INTRODUCTION

BOOKS OF SURVEY AND DISTRIBUTION

THE following text of the Book of Survey and Distribution for each Irish County is taken from the set of Books of Survey and Distribution, also called Distribution Books, formerly in official use in the Quit Rent Office, and now lodged in the Public Record Office, Dublin. All the counties of Ireland are included in the series which consists of twenty strongly bound large folio volumes (17½" x 13"), covered in green vellum; the county name or names and the Quit Rent Office serial number are printed in gold lettering on the spine of each volume; the further endorsement "Down Survey" is printed between the name of the county and the serial number. Since a common character and history applies to all volumes of the set the series as a whole may first, perhaps, be considered, special features of the actual county being noticed at a later stage (p. xxxiii). From the further circumstances that other series of Books of Survey and Distribution are extant, it is necessary to refer primarily to the particular identity of the Quit Rent Office set as described in the 56th Report (pp. 305-6) of the Deputy Keeper (Mr. J. F. Morrissey) of the Public Record Office (Ireland):

"This set is apparently the series of Distribution Books, Record Commissioners' Reports, Vol. II, p. 627. They are duplicates or copies of the set from the Auditor-General's Office which was preserved in the Record Office . . ."

The series described at the page of the Reports, above mentioned, forms the first item of a list signed by James Hardiman, a sub-commissioner of the Record Commission captioned "Classified Schedule of the contents of the Quit Rent Office, Custom House, Dublin."¹ In columns headed "Number of Books" and "Number of each Species" twenty volumes of "Distribution Books" are listed county by county for the whole of Ireland, two, and sometimes three counties usually adjoining being shown to form a single volume. The list is prefaced by a brief description of the nature of the volumes:

"Distribution Books containing the names of the proprietors and forfeiting persons in 1641, the names of the lands, number of acres profitable and unprofitable, and to whom they were distributed under the Act of Settlement." The "commencing date" is stated to be "Charles II."

The summary now here given indicates the arrangement of the twenty volumes as shown by the Record Commissioners' Reports, an arrangement which has since prevailed. The figures within square brackets represent the Quit Rent Office numeration printed as already mentioned, on the spine of each volume:

3 volumes each containing three counties, viz. Armagh Down and Antrim [No. 1], Fermanagh, Monaghan and Cavan [No. 3], Derry, Donegal and Tyrone [No. 7]

7 volumes each containing two counties, viz. Kildare and Carlow [No. 2], Dublin and Wicklow [No. 8], Kerry and Waterford [No. 11], Wexford and Kilkenny [No. 12], King's and Queen's counties [No. 13], Westmeath and Longford [No. 16], Meath and Louth [No. 17].

5 volumes each containing one county, viz. Cork [No. 6], Limerick [No. 15], Mayo [No. 18], Tipperary [No. 19], Roscommon [No. 20]

4 volumes of which two contain the county of Clare [Nos. 4 and 5] and two the county of Galway [Nos. 9 and 10] and

1 volume containing the counties of Leitrim, Sligo and the barony of Tyrawley, Co. Mayo [No. 14]

The Auditor-General's series, of which the foregoing volumes are copies, is listed in the same Report of the Record Commissioners (page 304) and there described as "Books of Survey and Distribution." The number and arrangement of the volumes are identical with the number and arrangement of the copies described above. Of their character, however, a fuller and more precise description is given and as this equally applies to the Quit Rent Office set it is here reproduced:

"These books are complete references to the maps in the Surveyor-General's Office, except the books of Galway, Mayo and Roscommon of which there are no corresponding maps of the Down Survey² and appear to be references to Strafford's Survey; most of the books also contain references to the Civil Survey of both of which last named Surveys, the maps are lost or were probably burned in the fire of 1711.³ These books must have been made after the Down Survey in 1655 but refer to the forfeitures in 1641, and to the distribution under the Act of Settlement; also to the forfeitures in 1688 and sale thereof in 1701."⁴ A further note states, under the heading of "Arrangement," that there is an index to each county.

² The Down Survey included the barony of Tyrawley, Mayo: see Hardinge's list in Mapped and Townland Surveys, Trans. R.I.A., vol. XXIV, p. 97; also, according to the same source, some maps for Galway pp. 95 and 96.

The Auditor-General's set perished in 1922.

That the Quit Rent Office Books of Survey and Distribution are copies of the Auditor-General's series is evidenced by a communication or order, dated 18th December, 1759, directed to the Clerk of the Quit Rent Office by the Commissioners of H.M. Revenue who were then charged with the management of the Land Revenues of the Crown in Ireland and of which Quit etc. Rents formed a part. From this communication which is here printed as entered in the Quit Rent Office letter-book for the period A.D. 1734-63 it appears (1) that Books of Survey and Distribution were in December, 1759, lodged in the Quit Rent Office (2) that "the said Books properly belonged" to the Auditor-General's Office and (3) that "a copy of the said Distribution Books" was in the Forfeiture Office where it was not required.⁵ It was accordingly directed that the Books belonging to the Auditor-General should be returned to his Office, the "copy" thereof in the Forfeiture Office "to be removed" to the Quit Rent Office. A receipt dated 22nd December, 1759, entered in the Quit Rent Office letter-book, already cited, and signed "Henry Meredyth, Deputy Auditor-General" evidences the immediate return to the office indicated of "Twenty Books

³ No maps accompanied the Civil Survey A.D. 1654-56.

"The Board having given directions to Mr. Howard, solicitor for the King's rents, to apply to the Court of Exchequer to strike off all double charges, and Mr. Howard having by memorial acquainted the Board that upon application for the Constats accordingly the Auditor General had informed him that he could not grant them because the Distribution Books from which alone they could be taken are in the Quit Rent Office, that the said Books properly belonging to the Auditor General's Office and that there is a copy of the said Distribution Books in the Forfeiture Office which are of no use there as the Business of the said Office relates only to the Forfeitures of 1688 and the Distribution Books relate to the Forfeitures of 1641 and proposing that the said copies be removed from the Forfeiture Office to the Quit Rent Office. The Board direct that the Distribution Books be accordingly delivered to the Auditor General on a proper receipt to the Board for the same and that the copies 'to' be removed from ye Forfeiture Office to the Quit Rent Office. By Order of the Commissioners, Richd. Ponsonby. To the Clerk of the Quit Rent Office." Q.R.O. series of letter books p. 93—P.R.O. 2B-42-139. There is, unfortunately, a gap in this series for the period 1716-1734.

of Distribution" by the hands of "Richard Vernon Esq., Clerk of the Quit Rents."

