INTRODUCTION

It took ten years for the Lords and Commons to deliberate on the setting up of the Registry of Deeds.<sup>1</sup> An Act of Parliament (6 Anne, Chap. 2) entitled "An Act for the Public Registering of all Deeds Conveyances and Wills that shall be made of any Honours, Manors, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments" enacted "that one public office shall be established and kept in the city of Dublin" and thus led to the creation in the year 1708 of the Irish Registry of Deeds. In this Act is included provision for the registration of all Wills and devises in writing where "the devisor or testatrix shall die after the said 25th March 1708." The registration or otherwise of Deeds was a matter of choice for the party or parties concerned, a minor compulsion lying in the stipulation that Deeds not registered "were deemed and adjudged fraudulent and void." This proviso has since been much modified by various decisions of the Courts.

In the initial period of the Registry's existence the words "Deeds, Conveyances and Wills" enjoyed a wide interpretation, and many Deeds which would not now be considered acceptable were registered. This catholicity of the subject matter of the Deeds has been of the greatest value to those interested in the family history of the period. For the genealogist the Wills registered have now a special importance because they replace some of those destroyed in the Record Office, Dublin, in 1922, when virtually all the original Irish Prerogative and Consistorial Wills perished.<sup>2</sup> The existence of the Wills at the Registry of Deeds has been almost unknown outside the limited number of persons engaged in research there. In order to find the Wills for

<sup>2</sup> Before 1857, Wills were proved in the Consistorial Court, that is, the Court of the Bishop or Ordinary, within whose diocese or jurisdiction the testator dwelt; but if there were effects to the value of £5 (called bona notabilia) in two or more dioceses the Will had to be proved in the Prerogative Court of the Archbishop of Armagh, Primate of All Ireland, which was the Supreme Court in matters of which the ecclesiastical jurisdiction had cognisance. The jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Courts was abolished and transferred to the Probate Court by the Court of Probate Act, 1857 (20 and 21 Vict., c. 79).

Sir William Betham, Ulster King of Arms, compiled his valuable Will Pedigrees from the Prerogative Wills up to the year 1800. His volumes of these pedigrees, now at the Genealogical Office, Dublin Castle, have been used in checking many doubtful points met with in Wills recorded at the Registry of Deeds.

this Volume alone it was necessary to read through the two entire Index of Grantors series 1708-1729, 1730-1745, covering references to over eighty-three thousand recorded Deeds of all kinds. If any Wills remain undetected the laborious nature of this essential preliminary work must be my excuse. By continuing this search through the Index of Grantors series over two thousand Wills have already been traced. No official Index of these has ever been compiled.

Wills are recorded at the Registry of Deeds in one of three ways, which, for the sake of brevity, I have termed "Full," "Narrate" and "Précis." A Will described as "Full" in the following abstracts is one which was registered in the testator's own words. While proof that every clause was set down is seldom available, the fact that trivial matters are recorded would imply that nothing of importance was omitted during registration. A Will recorded in the third person singular, that is a "Narrate," was probably read through clause by clause and the testator's provisions registered. Relationships are often difficult to follow in Wills recorded in the narrative form, the use of the third person singular leading to confusion between the testator and the other persons mentioned in the Will. A "Précis" of a Will is not infrequently very short.<sup>1</sup> The testator's lands are generally referred to as his real estate in a given county, and there is usually little further information other than the names of the persons, trustees or executors to whom the lands are assigned. In all three forms of registration the names and addresses of the witnesses to the Will are recorded, together with the names of the persons who witness the signing and sealing of the memorial registered. Registered Wills and Deeds are therefore documents of undoubted authenticity.

Transcripts of the memorials of Wills and other Deeds may be inspected at the Registry of Deeds, Henrietta Street, Dublin, on payment of a small fee.<sup>2</sup> Transcripts, written in the eighteenth century on vellum and thereafter on vellum or good parchment, are bound into large heavy Books measuring about 22 inches by 17 inches. The original memorials, signed and sealed by the person registering the Will or Deed, and often with interesting seals attached, are stored in files in a fireproof vault. The original memorials should always be examined when there is any doubt as to the accuracy of the copies transcribed into the Books. Signatures are often distinctive and comparison of them may help to establish the identity or otherwise of persons of the same name—this is a particularly useful method of distinguishing between a father and son with the same address. A word of warning is, however, necessary about the seals attached to the original memorials. Some, it is true, are armorial, but fancy seals abound. Before deciding that an armorial seal belonged to the person beside whose signature it appears the memorials placed in the file before and after the Deed in question should be examined. It sometimes happened that when several Deeds were registered at the same time the one seal was used on all.

Method adopted in making abstracts

The abstracts were made from the transcripts of the Wills, doubtful points in many cases having been checked with the original memorials. The abstracts are numbered in chronological order of registration. Following the name and address of the testator is his occupation, if mentioned in the Will. After the date of signing the Will comes the description of how it is recorded at the Registry of Deeds, (that is, whether in "full," "narrate" or "précis" form), the length of the memorial registered and the date of registration.<sup>1</sup> The relatives are listed next as they are described by the testator. Ambiguous descriptions are, unfortunately, often used, particularly in the case of Wills recorded in the third person singular. In order to give every possible clue to the correct identity of the persons named all surnames have been copied. Following the relatives come the names and address of all other legatees, trustees, executors, etc. and any outstanding legacy of general interest. Less important legacies to charities have been omitted from the abstracts but bequests to churches are included as this information is sometimes helpful to the research worker. The lands detailed by the testator are then listed, and the name and address of any tenants mentioned. (Long accounts of the history of the holding of lands are often recited by testators, too long to appear in these brief abstracts. The names of grantors are, however, always given in the abstracts in cases where the exact localities of the lands are either not mentioned at all by the testator or are not clearly stated; a search under the names of these grantors in the Names

<sup>1</sup> In this volume of Abstracts all dates are Old Style, that is according to the Old Style official year which commenced on Lady Day, 25th March. Some dates would seem to imply that a Will was registered before it was written by the testator. In such cases the date of registration has been amended.

