a skin when it was necessary so to divide the same; and that I have examined the several pages of this book and find that the binder has faithfully observed the order in which I delivered the parchments to him.

Witness my hand this 6th day of May, 1851.

James Graves."

In this published "Council Roll of 16 Richard II" Graves has printed the full text of the Norman-French proceedings of the Irish Council of that year, which is an almost unique survival of this kind of record in Ireland. The text in the original covers twenty-six folios of skins pasted in on both sides.

But Graves has also inserted a number of other miscellaneous documents of both an earlier and later date than the Council Roll, namely from the reign of Edward I to that of Elizabeth. These cover the remaining twenty-four folios, after which many pages are left blank.

The character of these documents is as follows, as described by Graves.

(1) A Return by the Court of Exchequer to an English writ of "Certiorari" dated August 14, 38 Edward III, of the debts due to the Crown by James, Earl of Ormond, and his predecessors.

(2) Account of James le Botiller for the King's prise of wines from 22 Edward III to 40 Edward III.

(3) Pleas of the Crown held at Kilkenny before Nicholas Walsh, second justice of the Chief Place in Ireland, etc., July 25, 1596.

(6) Record of an appeal to the King's Court from the Court of the Liberty of Meath under a writ of error, Dublin, June 10, 18 Richard II.

(7) Injured copy of ancient grants of lands, apparently forming part of a Roll, 18 and 19 Edward III.

(8) An ancient paper copy of certain King's letters of Privy seal to the Earls of Ormond, etc. [Printed in full in Graves: "King's Council in Ireland," pp. 303-313. Some alternative readings however to the names of the Council are suggested below.]

(9) Fragment (paper) of an act of parliament repealing an act of Edward IV, enabling Edmund and Theobald Butler to inherit lands.

(10) An extent of the possessions of James, Earl of Ormond, which does not seem complete.

These unpublished portions of the volume, given below, have been transcribed or translated in full and are given in the order in which they are found in the book.

(3) Pleas of the Crown held at Kilkenny in the county of Kilkenny before Nicholas Walshe of Clonmore, gentleman, second Justice of the Chief Place in Ireland, and Roger Wilbraham, gentleman, chief clerk of the Queen in her land of Ireland, Justices of assize, gaol delivery, and oyer and terminer, in county Kilkenny, on Thursday next before the feast of St. James the Apostle 38 Elizabeth. (In latin.)

Mem. that Fernandus alias Ffer McBrien, of Ballymartin in county Kilkenny, footman; Redmund O'Rian of the same, horseman; Fernandus O'Clery of the same, footman; Patrick O'Doran of the same, footman; John McTeig of the same, footman; Barnabas O'Divlin of the same, footman; Patrick beg Forstall of the same, footman; James duff McWilliam of Bellaraged in the same county, husbandman; William fitz Piers, Donill McWilliam, William O'Horan, Robert Wale, Mortagh Ferrell, James Browne, William Kee, Philip Bowdan, William McDonill, Patrick O'Molrian, Donatus O'Hecky, Donatus O'Conan, Donald O'Brenan, Donatus O'Hecky, William Loghe, Donatus O'Doran, Cornelius O'Cogan, Dermot Liegh Loghe, and Patrick Gawney, of the same, husbandmen, and Donatus McEvoy of Bellacleura in the same county, husbandman; taken for that they were indicted by the Queen before Edward fitz Symon, gentleman, the Queen's serjeant-at-law in Ireland, and Richard Bellinge, gentleman, Justices of assize, gaol delivery and oyer and terminer in county Kilkenny, at Kilkenny in a general session held on Monday after the feast of the Epiphany, 32 Elizabeth, for that on the 8th day of May 31 Elizabeth they and every of them came with force and arms, viz. swords, knives and axes to the manor of Kilmenan in the said county, the heritage of James Shortall of Ballilorcan in the same county, gentleman, and cut down the wood of Kilmenan and took and carried away divers wood and fuel thence against the Queen's peace. Upon which the said Fernandus, etc., came in person and asked to hear the said indictment; after the reading of which, they complained that they were grievously vexed by the said indictment and that unlawfully, for they said that the said indictment and the matters contained therein were not sufficient in law to oblige them to answer. Nevertheless they plead that the said vill of Kilmenan 'eteampell,' otherwise called Kilmenan eghtraghe, of which the said wood is parcel, which vill and wood, long before the said trespass was supposed to have been done, was the free tenement of Edmund Butler, Viscount of Mountgarret ; and that at the time when the said trespass was supposed to have been done they entered the said wood peacefully and cut down and carried away divers wood and fuel as the servants of the aforesaid Edmund Butler and by his command, as was lawful for them ; which entry etc., and nothing else, constitutes the trespass specified in the said indictment ; which matter they are prepared to verify as this court may think fit, except for (the allegation) that they came with force and arms to the said vill of Kilmenan, or cut down a wood or carried away wood and fuel which were the hereditament of James Shortall, against the Queen's peace as is supposed in the indictment. And on this they put themselves on the verdict of the country (ponunt se super patriam). Upon which came Roger Wilbraham, gentleman, chief clerk of the Queen, prosecutor for the crown, and asked that inquiry should be made by jury (per patriam). A jury was therefore called and the sheriff of county Kilkenny was commanded that on Tuesday next after the feast of St. David in the 33rd year of Elizabeth he should cause to come to Kilkenny before the said Nicholas Walshe and Edward fitz Symon, Justices, twelve free and lawful men of his bailiwick of the neighbourhood of Kilmenan. On which day the said jurors came, viz. Oliver Seintleger of Tulleghanbroge, John Swetman of Castellnis (? Castellyf), Gerald fitz Gerald of Burnechurche, James Forstall of Kilferagh, Robert Seintleger of Ballifeunon, Gerald Astekyn of Cloghlea, James Galduf of Sraghe, Adam Lawles of Talbotts Inche, John Toben of Carleske, Adam Tywe of Malardeston, Robert Walsh of Crobally and Richard Walsh of Knockmelan, gentleman. Who say on oath that the said defendants are not guilty of the said transgression in the manner in which it is set forth in the indictment. This court therefore decides that they shall be quit.

Mem. (in English) that upon the trial of the said issue in the indictment of trespass written in this roll, it was alleged in the behalf of the honourable Thomas Earl of Ormond and Ossory that the said land of Kilmenan is the inheritance of the said Earl and that he has the seisin and possession thereof and that his father died seised ; and lest the trial of the said indictment might hereafter be prejudicial to him or his heirs, the court at the request of the said Earl's counsel caused this note to be entered, thereby to avoid any prejudice that might grow, the said Earl being not party to the same trial.