Though the precise date of the removal of the volumes from the Forfeiture Office to the Quit Rent Office has not, so far, been determined it is probable that the requirements of the latter Office were such as to demand their immediate transfer. A list, however, of books and documents contained in the Quit Rent Office, dated 28th February, 1813, furnished to the Record Commissioners by the Clerk of the Quit Rents, Mr. William Bower, includes "Twenty Books of Survey and Distribution under the Act of Settlement"; these are described as "copies."⁶ No such item appears in a return, of a similar nature, made by the Forfeiture Office, a further circumstance corroborative of the removal as directed by the Commissioners of Revenue. It may be added that a list, without date, of documents mostly Ms. volumes contained in the Quit Rent Office found amongst a miscellaneous collection of Quit Rent Office papers, now lodged in the Public Record Office, refers to "20 Books of Survey and Distribution perfect and authenticated transcripts of all the originals in the Auditor-General's Office."⁷

At a later stage the former close association of the Auditor-General's Office with the Quit Rent Office, and the circumstances governing the origin of the copies, and the succession of their custody will be noticed. For the present it is sufficient to state that every page of the twenty volumes is initialed at foot and at the end of each volume, noted as examined either by "Wm. Hawkins, Clerk in the Qt. Rts." or by "ff. Guybon, Dep. Clk. Qt. Rts." Similarly the "Alphabet" or index of denominations of land, preceding the text of each county, is noted as examined by either of these officials. The approximate period of copying may be inferred from a note in one of the two volumes for Clare [No. 4]: "Finished Ye Exmn. of this 18th August, 1739, ff. G."

Throughout the twenty volumes the framework of the text, to which there is no title page, is the same save in one important connection presently to be mentioned. Large folio sheets, containing as many as ten columns, constitute the tabular arrangement within which the various particulars indicated by the excerpts from the Record Commissioners' Reports noted above, are entered. These are assembled on a territorial basis, the baronies within the respective counties constituting the distinguishing geographical units; further useful localisation is provided in the specification of parochial sub-divisions. Across the top of each folio page, the names of the county, barony and parish are written in large script; where a second parish appears on a folio, it is likewise prominently indicated. Clarity and uniformity characterise the handwriting of the copyist whose bold caligraphy throughout may be said to be almost as legible now as when first written.

The exception to the consistency of the format is in the apparently casual provision of headings or captions explanatory of the particulars recorded in the various columns. These headings are furnished for nine counties only, particulars of which are given here;⁸ they appear on the opening page of the first barony but are not repeated except in the case of two counties comprising the one volume. It may be said that these headings, more comprehensive in some instances than in others, provide, substantially, so far as internal evidence is concerned, the clue to the significance of the major part of the whole compilation since they indicate most of the sources from which the particulars returned have been derived. While those appearing in the present text for this county might be cited, with qualification, by way of illustration, the headings appearing in the Cork volume are of a more representative nature and are here accordingly reproduced from page 1 of the volume for that county; the figures appearing within parentheses are provided to facilitate further reference:

(1) "Number of reference in the Alphabet	(7) No. of Profitable Acres disposed of on ye Acts
(2) Number of Plot in the Downe Survey	(8) To whom soe disposed with their Tytle whether by Decree, Certificate or Patent Reference to ye Record thereof
(3) Proprietors in Anno 1640 and their Qualifications	(9) No. of the Book or Roll and No. of ye Page or Skin
(4) Denominacons	(10) No. of Prof. acres remaining undisposed "
(5) Number of Unprofitable Acres by the Downe Survey
(6) No. of Acres profitable by the Downe Survey

Observations are called for in respect of a number of these headings and as to the manner in which certain columns are utilised throughout the series as a whole to record transactions quite distinct from those indicated by their captions.

As regards (1) "Number of Reference in the Alphabet" the relative column is blank for every county except Clare and Roscommon; this item was again referred to when the text for the latter county was discussed (Vol. 1, p. xxxvii).

With reference to (3) "Names of Proprietors in 1640 and their Qualifications," the year 1641 appears correctly in the headings of other volumes where 1640 is given in this instance. The "Qualifications" viz. "Irish Papist" "English Protestant" or simply "Protestant" when stated are expressed respectively in contracted forms: "I.P." "Engl Prot." or "Prot." The source from which such particulars were taken is shown by the appropriate heading in the Leitrim volume [No. 14] to have been the "Civil Survey"; that this was the source is confirmed by other series of Books of Survey and Distribution.⁹ For parts of Connacht in respect of which neither the Civil Survey nor the Down Survey was made, the Survey of circa A.D. 1636, known as Strafford's Survey, was adopted. The extent to which this was utilised will be noticed later. It may here be stated, however, that Strafford's Survey is not referred to specifically in any headings as a source from which particulars were drawn.

The heading at (8) indicates that in conjunction with the names of persons, to whom lands had been disposed, particulars are furnished of the instruments of their titles. While the names of such persons are given, the other details are not provided in the manner intimated, that is, by explicit reference to documents and dates thereof; but various distinctive marks or signs appearing immediately after the names of such persons are utilised to express merely the nature of the different instruments of title. This disappointing and, at first sight, mystifying feature characterises the entire series; it is, however, somewhat mitigated by the existence of a "Key" compiled in explanation of the Auditor-General's set and is available at the Public Record Office. Through the courtesy of the former Deputy Keeper, Mr. James F. Morrissey, this has been availed of for the purposes of the present text, the relative markings with their explanations being printed at p. liii.

For the series as a whole the headings (7) to (9) indicate the titles concerned to have been derived under "the

Acts," that is to say, by virtue of instruments issued in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation; corresponding markings¹⁰ signify Letters Patent of A.D. 1662-1684, Decrees of Innocence A.D. 1662-63, Certificates to Adventurers and Soldiers issued by the Courts of Claims A.D. 1666-69 and "Connaught Certificates" A.D. 1676-7. Titles derived under letters patent issued by way of concluding estates in land, left undetermined by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, viz. Commission of Grace Grants A.D. 1684-88, are also indicated by distinctive markings. To these various instruments of title further reference will be made.

As a consequence of the innovation of markings at (8) in substitution for descriptions of instruments of titles no details appear in the adjoining column (9) with reference to the entry or enrolment of the instruments of title concerned.

With reference to (10) "Profitable Acres undisposed," the entries under this head are infrequent and the space available was utilised in conjunction with that of the previous column (9) to set out the details of another transaction presently to be indicated.

Subject to the modifications and adaptations intimated, and to the adoption of the Strafford Survey for certain counties, the particulars given under the remainder of the headings (2) to (8) are furnished in respect of forfeitures (A.D. 1641) throughout the series of Books of Survey and Distribution.