Index of Grantors at the Registry would probably bring further facts to light.) The names of the witnesses to the signing of the Will are next shown, followed by the names of those who witness the registration of the memorial of the Will after the testator's death. One of these, usually an executor named in the Will, signs and seals the memorial. By quoting the number of the Book, page and memorial, which are given at the end of each abstract, a certified copy of the Will from which the abstract was made can be obtained.<sup>2</sup>

Personal and place names in abstracts

The indexing of personal names presented many difficulties and it was decided to err on the side of over-indexing rather than under-indexing. For instance A . . . B . . . names "my daughter Mary" without giving her a surname. She could be his own daughter, his daughter-in-law or his step-daughter. In some cases, of course, the correct surname can be inferred from a reference to grandchildren. In order that the daughter Mary may appear in the Index of Persons at all it is necessary to include her under the testator's surname. The fact, therefore, that a surname appears in the Index of Persons does not imply that it should be read into the abstract. Married daughters are indexed under both their maiden and married surnames.

More difficult still was the indexing of place names. All too often a testator lists place names without any indication of county or barony. Where it has been possible to ascertain the precise location of any particular place the county has been inserted within square brackets in the abstracts. Place names have been copied as they were found in the transcripts of the Wills; when, as sometimes occurs, a place name is spelled in various ways in the same transcript I have inserted the alternative in round brackets after the form which is first found. Again, it must not be forgotten that the names of many townlands have altered in the course of the last two centuries. Sometimes the change is radical, the earlier name being replaced by a later one; in other cases anglicisation has almost obliterated the original form of the Irish name. The difficult—though fascinating—task of identifying places referred to or of furnishing the modern equivalent of eighteenth century place names is, of course, outside the scope of this work. Nevertheless I could not accept without some investigation a place name which seemed particularly unusual in sound or spelling, and where I have considered the result of this topographical research worthy of incorporation—as a suggestion—it is to be found in square brackets after the doubtful place name.

It will be noticed that a testator occasionally makes a bequest of his real estate; he may mention the county or counties in which his lands lie, or even detail the lessees or tenants, but he, or the persons who registered the memorial of the Will, fails to supply the actual place names. In these cases the testator's place of residence is probably some indication of where his lands were situated.

In conclusion I must stress the importance, from the genealogical point of view in particular, of the vast mass of material other than Wills at the Registry of Deeds. Provided the members of a family owned property in Ireland something is sure to be found on record about them; for in the early eighteenth century though other forms of investment were becoming available, money was still largely tied up in land. Searches can be made by working on the Names Index of Grantors for any period after 1708, or Deeds for any given townland can be traced through the Lands Index series for the county concerned.<sup>1</sup> Wills, marriage settlements, leases and releases, mortgages, declarations of trust, proposals and acceptances (dealing with business matters, not matrimony), conveyances and other forms of recorded Deeds all yield their quota of genealogical data. These documents are not all necessarily of historical value, but they are useful in supplying corroborative evidence.<sup>2</sup> Mr. Weir emphasises this in a paper on the subject.<sup>3</sup> He points out that to the student of history the Deeds indicate the growth of various places such as Belfast and Dublin, and the decline of corporate towns such as Swords and Fethard which <sup>1</sup> There is, unfortunately, no Index of Grantees. For some counties, Lists of Freeholders, compiled during the last half of the eighteenth century, exist; they supply the name of the freeholder and the name of the landlord, or failing that the name of the townland held by the tenant. Several of these valuable lists of Freeholders, collected by Thos. U. Sadleir, Deputy Ulster King of Arms to 1943, are now at the Genealogical Office, Dublin Castle. (See "Forgotten Sources of Irish Genealogy," T. U. Sadleir, The Irish Genealogist, Oct. 1938, Vol. 1, No. 4). Griffith's Primary Valuation of Rateable Property in Ireland published in the middle of the nineteenth century, lists townlands, occupiers and immediate lessors. These sources provide clues which may be pursued at the Registry of Deeds.

<sup>2</sup> Research must be undertaken either personally or through an agent. The organisation and rules of the Department preclude the transaction of such business by correspondence.

<sup>3</sup> "The Registry of Deeds, Ireland" by Samuel Weir, Bulletin of the Irish Committee on Historical Sciences, No. 26, April, 1943; summary of a paper read to the Conference of Irish Historians, 21 March, 1943.

were once flourishing communities. The growth of Limerick and Galway, he says, gives further evidence of the trend from country to city. The social historian will find interest in the transactions of such notable people as Swift and his friends, Charles J. Fox, Grattan, Wolfe Tone, Maria Edgeworth, Robert Emmet, the Duke of Wellington, and Daniel O'Connell.<sup>1</sup>

I am indebted to the Registrar of Deeds, Mr. J. M. O'Byrne, B.L., for his kind permission to make these abstracts. Work was commenced under the guidance of the late Mr. Samuel S. Weir, whose enthusiasm and patient help in preparing plans I shall ever remember with gratitude. Thanks are due to Dr. Edward MacLysaght, Chief Herald of Ireland and Keeper of Manuscripts, National Library, for permission to use the MSS. at the Genealogical Office, Dublin Castle, for purposes of checking doubtful points in some Wills,<sup>2</sup> to Mr. Gerard Slevin for his advice about place names, and to Prof. J. Otway-Ruthven for her assistance. Finally, I must express my best thanks to the officials and staff at the Registry of Deeds for their unfailing help and courtesy.