(Clause of warranty.) In witness of the gift he has set his seal. Witnesses: Sir Madoc de Eyton, Robert de Paradys, John fitz Adam, Maurice de Tillauth, Robert de Yvelton, William fitz Walter, etc.

- v Dorso. Walter de Fulburne, dean of Waterford, grants to David Offyngton all the land which once belonged to the lord Walter de Trywe in Lethtyoke and Balykenan in Leix, and all the land which lord Hugo de Trywe gave in marriage portion . . . (Entry incomplete).

(6) Record of an appeal to the King's Court from the Court of the Liberty of Meath under a writ of error. (Dublin, June 10, 18 Richard II).

Record of plea before William de Wyndsore at Kilkenny : in Chancery, 31 Edward III.

(In latin.) The King sent his letters close to the Justices of his Bench, as follows :

Richard, etc. Whereas in the record, process and judgment of an assize of Novel Disseisin before James, Earl of Ormond, lately Justiciar, at Trim, between William son of Peter le Botiller and Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March and Ulster, John Loterell of Dunboyne the elder, and Thomas Comdyn, concerning tenements in Dunboyne and in Moyemet, a manifest error is found, We therefore command you that having inspected the said judgment, record and process you correct any error to be found therein and do full justice in this matter according to the law and custom of our land of Ireland. Teste Roger de Mortimer, Earl of March and Ulster, Lieutenant, at Dublin, June 10, 18 Richard II. (June 10, 1395.)

The tenour of the above-mentioned record etc., is as follows :

' A plea of jury and assize at Trim before James le Boteler Earl of Ormond, Justiciar, Tuesday next before the feast of St. Brigid 18 Richard II (February 2, 1395.) The assize came to decide whether Roger de Mortimer, John Loterell and Thomas Comdyn disseised William son of Peter le Botiller of his free tenement in Dunboyne and Moyemet, of which disseisin the said William complained. The said John, and Thomas by Nicholas Wycombe his bailiff, came and denied it and placed themselves upon the assize. The Earl appeared by Nicholas his bailiff and said that the manor of Dunboyne extends into diverse villis, viz. Clony, Pereston and Luskeston, each of which is a vill of itself, which does not appear in the writ ; and he therefore seeks judgment concerning the writ ; and if it be found by the assize that the said Clony, etc., are not villis of themselves but hamlets of the said manor of Dunboyne, he says that Edmund de Mortimer, late Earl of March and Ulster, father of the present Earl whose heir Roger is, was formerly seised of the aforesaid manors [Dunboyne and Moyemet] in demesne as of fee and that he died seised thereof ; on whose death they came into the King's hands by reason of the minority of the heir and are still thus ; and that he did no disseisin to the said William ; and on this he puts himself on the assize. And Richard Plunket, counsel for the King, on behalf of the King and of the said Roger, said that the aforesaid Edmund had royal franchise in the county of Meath, viz. cognizance of all pleas within the said Liberty pleadable before his seneschal on writ under the seal of the said Liberty, and had his ministers in the said liberty, viz. chancellor, treasurer, sheriff, escheator and others, and had among his liberties that of 'primer seisin' of all lands and tenements within the said liberty held directly of him and was accustomed to retain possession thereof until the heirs obtained restitution in due form from his chancery, as the King himself does. And he said that Philip Overy, chaplain, died seised of the said manors which he held directly (immediate) from the said Earl, who therefore duly exercised the right of primer seisin. The said manors passed into the King's hands on the death of the said Earl and yet remain so. He therefore asks that the assize be not taken without consulting the King. And Thomas Clifford, the King's escheator for Ireland, then present in court, testified that the said manors are in the King's hands for the said causes. William, the complainant, said that Clony, etc., are hamlets of the manor of Dunboyne and not villis of themselves, and that he was in good and peaceful seisin of the said manors, until the said Roger and Thomas unjustly disseised him, and he therefore asks for an assize. The sheriff was therefore commanded to have here before the said Justiciar, etc., on Tuesday next after the feast of St. Agatha [February 9, 1395] the bodies, etc., and beyond them as many, etc., as will make an assize. And the same day was given to William and Roger now Earl and to John and Thomas by the said their bailiffs. And it was said to William the plaintiff that in the meanwhile he might address himself to the King if he wished. On which day William came here before the said Justiciar, and so did Earl Roger, John and Thomas by their bailiff, and a jury of an assize of the parties similarly. The King sent his writ commanding the Justice to take the said assize, as follows.

'Richard, etc., to his Justiciar of Ireland. Whereas we understand from the complaint of William son of Peter le Boteler that, in an assize of Novel Disseisin which the said William demanded before you by our writ against Roger de Mortimer, John Lotterell and Thomas Comdyn concerning tenements in Dunboyne, alleged to be in our hands by reason of the death of Edmund, late Earl of March, and the minority of the said Roger his son and heir, you delayed and still delay to take the said assize, to the damage of the said William, We therefore command you to proceed to the said assize, notwithstanding the alleged taking of the tenement aforesaid into our hand ; provided that no judgment be given without consulting us.

Teste James, Earl of Ormond, Justiciar, at Dublin, February 4, 18 Richard II.'

'The assize therefore came and said on oath that Clony, Pereston and Luskeston are hamlets of the said manor of Dunboyne, and that Peter le Botiller, father to the said William, the complainant, who is his heir, was formerly seised of the said manors in demesne, which he granted to Thomas le Boteller his son and Philip Overey, chaplain, and their heirs male, paying yearly to the said Peter two hundred marks at Michaelmas and Easter in equal parts, and making to the chief lords of the fee the accustomed dues and services. And if the said Thomas should die without heir male, then after the death of the said Thomas and Philip the said manors should pass to Nicholas le Botiller, brother of the said Thomas. And if he should die likewise, to Richard le Botiller his brother. And if he should die likewise, to William his brother, the present complainant. And if he should die likewise, to other persons named in the charter, which is here produced in evidence before the court by the said William and whose tenour is as follows.