The terms of the headings, as a whole, suggest that the Books of Survey and Distribution were designed originally to express solely the distribution of forfeited lands as authorised by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. When, in this connection, the compilation of the Auditor-General's series began cannot definitely be stated; for the reasons later to be advanced, it may, however, be suggested here that it coincided with the period when the Farm of the Crown Revenues ended, and when Revenue Commissioners were appointed for the management thereof in A.D. 1682.¹¹

Within, however, the columns so reserved, two additional and distinct items of importance not indicated by any headings are furnished. One is concerned with particulars of unforfeited land; the other with those of sales of the Forfeited Estates, A.D. 1688. These items where they occur appear respectively on the left and right hand sides of a Ms. folio page. The particulars given of unforfeited lands consist of the names thereof, usually with their estimated acreages, as well as the names of the owners in AD. 1641. Column (2) reserved for the Down Survey number is utilised to indicate this feature by the insertion there of the letters C.S. these intimating the Civil Survey as the authority for the details appearing in the immediate succeeding columns.

The extent to which this information will be found, in the form indicated, throughout the series is governed by the geographical limitation of the Civil Survey;¹² the non-existence of forfeited lands in particular areas is a further governing circumstance.¹³

As regards the second feature, not indicated by any heading—the sales of the Forfeited Estates, 1688—advantage is shown to have been taken of the space afforded by columns (9) and (10) to which attention has been drawn. The distinctive sign employed here Ⓢ, in conjunction with the particulars furnished—names of purchasers and acreages—indicates Deeds of Sale A.D. 1702-3 made by the Trustees appointed for the sale of these estates.¹⁴

The order of presentation of this wide range of particulars lends a distinctive significance to each side of a folio page. In the sequence of the columns (1) to (6) there is provided the textual arrangement whereby (a) the details relative to forfeited lands derived from the Down Survey (b) the particulars of the proprietors of such lands in 1641, drawn from the Civil Survey, and (c) those, likewise, derived from the same source, relative to unforfeited lands, constitute the survey or left hand side; similarly the columns (7) to (10) containing the details of the disposition of such lands under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, and Commission of Grace (and (d) the further information of the sales of the Forfeited Estates of A.D. 1688), form the Distribution or right-hand side. Hence the origin of the title Books of Survey and Distribution.

¹² In Connacht the county of Leitrim only was included in this Survey; see introduction to Civil Survey publications by Ir.Mss. Commission.

¹⁴ 11 and 12 Wm. III, cap. 2, sec. 1.

¹⁰ Confirmed by collation with abstracts, etc., published in the third vol. of the Record Commission's Reports (1821-25).

¹¹ Lib. Munerum Pub. Hib., vol. 1, pt. II, p. 133.

It may be added that Church lands, Crown lands, and occasionally lands subject to or exempt from rents payable to the Crown, will also be found indicated by symbols and markings.

LEGISLATION AND SOURCES

From what has been stated it will have been manifest that the Books of Survey and Distribution constitute abstracts of numerous documents arising out of the administration of three governments, those of the Commonwealth, Restoration and Revolution. It is necessary therefore, to recall as briefly as may be the originating legislation of such documents, their character, the extent to which they were abstracted and how far confirmation is still possible from what has survived in authenticated copies, printed abstracts or otherwise.

The fountain-head of much of the confiscatory legislation enacted by the Commonwealth and Restoration Parliaments is the Act 16 Car. I, c. 33¹⁵ passed shortly after the beginning of the war of 1641, an event usually referred to in contemporary and subsequent legislative proceedings as the "Rebellion" or "Unnatural insurrection which broke out on the 23rd October" of that year.¹⁶ A well-known feature of this Act was the assignment of two and a half million acres, English measure, and their allotment to persons who had advanced or adventured money for the suppression of the rebellion. In this connection the Act 17 Car. I c. 34 distinguished profitable from unprofitable land, defining the former as meadow, arable and profitable pasture, and the latter as bogs, woods, barren mountains and loughs which were to be "cast in over and above" the confiscated acreage specified¹⁷; each person who had "adventured" money was to be satisfied on this basis. Thus, it would appear, originated the distinction subsequently drawn in the allocation of the forfeited lands, classified as profitable or unprofitable in the various surveys and grants.

A later Act (17 Chas. I cap. 36) contains an important revisory provision, relative to the land measure to be employed, which likewise remained a permanent feature of the ultimate distribution of the confiscated estates. The number of acres to be assigned to each person was to be computed "according to plantation measure" the acre of which is defined by the Act as consisting of inter alia "21 feet to the pole or perch" as contrasted with the English content of 16½ feet:¹⁸

"Therefore be it enacted that every Acre of the said two millions and a half of Acres shall consist of eight score perches or poles, and every perch or pole shall consist of one and twenty foot. And all the said Acres shall be measured forth out of the said Rebels Lands according to that measure."

Under the Act of 17 Car. I, c. 34, already cited, the confiscation was to be effective "without any office or inquisition . . . found"¹⁹ and it was to apply to the estates of all persons in rebellion on the "23rd October, 1641." Again, the basis of the ultimate procedure is foreshadowed by these provisions.

Out of the lands to be assigned and which were to be held in free and common soccage, and not by feudal tenure an acreable and perpetual rent, called, in a later Act,²⁰ a Quit rent, was to be reserved to the Crown according to a scale provided for the different provinces. In later times it may be observed the department charged with the collection of these rents was known as the Quit Rent Office.

Finally, it was directed that when conditions permitted, a survey was to be made of "all the lands of the rebels and all the lands forfeited by virtue of this Act."²¹

More than ten years, however, were to elapse before such conditions materialised as would permit of the determination of the confiscated estates in the manner prescribed.²² In August, 1652, an Act of the Commonwealth Parliament²³ declared that, by virtue of the suppression of the "Rebellion" a position had then been reached when a settlement of the Irish nation might be effected. The preamble intimated that the settlement intended did not contemplate the "extirpation" of the whole Irish nation. A series of "Qualifications" distinguished various punitive circumstances—degrees of guilt in the "horrid rebellion—" under some eight heads, and defined the penalties and forfeitures attaching to the respective persons comprehended thereby. Those falling within the first five were "excepted from pardon for life and estate," the third designating particular persons so excepted. Other penalties were banishment, proportionate forfeiture of estates and removal to such places in Ireland as the Commonwealth might appoint. In this last connection, the seventh and eighth qualifications foreshadowed the subsequent Connacht transplantation project. These refer to persons, not otherwise comprehended, who were to forfeit respectively two-thirds and one-third of their estates. The eighth qualification, being of the widest application may here be cited:²⁴

"That all and every person and persons of the Popish Religion who have resided in Ireland at any time from the 10th day of October, 1641, to the 1st day of March, 1650 and have not manifested their constant good affection to the interest of the Commonwealth of England (the said persons not being comprehended in any of the former qualifications) shall forfeit one-third part of their estates in Ireland to the said Commonwealth, to be disposed of for the use of the said Commonwealth, and the other two-third parts of their respective estates to the proportion or value thereof, to be assigned in such place in Ireland as the Parliament . . . shall think fit to appoint . . . And that all other persons who have resided in Ireland within the time aforesaid, and have not been in actual service for the Parliament, or otherwise manifested their good affections to the interest of the Parliament of England, having opportunity to do the same, shall forfeit one-fifth of their estates to the use of the said Commonwealth."

Throughout most of the Books of Survey and Distribution the qualifications of proprietors of land in 1641 are frequently specified, as already indicated, by the contractions I.P. ("Irish Papist") and "Prot" (Protestant), this latter class being comprehended in the second part of the eighth qualification quoted above, though not stated to be subject to removal.

THE GROSS, CIVIL, AND DOWN SURVEYS

While the proscription of the nation was thus announced the terms of its settlement were not communicated until the following year when a further Act of the 26th September, 1653, declared that forfeited lands within the province of Connacht and Clare, save as excepted, were reserved for the habitation of "all the Irish nation."²⁵ Forfeited lands in the remaining provinces and counties, save those reserved for particular disposition by the Commonwealth were charged with the satisfaction of the claims of the adventurers and soldiers and of other public debts. Ten whole counties were assigned in the first instance for the satisfaction of the claimants in the two former classifications.

An Order in Council (1st June, 1653) for the determination of Adventurers' claims and a Commission with Instructions dated 22nd June, 1653, authorising various surveys were confirmed by and annexed to this Act. In pursuance of the latter and by virtue of a subsequent Commission²⁶ dated 2nd June, 1654, three distinct surveys ultimately emerged: the Gross Survey, the Civil Survey, and, in further pursuance of Articles of Agreement dated 11th December, 1654, between the Surveyor-General and Dr. William Petty, the Down Survey.

The two last named Surveys constituted the main sources from which particulars appearing on the left-hand side of the folio pages of most of the Books of Survey and Distribution were compiled. In one instance only, presently to be specified, has the Gross Survey been found so far to have been utilised as a source for particulars returned in these Books.

It will have been obvious that by virtue of the eighth qualification alone in the Act of 1652, cited above, forfeiture of their estates to a greater or lesser extent as the case might be, was the fate of most of the proprietors of land in Ireland. Before such forfeitures could be applied towards the satisfaction of the various claimants, the lands involved had first to be ascertained and precisely defined before being mapped according to actual admeasurement.

The procedure to be followed in obtaining specified and preliminary particulars of these forfeited estates was also to apply according to the Instructions of June, 1653 to Church lands, to lands belonging to the Crown of England in the year 1630 or since, and to unforfeited lands. For the purposes of the Civil Survey, Courts of Survey were to be set up and the testimony of the oldest inhabitants of the country obtained regarding the following items: Names of the lands and their owners in 1641; the estimated quantities (acreages) qualities and the situation parish by parish of such lands together with their boundaries, rents valuations, letting value in 1640, and whether they were charged with charitable or pious uses; again where mines, quarries or timber trees existed, these were to be indicated.²⁷

The recording of all these details, concerning individual denominations of land, amounted to a descriptive survey of the country, save for those parts of Connacht reserved for the Irish, and for which, when required, the earlier survey of Strafford was available.²⁸ A year, however, was to elapse before this unique account of the land of Ireland was begun. The cause of the delay or postponement is indicated by the final sections of the same Instructions of June, 1653, where it is stated that in order to expedite the plantation of adventurers and soldiers, other means, involving less time and expense than the Survey just indicated, might be found to ascertain the particulars required. Accordingly, a "Gross Survey" was directed to be made of what lands had been forfeited, and an estimate obtained of their quantity; thereby it was hoped allotments could more speedily be made between the adventurers and soldiers and "afterwards . . . a more exact admeasurement."

In these circumstances originated the Gross Survey, on the history of which within recent years, new light has been thrown by Professor R. Dudley Edwards in the course of a review.²⁹

Features and imperfections of the Gross Survey are indicated officially in a "Memorandum" quoted in a communication from the Lord Deputy and Council to the Committee of Adventurers: "That these surveys were taken upon oath and estimated by the acre at the rate of 21 feet to the perch, and that there is no distinction of profitable or unprofitable land, nor any mention made of proprietors or of what lands are forfeited and what not but is a gross survey of the whole contents of the ten counties."³⁰

That Gross Surveys of other counties, subsequently made, contained some particulars as to names of proprietors is evidenced from the fragmentary specimens published in well-known works³¹ and from the one instance of its citation in the Books of Survey and Distribution, namely in the volume for Monaghan county. There in the column reserved for the Down Survey Reference Numbers the "Gross Survey" is recorded as the authority for the details given in respect of the barony of Farney: Names of proprietors and names of denominations of land with the estimated acreages of each, these latter being distinctively set out in the "Profitable" column. The relative unprofitable proportions are nowhere distinguished, nor are the parochial locations given of the numerous lands specified. It is not surprising, therefore, to find an Order of April ²⁹ "It was a gross estimate of the land of each barony prepared under orders issued about 11 July, 1653, to commissioners of the precincts. It has been vaguely accepted that it extended over as much of the country as did the subsequent Civil Survey which covered 27 counties. Most of the surviving evidence connects the Gross Survey with the counties first allotted to the soldiers and adventurers and some of the documents even suggest that it was confined to these . . . But so very confused and imperfect were the first returns for these counties that special persons were nominated to complete with the aid of all available records a 'gross estimate' distinguishing the circuit or largeness of one barony from another; which was completed on the 19th December, 1653. The division between the adventurers and soldiers could consequently be made on the following January 24. In the meantime the survey had been extended to the remaining counties of Leinster, Munster and Ulster and to Sligo in Connacht in order to ascertain the total amount of land at the disposal of the State . . . Hardinge's contention that the Gross Survey included the mapping of part of the country cannot be substantiated." Irish Times, October 2, 1943.

14th, 1654, directing the immediate taking of the Civil Survey, already authorised, by which might be "certainly and distinctively known" the names and situations, qualities, estimated quantities, "meets" and bounds of forfeited lands.³² Shortly afterwards fresh Commissions and instructions, dating from 2 June, 1654, began to be issued for the undertaking of this great descriptive work which in more than one of these commissions was distinctly named the "Civil Survey." Though a Commission was issued as late as 1st September, 1656, two-thirds of this Survey had been completed within a year.