'Know all men that I, Peter le Botiller, have given and granted and by this charter confirmed to Thomas le Botiller my son, and Philip Overey, chaplain, the manors of Dunboyne and Moyemet with the homages and services of all the free tenants, to have and to hold to them and their heirs male lawfully begotten of me and my heirs, paying yearly therefor two hundred marks in equal portions at Michaelmas and Easter, and making to the chief lords of the fee the accustomed dues and services. And if the said Thomas should die without heir male, then after the death of the said Thomas and Philip they shall remain to Nicholas le Botiller brother of the said Thomas. And if he should die likewise, then to Richard le Botiller, his brother. And if he should die likewise, then to William le Botiller, his brother. And if he should die likewise, then to Edmund le Botiller his brother. And if he should die likewise, they shall remain to me and my heirs to have and to hold of the chief lords of the fee for the services due and accustomed. In witness whereof I have set my seal.

Given on Friday next after the feast of St. James the Apostle, 44 Edward III.'

'And they said also that the said Thomas le Botiller and Philip by pretext of the said gift were seised thereof until the said Thomas died without heir male, after whose death the said Philip remained in possession until one Roger Hakenshaw, then Escheator of Ireland, by colour of his office, without warrant or any inquisition before him, took the said manors into the hands of the said King Edward. Upon which the said Philip prosecuted in a common parliament held at Kilkenny for the restitution of the same. Restitution was then made upon inquisition according to the tenour of the aforesaid charter. And the said Philip continued in possession of the said manors for the term of his life. And the said Thomas, Nicholas and Richard le Botiller died without heirs male, and afterwards the said Philip died seised; after whose death the said William, the present complainant, was seised of the said manors according to the tenour of the said charter, until one Walter Veldon, then Treasurer of Edmund de Mortimer, lately Earl of March and Ulster, for his Liberty of Meath, on suggestion from certain persons, viz. that the said Philip Overy had died holding the said manors in fee simple, made a warrant to the said John Lotterell and Thomas Comdyn, then serjeants, to take the said manors into the hands of the said Earl as an escheat, which they accordingly did, and evicted the said Walter. And he says that the said late Earl by his ministers took forty shillings issues of certain glebe lands within the said manors; and afterwards, because it seemed to the council of the said Earl that the seisin of the said manors was not sufficient in the manner in which it had been taken, they commanded that John Bermyngeham, then escheator for the Liberty of Meath, should take an inquisition, on the foregoing; which he accordingly did, and found that the said Philip died without heir, seised in demesne as of fee holding directly from the said Earl; by pretext of which inquisition one Geoffrey Rede, at the bidding of the said escheator, again took the said manors into the hand of the said Earl, who took the issues thereof during the whole of his life from the time of the ejection of the said William, and died seised thereof : after whose death they passed into the King's hands by reason of the minority of the heir. Being asked whether the said Edmund Earl of March and Ulster had always had such a right of ' primer seisin ' over his free tenants they said that the Earl neither claimed nor exercised any such right before the day that he came into Ireland, but that after his coming he had such a right within his said Liberty. Being asked whether said Philip died and said William made entry before the coming of the Earl, they said this was so, and that William was in seisin of the said manors until John Lotterell and Thomas Comdyn ejected him. Being asked whether the said Roger was present at the ejection, they said he was not. Being asked whether the entry by the said John and Thomas was by force and arms, they said that it was not. Being asked of the damages, they said that they amounted to two hundreds pounds ; and because the court was not ready to give judgment a day was appointed one month from Easter for the parties to appear before the Justiciar. On which day the said William by William Bernard his attorney came before the Justiciar at Cloneyn, and the said Earl Roger, John and Thomas did not come but made default, wherefore the said William asked for judgment by reason of the said default. Wherefore the King sent his writ to the Justiciar as follows :

' Richard, etc., William son of Peter le Botiller has shown to us by his petition that whereas he lately sought for an assize of Novel Disseisin before you against Roger de Mortimer, John Lotterell and Thomas Comdyn concerning tenements in Dunboyne and Moyemet, and for that it has been alleged in the said assize before you that the said tenements are among the lands of Edmund, late Earl of March and Ulster, now in the King's hands by reason of the minority of the heir, you delayed to take the said assize, We therefore, at the suggestion of the said William that justice is being delayed to him, commanded you by our writ to proceed to the taking of the said assize, notwithstanding the said allegation or the taking of the said lands into our hand, provided that judgment be not given without consulting us. And though by virtue of the said writ you should have proceeded to take the said assize, nevertheless you delayed, and do still delay, to do so, to the damage of the said William ; wherefore the said William has sought remedy. We therefore command you to proceed to judgment according to the law and custom of our land of Ireland, the aforesaid writ, allegation, and seizure into our hands notwithstanding.

Teste James le Boteller, Earl of Ormond, Justiciar, at Kilkenny, on May 7, 18 Richard II.'