While the account of the boundaries of the various territorial units, for more than three-fourths of Ireland which the Civil Survey had provided, judging by what has survived, might well entitle it to be described as the Boundary Survey of the Gael, its importance to the State, by virtue of other details, transcended these and other valuable descriptive particulars. Forfeiting proprietors defined by the Commonwealth Act of 1652 are so indicated in the Civil Survey by the specification of their "qualifications." In this way the Civil Survey, in turn, distinguished the forfeited and other lands whose acreable contents had been directed to be estimated by the acre at the rate of 21 feet to the perch. As will presently be seen this Survey constituted the basis of the next Survey to be undertaken—the Down Survey.

The Books of Survey and Distribution contain abstracts of the Civil Survey to the following extent (1) names of proprietors, and usually their qualifications, of lands forfeited in 1641 and (2) names of proprietors of unforfeited lands and frequently, the names and estimated areas of such lands, in respect of the same year.

From the substantial remnant of the Civil Survey which has survived—it originally extended to twenty-seven counties—nine volumes have already been published by the Irish Mss. Commission. In this connection collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution can be made in respect of some ten counties by virtue of the published Civil Survey material.

The third and last of these surveys was the well-known Down Survey executed under the direction of Doctor, later Sir William Petty. Besides the well-known edition by Larcom of Petty's own history of the Survey this noted cartographical achievement has been the subject of learned exposition in Dr. Y. M. Goblet's "La transformation de la géographie politique de l'Irlande au xvii^e siècle (1930)"; it has also been the subject of many judicial decisions to which further reference will be made. Useful contributions on the subject of existing collections of barony maps include Lord Kerry's paper, "The Lansdowne maps of the Down Survey," Proc. R.I.A., vol. xxxv, sec. C., pp. 385-457 and Mr. S. Ó Domhnaill's "The Maps of the Down Survey," Irish Hist. Studies, vol. iii, No. 12, pp. 381-92.

Deriving its original sanction from the Commission and Instructions of 22 June, 1653, confirmed by the Act of September of that year, the Down Survey was perfected and concluded in accordance with Petty's Articles of Agreement³³ with the Surveyor-General of 11th Dec., 1654, and by virtue of an Order of 3rd Sept. 1656. This last directed the survey of such lands as had not then been admeasured including those allotted to the Adventurers.³⁴

The Down Survey was founded on the Civil Survey³⁵ from which abstracts of the forfeited lands, Church lands³⁶ and Crown lands were furnished to the surveyors for the purpose of ascertaining, by actual admeasurement, the contents of such lands as divided into the "lowest denominations" and as held by former proprietors. The lowest denominations are defined in Petty's agreement as "townlands, plowlands, cartrons or any other usual denominations of lands proper to the respective counties." By the Order of 3rd September, 1656, the sub-division of forfeited lands into denominations for admeasurement was also to be "according to the number of proprietors who have forfeited their estates and have lands contained in any of the said denominations," the "metes" and bounds of such respective estates to be distinguished.³⁷ Forfeited estates as so defined on the Down Survey maps are frequently found to correspond with civil divisions, or

From admeasurements made of the forfeited lands were composed parish and barony maps, the former expressing distinctively the place-names and boundaries of the forfeited denominations as well as the distinguishing reference number given to each surround; these reference numbers correspond with those entered in the Books of Survey and Distribution within the column reserved for the purpose. Other particulars inscribed were the respective acreable contents and qualities, arable, pasture, etc., of such denominations, the unprofitable portions being similarly defined. Bounds of unforfeited lands were also indicated, these being described either as "Land unforfeited" or "Protestant Land." Such particulars were supplemented by representations of natural features, of the location of buildings and existing woods. The scale to which each map was made was likewise specified.³⁸

The barony maps were designed in the first instance merely to express the civil bounds of the baronies in order that the meares thereof "might be better known and preserved."³⁹ In their final form they described, in addition to the boundaries of parishes, those of the forfeited denominations, including the reference numbers, and, so far as space permitted, the place-names. The reference numbers in the barony and parish maps are the same and correspond with the Books of Survey and Distribution.

Explanatory of the parish and barony maps were the "Books of Reference" more generally known as "Abstracts or Reference Sheets." These, together with the maps, all duly certified, constituted the Down Survey. Assembled in volumes, the folio pages which faced each parish and barony map represented the "Books of Reference" or "Abstracts." Guided by the Civil Survey, the particulars furnished by the "Books of Reference" in respect of the parish maps were: (1) description of parish boundaries and notable features, (2) number of each denomination in the "Platt" or map, (3) names of proprietors with usually their qualifications, (4) place-names of denominations of lands, (5) their number of acres as admeasured, (6) the profitable and unprofitable quantities and (7) their respective qualities—arable, meadow, and bog.

At the conclusion of the returns for each parish appeared the total of its forfeited land and the proportion represented by Church land. Facing the barony maps which follow each of the respective parochial series, the "Books of Reference" describe the barony boundaries, and furnish a summary of the forfeitures in each parish; these details were supplemented by numerous indexes.

Before the acceptance by the State the Down Survey was subject to examination⁴⁰ and revision by the Surveyor-General and eventually became the basis of the distributions of the forfeited lands amongst the adventurers and soldiers in accordance with the Commonwealth legislation; it was again adopted as the basis of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation in respect of new provisions governing the distributions under these enactments.⁴¹

The Books of Survey and Distribution record, parish by parish, the following particulars abstracted from the Down Survey: (1) the reference numbers in the parish maps to each forfeited, admeasured denomination, including those comprising Church and Crown lands, (2) denominations—place-names thereof, (3) the admeasured acreable contents in respect of both the profitable and unprofitable parts of such denominations and (4) acreages of bogs, commons, and frequently mountains.

What had survived of the Down Survey subsequent to the fire of 1711 perished in 1922. Substitutes now available for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution consist of the "exact copies" made in 1786-7 of the sections which had escaped the fire of 1711. These comprise parish and barony maps as well as Books of Reference. This collection assembled in 17 volumes was formerly in the private keeping of Messrs. Reeves, Solicitors, but is now, as to 15 volumes, lodged in the National Library, Dublin; the remaining two volumes are deposited in the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland but of these it is understood photostats have been obtained by the Director of the former Institution. is the subject of a report by Mr. Charles McNeill in Analecta Hibernica, No. 8, p. 419. There are also available the tracings from the parish maps made by officials of the Quit Rent Office, in connection with the duties of that Office in regard to Land Purchase proceedings and which include the superimposition of the Down Survey on the six-inch maps; these tracings and maps are now lodged in the Public Record Office, Dublin; and finally there are the well-known published barony maps, reproduced by the permission of the French Government, which constitute in miniature an alternative source to the Down Survey as a whole.