'It was therefore decided that the said William should regain seisin of the said manors and of the aforesaid damages. And that the said John Lotterell and Thomas Comdyn be in mercy for the disseisin, and the said William son of Peter le Botiller for his false claim against Earl Roger. And that the King's hand be removed from the said manors. (Marginal note: Error.) And on this the said Earl Roger by Robert Lotterell his attorney came before the King here at this day and said that divers mistakes had been made in the said record and process, viz. that whereas the said Earl Edmund and his predecessors had in the Liberty of Meath royal liberty and jurisdiction and the cognizance of all suits as well of Novel Disseisin as others arising within the said Liberty, and had his seneschal, chancellor and chancery, treasurer and treasury, sheriff, escheator, coroner, serjeants and under-serjeants and other ministers within the said Liberty, and had among their franchises this, viz. that whenever any lands, tenements, rents or services had been taken into their hands by their escheator, seneschal or treasurer by way of escheat, suit must be made to the Earl in form of law in his chancery of the said Liberty for restitution thereof. The manors in question lie within the said Liberty and it has been proved that the serjeants John and Thomas seized them at the command of the treasurer of the Liberty; and it has been found by inquisition before John de Bermyngham, escheator, that Philip Overy died without heir seised of them in demesne as of fee, and that he held them directly of the earl; wherefore they were again taken into the hand of the Earl, who died seised thereof; after whose death they came into the King's hands. Whence it plainly appears that the said William should have sued for restitution from the King in the form aforesaid, and there is error in the record and process in that the Justiciar permitted the said William to make suit for the said manors by assize. He says that there is a further error in that, whereas the Earl and his predecessors had within their said Liberty the cognizance of all pleas as well of assize as others arising therein, and a seneschal before whom all such pleas should be tried, which rights passed to the King on the death of Earl Edmund; and whereas the said manors lie within the said Liberty, the said William sought for an assize before the Justiciar and not before the seneschal or other ministers of the said Liberty as he ought to have done. And there is error in this that the said Earl was acquitted and the said John and Thomas were adjudged the disseisors in the said assize, although they made the seizure at the command of Walter Veldon, the treasurer of the Liberty, to whom they were bound to be intendent, so that their action does not constitute a disseisin, especially because it was afterwards found by inquisition before John de Bermyngham that the said manors were lawfully seised into the Earl's hand by way of escheat. Wherefore the said Earl's name ought to be removed out of the said record and process, for that he can in no wise be accounted the disseisor, and for that the said William ought to have sought restitution from the King as guardian of the said lands. He says that there is a further error in that in the said assize the said Earl, by Nicholas Wycombe, his bailiff, alleged that the said manor of Dunboyne extends into several vills, viz. Clony, Pereston and Luskeston, each of which is a vill of itself, and if it should be found by the assize that they were hamlets of the manor of Dunboyne he further alleged that the late Earl died seized of them in demesne as of fee, after which they passed into the King's hand, and that he did no disseisin to the said William. And Sir Thomas de Clifford, the King's Escheator for Ireland, said on examination that the said manors were seized into the King's hand for the said causes. And notwithstanding these testimonies the said William replied that Clony, Pereston and Luskeston are hamlets of Dunboyne, and that he was in good and peaceful seisin thereof until he was disseised by the said John and Thomas, and therefore put himself on assize. Upon which the assize was called, and the said Justiciar deferred judgment until he had further orders from the King, and afterwards the King sent his writ commanding him to take the said assize, and so the Justiciar took the assize on the reply of the said William; after which the Escheator testified that the said manors were in the King's hands for the aforesaid cause, which reply was not amutable by law : wherefore there is error in the said record. And he says that there is a further error, viz. that when the said Richard Plunket, counsel for the King, said that Edmund, late Earl, had the said right of ' primer seisin ' in his said Liberty, wherefore the tenements in question were lawfully seized into his hand on the death of the said Philip Overy, and after the Earl's death they passed into the King's hands ; he asked that the said assize should not be taken without consulting the King. And the said escheator testified that the said manors were in the King's hands for the aforementioned reason. And afterwards the Justiciar asked the said jury of assize whether Edmund, late Earl, had such a right of primer seisin at all times over his free tenants in his Liberty of Meath, and they replied that he had not until after his coming into Ireland. And whereas this was not a subject open to question, and whereas the said Richard Plunket declared that he was in no wise bound to make declaration regarding it, and that it could not lawfully be inquired by assize concerning it, and whereas the said Justiciar gave judgment upon the aforesaid, error has been made. He says that there is a further error in that whereas the King sent his writ to the Justiciar, ordering him to proceed to the taking of the said assize notwithstanding the said certification and allegation made by the said escheator provided that he proceed not to judgment without consulting the King. And afterwards he sent another writ ordering the Justiciar to proceed to judgment. In which writs there was no mention of " the manors of Dunboyne and Moyemet " after the form of William's complaint in the said assize. Wherefore the Justiciar proceeded to judgment without sufficient warrant ; and therefore error has been made. Wherefore the said Earl by his attorney asks that the said errors be corrected and that the said William be commanded to come before the said Justiciar wheresoever he be, if he knows any reason why the said record and process should not be annulled on account of the said errors. The sheriff of Meath was therefore commanded as follows : 'Richard, etc.' (No text follows).

The same day was given to the said Earl by his attorney, etc., on which day, viz. fifteen days from Michaelmas, the said Earl came before the King at Dublin by his said attorney, and the said William by Nicholas Wycombe his attorney on a similar summons from the sheriff, and the sheriff returned the writ sent to him as follows.

'I have informed William that he must be before the King on the day named in this writ to hear the errors in the record and process of which mention is made and to do as this writ requires, by Barnabas Wythngton, Richard Dillon, Walter Russell and David Goldsmyth.'

'Whereupon the Earl by his attorney asked that the said errors should be corrected and justice done to him. And William by his attorney asked a hearing of the said record and process and the errors alleged to be contained therein. And when they had been read he said that there was no error in them and asked that they should be confirmed. The said Earl by his attorney asked that the record should be annulled since William had no further answer. Whereupon the court inspected the record, and diligently examined, heard and understood the errors alleged by the said Earl, from which it appeared plainly that the said Earl was acquitted of the disseisin and that the said John and Thomas had been adjudged the disseisors, but that disseisin could in no wise be adjudged for the said William, in the first place because the said late Earl had such franchise as is above described, and because the said John and Thomas made the seizure at the command of the said Thomas Veldon; and therefore the writ of assize ought to be quashed, because it cannot be held for a disseisin in law, and because after the said John and Thomas seized the said lands, they were again seized on inquisition before John de Bermyngham, and because the said present Earl says that the said late Earl and his predecessors had such a royal Liberty as is above described. To which William made no answer. And it was further proved by the said record that the said William ought to have sued for restitution from the King as guardian of the said lands, and not have proceeded by assize as he did. And also despite the said escheator's testimony that the said lands were in the King's hands for the said causes, the said William replied that Clony, Pereston and Luskeston were hamlets of the manor of Dunboyne, which reply was inadmissible after the aforesaid certifications until the Justiciar had further orders from the King. And further the said Justiciar, after he had received the King's command to take the said assize notwithstanding the said allegation, took the said assize, as well

upon the said pleas and allegation before the said testification was made by the said escheator, as after the aforesaid testification was made, and not upon any plea made after receipt of the said mandate upon the replication of the said William. And further whereas the Justiciar made enquiry whether the said late Earl had such right of primer seisin, a matter concerning which inquiry could not lawfully be made, and though the said Richard Plunket declared that he was not bound to make any declaration upon the point, particularly as the said William did not state in his plea that the said late Earl had any such right of primer seisin. It therefore seems to the court that in the said record and process divers errors have been made and therefore it is decided that the said record, process and judgment shall be annulled, and that the said present Earl be restored to the status he had in the said manors before the giving of the said erroneous judgment against him and that he regain the two hundred marks damages. And because it stands of record in this court that the said manors are in the hands of the King by reason of minority, it is further considered that they be again taken into his hands, and that the said William make satisfaction to the King for the revenues thereof from the time of the said erroneous judgment. And upon this the King sent his writ to Peter Rowe, Chief Justice of the King's Bench, as follows.

'Richard, etc., whereas Edmund, late Earl of March and Ulster, was formerly seised in demesne as of fee of the manors of Dunboyne and Moyemet, of which he died seised, after whose death they passed into our hand, by reason of minority, and remained so until William son of Peter le Botiller obtained an assize of Novel Disseisin before James, Earl of Ormond, our Justiciar, against the said Roger, now Earl, being then a minor, so that the said William regained seisin of the said manors which were restored to him; and by writ of error in our said Bench the said Roger sued to have the errors in the said record and process corrected, and because divers errors were found therein the said record, process and judgment were annulled in our said bench and it was decreed that the said Roger be restored to his former state in the said manors and that answer should be made to us for the revenues thereof. And now the said Roger has petitioned us that the said manors should be delivered to him as being part of his inheritance. And because by inspection of the rolls of our Chancery of Ireland of June 18, in the 16th year of our reign, it appears that we granted the said Roger delivery of all the castles, lordships, manors, lands, tenements, revenues and services in our said land which were of the inheritance of the said Roger and which were in the King's hand, from the feast of St. John the Baptist, with all liberties, franchises, etc.—and whereas we sent our writ from England to our Chancellor of Ireland ordering him to restore the said Roger to all his castles, etc., and furthermore on September 8 following we commanded John Aldelem, our Escheator, to restore the said Roger to all the above and give him full seisin thereof—we therefore command you to do whatever is lawful and right according to the law and custom of Ireland in the foregoing.

Teste Roger de Mortimer Earl of March and Ulster, our Lieutenant, in Ireland, at Dublin December 4, 19 Richard II.'

'It was therefore ordained that the King's hand be removed from the manors of Dunboyne and Moyemet and that the said manors be handed over to the said Earl. And upon this the Escheator was commanded in the above form.

(In French.) 'To you Lord Lieutenant and council of our lord the King in Ireland, showeth Philip Overy, chaplain, that whereas one Peter le Botiller was formerly seised of the manors of Dunboyne and Moyemet in demesne as of fee holding of Edmund de Mortimer, which manors the said Piers gave to the said Philip and to one Thomas le Botiller son of the said Piers and his heirs male and with remainder in default of issue, the said Piers died long after the enfeoffment and then the said Thomas died without heir, wherefore the King sent to the Exchequer his writ of 'diem clausit extremum' upon which the said Philip came to the Chancellor and demanded delivery of the lands but could not get it; wherefore he prays remedy.'

'Let this petition be sent to the Chancellor and the inquests and charters herein mentioned be viewed, and the King's council and others be called and the reasons heard for both parties and justice done therein.'

(In latin.) 'Edward, etc., to Roger Hakenshawe, Escheator. Writ of 'diem clausit extremum' ordering the seizure of the lands of Peter le Botiller held in chief into the King's hand, and ordering an inquisition into such lands and to find who is the next heir and whether he is married.

Teste William de Windsor, Lieutenant, at Ardee August 8, 44 Edward III.'

'Inquisition taken at Dunboyne before Roger Hakenshawe on Thursday after the feast of All Saints 44 Edward III [November 7, 1370], by John Petyt, Geoffrey Gerard, Richard Gerard, Walter Forest, John Foyll, Stephen Stokes, Adam Normaund, William Foyll, Henry Normaund, William Kenagh and John Walshe; who say on oath that the said Peter on the day he died did not hold any lands or tenements of the King in chief whose guardianship ought to belong to the King; but they say that the said Peter was formerly seised in demesne as of fee of the manors of Dunboyne and Moyemet which he held of Edmund de Mortimer, Earl of March and Ulster, for twenty shillings; which manors are worth fifteen pounds per annum. And they say that before he died the said Peter by his charter enfeoffed Thomas his son and Philip Overy of the said manors for two hundred marks yearly payable in equal portions at Easter and Michaelmas, with remainder, in case Thomas should die without heir male, to Nicholas his brother, and if he should die likewise, then to Richard his brother, and if he should die likewise, then to the said Peter and his heirs male. And they say that the said Thomas by virtue of the said enfeoffment was peacefully seised of the said manors in the lifetime of the said Peter and continued so until Roger Hakenshawe took them into the King's hand on the death of the said Peter. They say further that on the day he died the said Peter was seised in demesne as of fee of the manor of Holywode which he held from the Archbishop of Dublin for twenty pence per annum, which manor is worth nothing because it is wasted and lying fallow. And they say that he was also seised of the hamlets of Rath-sallagh, Neywton, Iudustoun, Greffyneston and Hollayestoun which he held from the said Archbishop for ten pounds per annum which is their entire value because they are wasted and . . . And further he held the vill of Cabagh (? Cabragh) from James le Botiller, Earl of Ormond, for one pound of pepper per annum and it is worth nothing. And they say that jointly with Katherine his wife, who is still living, he was enfeoffed for her life by Roger Whyte, chaplain, of the manor of Drongan and the vill (villata) of Grellagh which he held of John de Bermyngham, lord of Kiltevenan, for forty shillings, which is their total value. And the said manor and vill were given by him to Nicholas le Botiller and his heirs male to pass to them on the death of the said Peter and Katherine. And that the said Peter was seised jointly with the said Katherine of the vill of Skeewill held of Thomas Asley lord of Fed (? mer), for half a mark per annum, which is worth only ten shillings per annum more than this. And they say that the above vill held from the said Roger should belong on the death of the said Roger and Katherine to Thomas le Botiller and his heirs. And they say that the said Peter died at Fythard on Monday after the feast of St. Peter ad Vincula, 44 Edward III [August 5, 1370]. And that William le Botiller son of the said Peter is the nearest heir and is nine years of age and unmarried. And on the day the said Peter died, the said Philip Overy was yet alive and the said Thomas was dead. In witness whereof the jurors have set their seals. Given on the said day and place.'

' Know all men, etc., that I, Peter le Botiller, have granted and by this charter do confirm to Thomas le Botiller my son and Philip Overy, chaplain, the manors of Dunboyne and Moyemet, with remainder in case of default of heirs to Nicholas and Richard le Botiller in turn and with reversion to myself and my heirs. In witness whereof I have set my seal on Friday after the feast of St. James the Apostle, 44 Edward III.' [July 26, 1370].'

' Pleas at Kilkenny before the King in his Chancery of Ireland on Tuesday after the Epiphany in the 44th year of Edward III.