There remain to be noticed the documentary sources for the particulars appearing on the right-hand or distribution side of the folio pages of the Books of Survey and Distribution. Most of these derive their authority from the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, whereby not only royal confirmation was afforded of the titles gained by the Adventurers and Soldiers, under the Commonwealth legislation, but provision made for the restoration of former owners and the satisfaction of numerous additional claimants and interests.

RESTORATION INSTRUMENTS OF TITLE

Primarily, the restoration of Charles II in June, 1660, necessitated new legislation, the Acts of the usurped powers being void at law.⁴² Though the Declaration at Breda, in April of that year,⁴³ had intimated the King's willingness to abide by whatever Parliament might decide in respect of those who had received grants or had made purchases of estates, the scope of the new settlement was not revealed until the issue of the later Declaration of 30 November.⁴⁴ One of its outstanding provisions was the restoration to ⁴³ Gardiner's Constitutional Documents of the Puritan Revolution, 1625-1660, p. 465.

⁴⁴ This, briefly, provided (1) that the lands possessed by the adventurers and soldiers 7th May, 1659, should be confirmed to them (2) that all commissioned officers who were in regiments raised in Ireland or transported out of England in the service of the King or his father before the 5th June, 1649, should be satisfied their arrears in the counties and areas specified, (3) that all commissioned officers who had received no satisfaction for their service since 1649 should also be satisfied out of the same security, (4) that Protestants should be forthwith restored to their estates and reprisals of equal value assigned to the adventurers and soldiers who should be removed therefrom, (5) that Irish proprietors who had been dispossessed merely for being "Papists" and had sued out decrees, and were possessed of lands in Connacht and Clare should also be restored, and (6) that those who had served under the King's ensigns abroad and numerous noblemen and gentlemen, mentioned by name, were all, likewise, to be restored. Finally, a parliament was to be called and an enquiry instituted into the decrees and judgments given for forfeited lands in Connacht and Clare in which it was understood "much injustice and fraud" had been used.

their estates of "Protestants" and of "Irish proprietors . . . who had been dispossessed merely for being papists." Some five months later, under Commission of 30 April, 1661, Commissioners were appointed to carry out the provisions of the Declaration but subject to Instructions containing some seventy-two clauses, comprehending enquiries into various matters.⁴⁵ Notorious clauses of these Instructions defined, under eleven heads, the punitive circumstances constituting disqualifications for the restoration of the old proprietors.

The judiciary, however, having considered the King's Declaration insufficient authority for warranting the disposition of men's possessions⁴⁶ it was embodied, together with the Instructions, into a Bill which passing the Irish Parliament 27 September, 1662, formed the Act of Settlement 14 and 15 Chas. 2nd cap. 2. By this all lands which from the 23rd October, 1641, had been seized or sequestered or disposed of to any persons and which were in the possession of such persons on the 7th May, 1659, were inter alia vested in the King except (1) Church lands which were to be restored forthwith, (2) lands belonging to the University of Dublin and (3) estates of innocent "papists" and protestants. Commissioners, constituting the Court of Claims A.D. 1662-3, were appointed to carry out the provisions of the Act, the periods within which the various claims were to be made being specified.⁴⁷ In ⁴⁵ Clause 50 directed that special care should be taken to confirm to the purchasers of lands, which had been decreed to transplanted persons in Connacht and Clare, the possessions so obtained. Further directions provided for the determination of the position with regard to the extent to which the adventurers had been satisfied, the compilation of books in connection therewith, the ascertaining of arrears due to the '49 officers, the discovery of the lands possessed by regicides and the determination of other matters constituting a stocktaking of the general position.

⁴⁷ "The time for restoring all Innocents and making reprisals was limited to 22nd August, 1663 and they (the Commissioners) spent their time, they say, in restoring Innocents who took out no decrees in Connaught, but those who took out decrees had as yet no opportunity of being heard, and many of them, as the Commissioners suggest, might prove innocent, some having been, as appears by the King's Declaration of 30 November, 1660, transplanted into Connaught merely for their religion. In order to account for the short time actually given . . . to the hearing of claims of Innocence, which was only seven months, from 13 January to 21 August, 1663, the Commissioners say they were delayed after their arrival in Ireland two months before the Act of Settlement was printed"—App. 19th Report D.K.P.R.(I.), p. 39.

About 7,000 claims were made but "six-sevenths were still unheard" when the time had expired; appeals for a further extension were silenced by the "insurrection of the Cromwellians." 32nd Report, D.K.P.R. (E.) App. 1. (Russell and Prendergast), p. 153.

the King's Declaration (clause 25) thirty-eight persons, noblemen and gentlemen, representing former proprietors who for particular reasons had merited grace and favour were to be restored forthwith without further proof; of these, twenty were restored under the Act;⁴⁸ many who served under the King's ensigns beyond the seas were similarly recommended by name but they would appear to have received nothing more than this distinction.⁴⁹ As the time appointed for hearing the claims of Innocence was limited to one year—actually seven months—and since the Commissioners were to restore in the first place such Innocents as had taken out no decrees in Connacht or Clare, under the Commonwealth Transplantation scheme, their labours were mainly confined to such proceedings. It may be explained that "Innocent Papists" and Protestants were required to claim because they were obliged to make out the qualification of innocence; when they made that appear, they were not obliged to take out any new patents because they were not to begin any new title from the King, but were remitted to their old title to such lands as they claimed; the lands came out of the Crown, not by any patent or grant, but by the divesting clause in the Act.⁵⁰

The Decrees of Innocence issued by the Court of Claims between January and August 1663 numbered over five hundred.⁵¹ These contained particulars of the claims made—the names of the lands, etc., of which the claimants were possessed in October, 1641, and their title thereto; after reciting that the necessary evidences had been produced, the decrees declared the "innocency" of the particular claimants.⁵²

These decrees are abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution, the names of the persons by whom they were obtained being specified with the particulars of the lands and the acreages thereof to which they were restored.