Philip Overy, chaplain, exhibited a certain petition before William de Windsor, Lieutenant, and others of the King's Council, as is contained in this roll. And the said Philip came into the Chancery and also Henry Michell who was counsel for the King, and Roger Hakenshawe, Escheator, before William de Skypwyth, Chief Justice of the King's Bench, Robert Preston and John Keppok, Justices of the Common Bench, and others of the same, with the said inquisition contained in this roll. And the said Philip Overy said that the said Peter le Botiller was formerly seised of the manors of Dunboyne and Moyemet, which he gave out of his seisin by a certain charter to Thomas his son and heir and to the said Philip for two hundred marks per annum payable in equal portions at Easter and Michaelmas, with remainder in default of heirs to Nicholas his brother and then in like case to Richard his brother, with reversion likewise to Peter, the grantor, and his heirs male. And he says that by virtue of the said gift he himself and the said Thomas were seised of the said manors until the death of the said Peter and afterwards until the death of the said Thomas. And afterwards the said Philip alone was seised thereof until they were seised into the King's hand, which has been found by the said inquisition taken before the said escheator; therefore he seeks restitution of the said manors and the issues thereof from the time of the death of the said Thomas. And the said Henry Michell said that the said Philip ought not to have restitution because the said Peter was seised in demesne as of fee of the said manors on the day of his death so that the said Thomas and Philip had no status in the said manors during the lifetime of the said Peter, as Philip had supposed by his petition and by his plea. And he said further that the said Thomas was under age at the time of the making of the said charter and also on the day the said Peter died, and if any such alienation was made to the said Thomas and Philip unknown to the King, it was done in deceit of the King and in conspiracy to exclude him from the custody of the said lands, because the said Peter held them of the Earl of March, then a minor and in the King's wardship. He therefore asked that enquiry be made on behalf of the King. And Philip said that he and Thomas, during the life of the said Peter and afterwards, were seised of the said manors and after the said charter the said Peter had no right therein. And he said that the said alienations were good and made in good faith and not in order to exclude the King, and he asked that this should be verified.

And because a jury could not be taken in the Chancery the sheriff of Trim was commanded to have before the Lieutenant here on Wednesday after the feast of St. Hilary twelve men of the neighbourhood to make the recognizance. The same day was given to the said Philip, Henry Michell the King's attorney, and Roger Hakenshawe. Upon which day they came before the said Lieutenant, and the said jury came. And Thomas de Thelwall, clerk of the rolls of Chancery, handed over the said records and processes to the said jury here in the court. And upon this Sir William de Loundres, Sir John Husee, Simon de Cusak, Sir James de Lahuyde, Sir Walter de Cusak, Sir Nicholas de Castel Martyn, Sir Thomas de Verdon, Nicholas de Wythyngton, John Bermyngham, William Broun and Roger Blake, here present in court, said upon oath that the said Peter, by a certain charter which the said Philip produced in court, gave the said manors out of his seisin to the said Philip and Thomas, and that they were seised of them with the homage and services of all the free tenants except Thomas Brune, knight, and Francis Brune by the service of forty-seven shillings per annum, and also of certain tenements in Luskeston and Foyleston, so that the said Peter at the time of his death had no right therein, and that the said alienation was made in good faith and not to the disherison of the King. And they say that the said Philip after the death of Thomas was seised of the said manors until they were taken into the King's hand on the supposition that the said Peter died seised thereof. The jury was asked the age of Thomas le Botiller at the time of the said alienation, and said he was sixteen years of age. They said that the profits thereof from that time to the death of the said Thomas are nothing, that the said Thomas left no male heir, that the said Nicholas and Richard died leaving no male heir, that William le Botiller son to the said Peter is his nearest heir and that he is seven years of age, and they do not know who is his guardian. It was therefore decided that the King's hand should be removed from the said manors saving the services of Thomas and Francis Brune, and that the said manors with their revenues from the time of the death of the said Thomas should be handed over to the said Philip according to the form of the charter, saving always the rights of the King.'

Note :—The act here given is not to be found in the " Statutes at Large of the Parliaments of Ireland" (1786), though obviously passed in one of Henry VIII's parliaments in Ireland from 1534-1543. As Anne Boleyn is named as Queen of England, the act must have been passed at some time between 1534 and 1536. Its object is to prevent Edmund and Theobald Butler, elder but illegitimate brothers of Sir Piers Butler, and their heirs from benefiting by an act of legitimation passed in the Irish Parliament of 1468 in their favour. Sir Piers Butler was created Earl of Ossory in February 1528 at the time of the agreement made between the King and the various heirs of Thomas Butler, Earl of Ormond.

For the full text of this repealing statute see an inspeximus of Henry VIII in October 1536 in the impending volume IV of this Calendar.

Dorso : An entayle of lands in Com. Corke. J.N.

Note : This interesting deed relative to the Cogans or Gogans in county Cork seems to be a 15th century copy of an earlier deed. The King is obviously one of the first three Edwards and the title of King of France is not given. The Robert Calf of the deed would appear to have flourished in the later part of Edward II's or early part of Edward III's reign. For references to him and to the witnesses such as David de Rupe, John de Barry, etc., see Rot. Pat. Canc. Hib. Cal. (1810). On p. 646 (30 Edward III) there is a reference to John Calf who was then dead and to his widow Margery. On p. 71, ibid (32 Edward III), there is a reference to Thomas Calf, deceased, who held land in fee of the heir of John Calf, late baron of Norragh. 'Le Veel' was an alternative name for this family. On p. 40, ibid (8 Edward III), the lands of Walter le Veel are mentioned which he held in the barony of Norragh of the King in chief and which were in the King's hands through the minority of John, son and heir of William le Veel (consanguineus) of the said Walter. On p. 40, ibid, we find Henry Cogan as a justice for Gaol delivery in Cork and John Cogan is also mentioned. For other Cogans of that period see Index. For the early history of this family see Orpen : Ireland under the Normans, I, pp. 39-50, and III, pp. 118-132 (where the above place-names are identified) and passim; and for the Cogans and le Veels see volumes I and II of this Calendar of Ormond Deeds.

[Mr Eric St. J. Brooks sends me these valuable notes on the above deed.

" This interesting document is the first real evidence I have seen (apart from the fact that their ancestor was one Miles Cogan) that the Cogans of Huntspill, Somerset, were of the same family as the Irish and Welsh Cogans.

The difficulties of the three more or less contemporary Miles Cogans I have not been fully able to resolve, or to determine definitely whether they were three separate people or could be reduced to two or one. They are :

(1) Miles de Cogan who held two fees (i.e. Cogan in Wales) of the Honour of Gloucester in 1166.

(2) Miles de Cogan, the famous Irish conquistador.

(3) Miles de Cogan, who married Christiana, daughter of Fulk Paynel of Bampton, Devan and Huntspill, Somerset, by descent from whom his grandson John de Cogan succeeded in 1266 to the Paynel property. (See my "Marisco Family," Journal R.S.A.I., June 1931, p. 24).

As for (1) the manor of Cogan was held in 6 Henry IV by Robert son of Geoffrey Cogan of Douglas, county Cork, etc., head of the Irish family (Calendar of State Papers, Carew Misc., Book of Howth, pp. 362, 363); and earlier than that, as your deed shows, by John son of John Cogan. Your Robert Calf was either a trustee or the husband of a Cogan widow, holding through the "courtesy of England." These Cogans could not therefore have been descended from Miles de Cogan, the conquistador. Dr. Orpen's view (as strengthened by your Calendar of Ormond Deeds, vol. I, Deed 41) that Miles left an only daughter and heiress Margaret, who married a De Courcy, I think, holds the field. Therefore the Cogans of Cork must have descended from his brother Richard, the only other source for the Irish Cogans that we know of. And therefore the Miles de Cogan who held Cogan in Wales in 1166 was not the conquistador, but probably his father, while Richard was the conquistador's elder brother. We may I think almost certainly decide as follows :

The first Miles de Cogan was lord of Cogan in 1166. His eldest son was Richard de Cogan of Cogan and Douglas in county Cork, etc. His younger son was Miles the famous Irish conquistador, who divided the kingdom of Cork with Robert fitz Stephen, and whose heiress Margaret married de Courcy. The elder brother Richard is represented in your deed as above by John son of John de Cogan, lord of Douglas, etc., in 19 Edward II or III ; and in 6 Henry IV by Robert son of Geoffrey Cogan.

Your deed shows that Richard Cogan of Huntspill (born 1299, succeeded his father in 1315, had livery of his lands in 1320 and died 1368) was a relation. Now he was descended from a Miles de Cogan who married Christinia Paynel. The date of the marriage is unknown, but say around 1200. This was not Miles de Cogan, the conquistador (on Orpen's, theory though G. W. Watson in the Complete Peerage, under Cogan, maintains, I think, without proper proof, that he was). He seems to be too late for Miles, the head of the family in 1166. And so I think he must have been a descendant of the Irish Richard, perhaps a younger son. As Richard (on my view) held Cogan in Wales, there is no impossibility in his son marrying an English woman. Moreover, although these deeds of settlement mention quite remote kinsfolk in the successive remainders, we must not make Richard of Huntspill too remote from John son of John of your deed.

Failing Irish evidence one naturally turns to the dates of Richard Cogan of Huntspill to date your deed. But here there is little help for either 19 Edward II or III which would suit him. In the "Calendar of State Papers" (op. cit. pp. 362, 363) there are numerous variants of your place-names. For the "Newtown of Moinmorgogan in Wales" read the "Newtown of Monmor Cogan in Wales.]"

Letters patent by the sovereign of Kilkenny, Geoffrey Rothe, and the council of the same town, to the effect that at the request of Peter, Earl of Ormond, they have inspected a certain patent of King Edward made to Sir James son of James le Butiler, Earl of Ormond, of the liberties and knight's fees in county Tipperary and of the prize wines of Ireland, sealed with the great seal of King Edward in green wax, the tenour of which is as follows.

" 'Edward, King of England, etc., to all greeting. Know that whereas We on the 10th day of November in the 21st year of our reign [November 10, 1347] by our letters patent granted to our dear cousin James son of James le Botiller, lately Earl of Ormond, the name and honour of Earl of Ormond and the regality and knight's fees and other liberties and the things that we then had in county Tipperary, saving only the four pleas of the Crown and the profits of the Crosses, to have and to hold for the whole of his life in the same way that his father had them / afterwards on the 10th day of January in the 29th year of our reign [January 10, 1356], our said cousin having petitioned us that whereas the manors of Clonmel, Kilfekill and Kilshilan / which belonged to Maurice fitz Thomas, then Earl of Desmond, in the said county at the time in which the late Earl, father of our said cousin, had while he lived such a regality, fees and liberties by our grant so made to our aforesaid cousin / did, in virtue of a certain outlawry made against the aforesaid Earl of Desmond for divers seditions and felonies for which the said then Earl of Desmond was indicted and convicted, come into our hands ; through which our said cousin had in these manors aforesaid the same regality, etc., that he had in other places, yet the said outlawry afterwards at the suit of the same Earl of Desmond was annulled and the said manors along with others were restored to him out of our hands, to be held as he held them formerly. Now therefore We, wishing to reward our cousin for the good service done and to be done to us, grant that he may have the regality and other liberties, etc., which he had in these manors as in other places in the same county according to the force and effect of our grant aforesaid.

“Ac postmodum decimo die Januarii anno dicti regni nostri vicesimo nono prefato consanguineo nostro nobis supplicante ut cum maneria de Clonmell Kilfekill et Kilshilan cum pertinenciis que fuerunt Mauricii filii Thomas (sic) tunc Comitis de Dessemound in comitatu predicto in quibus predictus nuper Comes pater ipsius consanguinei nostri huiusmodi regalitatem feoda et libertates sicut in aliis locis dicti comitatus dum vixit habuit tempore concessionis nostre predictae prefato consanguineo nostro sic facte occasione cuiusdam utlagarie in ipsum tunc Comitem de Dessemound pro diversis sedicionibus et feloniis unde idem tunc Comes de Dessemound in dicta terra Hibernie indictatus et rettatus fuit ut dicitur in manu nostra fuissent per quod idem consanguineus noster regalitatem feoda et alias libertates et res sic sibi per nos concessa in maneriis predictis sicut predictus pater suus habuit in eisdem non extitit assecutus/ dictaque utlagaria postmodum ad sectam predicti tunc Comitis de Dessemound adnullata et maneria predicta cum pertinenciis inter alia maneria terras et tenementa que fuerunt ipsius tunc Comitis de Dessemound ea occasione in manum nostram tunc capta eidem tunc Comiti de Dessemound restituta fuissent tenenda prout ea tenuit antequam maneria terre et tenementa illa sic capta fuerunt in manum nostram/ vellemus eidem consanguineo nostro concedere quod ipse regalitatem feoda etc. huiusmodi extunc in maneriis predictis sicut et in ceteris locis infra comitatum predictum habere posset iuxta vim et formam concessionis nostre supradictae.”)