What is now available of such decrees for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution is contained, for the Dissatisfaction with the Act of Settlement led to its suspension, the Commissioners reporting to the Lord Lieutenant in November, 1663, that a new Act was necessary to remove obstructions to their proceedings.⁵³ After much negotiation between the interests to be satisfied it was ultimately decided that the adventurers and soliders should be confirmed in two-thirds of the lands of which they stood possessed on May 7th, 1659, likewise the Connacht purchasers as to two-thirds of what was in their possession in September, 1663, the '49 Officers to be entirely established in their present possessions.⁵⁴ These resolutions were subsequently formed into a Bill which, passing the Irish Parliament 23rd December, 1665, became the Act of Explanation 17 and 18 Ch. 2nd. cap. 2. Once more the lands forfeited by virtue of the rebellion of 1641 were declared vested in the King, "without any office or inquisition thereof found," but with an important distinction. Among the estates excepted from the lands so vested in the King by the Act of Settlement were those of all innocent persons; under the Act of Explanation estates so excepted in this classification were limited to those only in respect of which Decrees of Innocence had already been obtained under the Act of Settlement. Furthermore, all remaining claims to innocency were barred,⁵⁵ while those who had been decreed innocent and had not been restored, were left to law. By such means, and by the retrenchment of one-third of the lands possessed by adventurers and soldiers it was expected to provide a fund of land to meet existing

⁵⁴ It was also agreed that what any person wanted of his two-thirds should be supplied, and whatever he had more should be taken from him; that the adventurers and soldiers should make their election where the overplus should be retrenched: Howard, op. cit., vol. 1, p. 217.

deficiencies and further claims. Provision was made for retrenchment in another connection. The King's Declaration had directed, as already noted, the immediate restoration to their estates "without further proof" of a number of persons representing former proprietors, who had merited special grace and favour. Of these, as stated above, only twenty had been restored at the time of the passing of the Bill of Explanation which contained new provisions in respect of this class of nominees. Fifty-four persons, thirty-four of whom had already been named in the King's Declaration, were to be restored to their principal seats with 2,000 acres adjoining; whatever was possessed above this acreage, in 1641, was to be retrenched and vested in the King to the uses of the Acts.⁵⁶ In order to divest the lands, which by the vesting clauses were in the King, the various interested persons were obliged to make their claims before the Commissioners appointed to carry out the provisions of the Act and who constituted the Court of Claims A.D. 1666-69.⁵⁷ Upon its certificates, reciting the claimants' names and specifying particulars of the lands allotted, their location, number of acres, rents reservable and tenure, the Lord Lieutenant was authorised and required, upon request, to cause letters patent, under the great seal of Ireland to be passed of such lands.⁵⁸ Certificates so issued to the adventurers and soldiers, etc., numbered 1,767; those issued under the name of "Adjudications" to the '49 Officers numbered 100, this corresponding with the number of lots into which their security had been divided.⁵⁹ In the preparation of letters patent "new and proper names more suitable to the English tongue" than the "barbarous and uncouth names" by which most places were called, were to be inserted with an alias for the lands granted by such patents.⁶⁰ Except where the Strafford survey was utilised, the acreages of lands contained in these certificates and letters patent were in general those of the Down Survey. Finally such certificates were to be enrolled and letters patent obtained within six months of the issue thereof; where letters patent were not issued through official delay, the grantees were to hold under their certificates as fully as if letters patent had been issued; letters patent were likewise to be enrolled "within the space of two years next after the royal assent to this bill actually given." All letters patent were to contain a clause compelling the patentees to cause their letters patent to be enrolled within a time therein limited; without such clause the patents were to be void and of no effect.⁶¹

The names of the persons to whom such grants were issued, or if grants had not been taken out to whom certificates were given, are likewise abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution with the acreages of the lands disposed. It may be added that it is not easy to determine from the Books of Survey and Distribution the retrenchment directed by the Act of Explanation.

Further documents abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution were the "Connaught Certificates" and the letters patent founded thereon. Their origin resided in the King's Declaration of November, 1660, with Instructions, confirmed by the Act of Settlement. The governing provisions of the King's Declaration and Instructions in favour of the transplanted were (1) that persons who had received decrees for lands from the former "pretended" commissioners, and were not possessed of such lands by 1 November, 1661, were to be immediately satisfied⁶² (2) those who should be dispossessed by virtue of the King's Declaration—which had provided for the immediate restoration by name of certain former proprietors—were to be reprimed out of lands of equal value before such dispossession,⁶³

and (3) those who had actually been removed from lands to which they had been transplanted, without any reprise, were to be satisfied forthwith.⁶⁴ On the grounds that in obtaining decrees for lands in Connacht and Clare, during the usurpation, there had been much fraud and injustice, a Commission issued 24th October, 1662, to review and rectify the position.⁶⁵

Save, however, to confirm the protestant purchasers before September, 1663, of transplanted lands, nothing had been done towards carrying out the foregoing provisions for some fourteen years. Then in accordance with the King's directions of September 22, 1675,⁶⁶ and in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation commissioners were appointed for hearing and determining claims of transplanted persons. Some 580 certificates were issued in the course of two years, the first being dated 20th March, 1676.⁶⁷ These certificates, according to the specimen which has been preserved, recited the lands set out to the claimants or their predecessors by the former Commonwealth Commissioners at Loughrea, and to the end that letters patent might issue for a final settlement declared, on the production of the necessary evidence, the claimants entitled to such lands in fee simple subject to the rents reserved.

COMMISSION OF GRACE, A.D. 1684-88

While the foregoing documents find their authority in clauses and sections of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, another series, also abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution, intimately connected with the Acts, and forming a sequence thereto, call for notice. These are the grants made A.D. 1684-1688 in pursuance of the Commission of Grace 36-37 Chas. II and 1-4 Jas. II.

When the Court of Claims (A.D. 1666-69) had been in session for over two years the Commissioners reported (February 14, 1668) to the Lord Lieutenant the result of their proceedings.⁶⁸ The claims of the main interests, for whom the Act was intended, had been heard and settled, viz., the adventurers and soldiers, the "protestant purchasers" in Connacht and Clare, and the '49 Officers. Much, however, remained to be done in giving out reprisals to such as were deficient. The general stock of undisposed land had been twice gone through in open court, the debt and deficiencies of all persons stated and though care had been taken to enlarge the stock, yet there was not enough land to go round: "And upon the whole matter it appearing that the stocks of reprisals will not hold to satisfy all the ends of the Acts so that not only the (54) persons commonly called the Nominees and others of the Roman Catholic religion which are by special provisoes to be restored after reprisals of such as are possessed of their estates and transplanted persons who have been removed by special provisions, but also many of his Majesty's Protestant subjects are likely to be in a great manner deprived of the benefit of settlement."