‘We also wish and have granted by other letters patent of ours that our said cousin may have the above regality, etc., saving the four pleas and profit of the Crosses for the whole of his life. So that after his death the said regality may return to us and our heirs.'

'And also on the 20th day of November in the 21st year of our reign [November 20, 1347] by other letters patent of ours, we granted to the said our cousin, because he is of our blood, by the name of James son and heir of James le Botiller, late Earl of Ormond, our prize of wines in the ports of Ireland, for the whole of his life, as his father held it by grant of Lord Edward our father, so that after the death of the same James the prize shall be returned to us.'

'Now we, in consideration of the grateful and fruitful service done to us by the Earl of Ormond especially in our wars in Ireland, and wishing to do our cousin special grace, have confirmed to him the regality and liberties of Tipperary both in the said manors as in other places (saving the above pleas and crosses) as also the prize of wines in Ireland save in the ports of Ireland. To have and to hold to him and the heirs male of his body in the same manner as the said late Earl his father had them for life, which said prize of wines in the land of Ireland/ saving the said ports of Youghul and Kinsale, in which ports we have granted the prize of wines to our said cousin by name by virtue of our grants thereupon made to him as is aforesaid.

3) Elia who was the wife of William Stokes seeks against John Folyot and Emmelina his wife a third part of eight messuages and one acre of land and meadow outside the bar (barram) at Clonmel which came to her from the free tenement which was the said William's, formerly her husband. The said John and Emmelina come and John offers to return to the said party one messuage and one acre of land at the command of the sheriff. And as for two messuages he says that William was not seised in demesne as of fee in them on the day he married her nor afterwards so that he was able to endow her in them. And so he seeks inquisition by jury. And as regards three messuages he says that after the death of Sybilla Northewich, formerly wife of said William, who held the said messuage in heritage, etc., he entered upon the same as by law of England and so was seised in estate of them, and seeks judgment. And if the said Elia denies this, he seeks inquisition by a jury. And as for one messuage which formerly was John Bristow's and John Astell's he says that a certain Eva, formerly wife of John Bristow, was endowed thereof so that the said William had nothing in said third part except at the will of Eva, who survives. He also says that Fides la Botiller, formerly wife of John Astell, after the death of said John was endowed in a third part of the said messuage and demised it to William at her will, which Fides still survives. And as regards two parts of said messuage he says that said William was not seised thereof when he married Elia, nor ever. And as regards the residue of said messuages he says that Elia was endowed in other tenements in allowance. And so he seeks for a jury. Who come and say on oath that William was not seised in demesne of two messuages which formerly were John Palmer's when he married the same Elia, nor ever thereafter. So that William had no estate in one messuage and two shops (celdis) which formerly belonged to Sibilla, formerly his wife, except estate by the law of England. And as to a messuage outside the bar of Clonmel on the west

Pleas of assizes held at Clonmel before Walter Lenfaunt, knight, seneschal of the Liberty of Tipperary, on Monday next after All Souls in the 48th year of Edward III [November 6, 1374].

Assize to inquire if Thomas Comyn and Emma his wife unlawfully and without judgment disseised John son of Matthew Loundres of his free tenement in Tyllaghmethan, in which they disseised him of fifty-three acres of land in the same town. Thomas and Emma come by Walter Sall their bailiff and answer as regards the tenement in question and say that they never made any unlawful detention or disseisin against said John and ask that this be decided by an assize. A jury is summoned and say on oath that long before said John had any interest in said tenements a certain (torn away: Jordan) Comyn was seised in demesne as of fee in same and gave them to a certain John Loundres, great-grandfather (proavo) of the said John (? : torn away) who now seeks recovery, whose heir he is, by service for the term of life of the same John, great-grandfather. And same John, great-grandfather, gave the same tenements to a certain Adam Loundres his son, which Adam had estate in them for four years during the life of same John his father. And the same John died and Adam had his estate in the same tenements for twenty years without any claim or contradiction of the same Jordan. And Adam had a son called Matthew and same Matthew had a son John, now the claimant. Matthew died during Adam's life and afterwards Adam died seised of the above tenements and John who now is entered into the above tenements as kinsman and heir of Adam and was seised thereof. They say also that said Jordan had a certain daughter and heiress Elena, who had a daughter and heiress, the said Emma [torn away], who took as husband the said Thomas Comyn. And said Thomas entered the above tenements by right of same Emma his wife as kin and heiress to said Jordan. And said John who now is, etc, [torn away]. And of such estate Thomas and Emma were seised on the day of the request for a writ. The jury, asked what damages, say six marks. Asked if the entry was made vi et armis they say no. And so to judgment. And because the court is not yet decided on judgment, a day is given to them for deciding on Monday next after the feast of the Annunciation of the B.V.M. at Clonmel at the trial of pleas.

writ directed from England to the Treasurer and Barons of the said Exchequer, account for 33*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* of the fee-farm of that city for Michaelmas term in the 37th year of the present King, and for 100*l.* of the said farm for a year and a half preceding, that is 66*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* yearly, making 133*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* in all.

Paid into the Treasury by five tallies 33*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*

Paid to James le Botiller, son and heir of James le Botiller, late Earl of Ormond, due to the late Earl and Eleanor his wife for the said terms in payment of the 10*l.* yearly which the King granted to the said James, late Earl of Ormond, and his heirs for ever, under the name and honour of Earls of Ormond, receiving it from the farm of the said city by the hands of the mayor and bailiffs, as is more fully contained in the King's grant to the said earl. And the King instructed the mayor and bailiffs to allot the said 10*l.* yearly in the term of the city with the portion assigned in dower to Eleanor, widow of the said Earl, and they are quit by the King's writ in their account in the roll of the 21st year of the present King, as also appears by letters of acquittance which they delivered at the exchequer 20*l.*

And the King commanded the said mayor and bailiffs to allot the said 40*l.* yearly in their term at the exchequer of Dublin in recompense for the said forty librates, as appears by letters patent of the King at the end of the said city's account in the roll of the 32nd year, and by the King's writ which is allotted in the Marshal's bin (forulo) among the writs from England, and by letters of acquittance of the said