Instructions given in reply directed how the Commissioners were to adjudicate the remaining unsatisfied claims; deficient adventurers and soldiers, the Duke of York, the '49 officers and protestants were to be preferred before all others.⁶⁹

With the closing of the Court of Claims in January, 1669, the only channel of relief for those aggrieved by the settlement was by way of appeal to the King or the Lord Lieutenant. In response to a petition⁷⁰ to the former on behalf of Irish proprietors who were still unrestored a Committee of Enquiry was appointed in 1671 to examine all documents arising out of the proceedings.⁷¹ Though the relevant documents were copied for the purposes of this Enquiry, it was recalled under circumstances to which reference will be made at a later stage. Other petitions indicated that all that had been obtained by some of the Nominees—persons named in the Acts as meriting favour—were custodians of mountainous lands which had been retrenched.⁷²

Land-satisfactions and secure titles were also sought in different connections by the discovery of concealed or forfeited land or by the acquisition of unsatisfied debentures of adventurers and soldiers. "But of late it had been held for law that all the periods of those Acts (Settlement and Explanation) were expired and consequently that all concealed or forfeited land to be found was no longer in his Majesty as a royal trustee to the use of the Acts, but in his own right and therefore he hath lately issued a commission styled the Commission of Grace to free the subject from such former vexatious inquiries and to encourage those possessed under a doubtful title to purchase a confirmation at a moderate fine."⁷³

Thus originated the Commission of Grace, directed to the Duke of Ormond then Lord Lieutenant and others, under which numerous grants were made at the close of the reign of Charles II and during that of James II. The Commission recites that several lands to which the King was entitled still remained undisposed of, the possessors of which were disquieted for various reasons: Discoverers had endeavoured to establish defective titles, or commissions of inquiry, concealed lands, and patentees or other proprietors had been subject to much question respecting their titles, "either because they have no Letters Patent for them . . . or because the patents granted found void. . . or obscure." To remedy these inconveniences commissioners, as mentioned, were appointed with power to correspond with persons holding lands under such circumstances, and to grant new tenures direct from the Crown for such fines and rents, or increase of rents, and such tenures as they thought fit.⁷⁴

Under this Commission close on 500 grants were made between 1684 and 1688 the names of the grantees, with the acreages passed, appearing in the Books of Survey and Distribution with the appropriate marking indicating the instrument of title.

What has survived as a whole of all the foregoing grants, decrees and certificates issued in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, and of the Commission of Grace, is contained in the 15th Report, or third volume of the Record Commission⁷⁵ and of the Supplement thereto.⁷⁶ The material contained in these publications is confined, however, to abstracts, indexes and specimens of the various documents concerned, prefaced as regards the grants under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation with an introduction and notes by Mr. James Hardiman. The abstracts are those made from the enrolments of the grants passed under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, and under the Commission of Grace, and are stated to contain everything material in the original documents:—names of grantees, the lands and acreages granted, profitable and unprofitable, rents reserved to the Crown, dates of grants and of enrolment thereof. The abstracts of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation grants are supplemented by an Index of persons and of the several baronies and counties mentioned in the grants; there is also printed an "Account of the Savings contained in the Patents." Indexes of persons and lands accompany the abstracts of the Commission of Grace.

Particular indexes provided in the Report are those of the names of persons and places occurring in the enrolments of (1) the certificates of the Court of Claims for adventurers and soldiers (2) Decrees of Innocence (3) "Connaught certificates" and (4) Adjudications in favour of the (1649) officers. Each index is introduced by a transcript of the first certificate or decree appearing on the respective rolls. There is also printed an alphabetical list of persons on whose behalf the original certificates, or decrees of the Court of Claims were made.

In addition to this substantial corpus of Acts of Settlement material, there is also available for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution, the extensive collection of official copies of grants, and extracts therefrom, and of extracts of decrees and certificates, and other documents, assembled by the Quit Rent Office and now in the Public Record Office.⁷⁷

FORFEITED ESTATES OF A.D. 1688

The final entries appearing in the Books of Survey and Distribution originated in the sales of the estates forfeited in 1688; of these conveyances were authorised to be made by the English Act of Parliament, 11 and 12 Wm. III, cap. 2, which bears the title: "An Act for granting an Aid to his Majesty by Sale of the forfeited and other Estates and Interests in Ireland, and by a Land Tax in England for the several purposes therein mentioned." The preamble to the Act recites that soon after the accession of King William and his late Consort "a desperate and bloody war and rebellion" was levied in Ireland against them by many of their Majesties subjects who had since been reduced to their due obedience to the Crown of England. It was, therefore, "highly reasonable" that the estates of "such rebels and traitors should be applied in ease of his Majesty's faithful subjects of this Kingdom to the use of the public." It was enacted, accordingly, that all the lands and possessions, within the realm of Ireland, whereof any persons who stood convicted or attainted of treason since the 13th February, 1688, or who should be convicted before the last day of Trinity term 1701, or whereof the late King James was possessed, be vested in the thirteen persons named as Trustees, to the end that the same might be sold and disposed of, with a saving for the persons comprised within the "Articles of Limerick or Galloway."⁷⁸ Declaring null and void all grants made by King William since 13th February, 1688, save those allowed, and empowering the Trustees to reward discoverers of forfeited estates concealed, the Act directed all persons having claims on the lands vested in the Trustees to proceed therewith before the 10th August, 1700, subsequently enlarged to 25th March, 1702.⁷⁹ The Act constituted the Trustees a Court of Record and directed the sale of the estates and interests vested in them before the 25th March, 1702, a period likewise extended to

"It has been decided by the case of Annesley v. Dixon that the Commissioners who constituted the Court of Claims under the Act 11 and 12 W. 3, c. 2, had no power to decide what lands were vested in them as forfeited estates; that as regards the estates of innocent persons, they had no jurisdiction at all . . ." Irish Equity Rep. vol. XII, p. 267.

the 24th June, 1703.⁸⁰ Lands vested in the Trustees and not sold by this date were by the Act 1 Anne, stat. 2, cap. 21, vested in the Queen. This Act also ordained that the sales directed to be made should be only to such persons as were protestants. It was provided by the Act 11 and 12 Wm. III, cap. 2, section 41, that all the monies arising by virtue of the sales were to be appropriated and applied to the discharge of the arrears of pay due (1) to the officers of his Majesty's army who had served in the reduction of Ireland and in the late war against France and (2) of the debts owing for the transport service and the clothing of the army.

Reporting to the House of Commons on December 15, 1699, the Parliamentary Commission on the Forfeitures notified the outlawry of 3,921 persons and the forfeiture of 1,060,792 acres gross besides other forfeited lands of which no survey existed; the proportion of these lands restored to the old proprietors by virtue of the Articles of Limerick and Galway represented "233,106 acres" and those restored by the King's favour "74,733 acres"—all plantation measure.⁸¹ There was yet to be computed, the report continued, the value of between five and six hundred houses in Dublin, Cork and elsewhere, likewise of 61 mills, of fairs and markets, ferries and fisheries, the value of woods standing on forfeited estates being estimated at £60,000. Accompanying this Report was a number of books containing lists of outlawed and forfeiting persons, of claims adjudicated, of pardons and of reversal of outlawries, and of grants and custodiams then in being, which are available in Trinity College, Dublin (Mss. No. 744).⁸² A description of these books is given by Dr. J. G. Simms in IRISH HISTORICAL STUDIES, vol. III, no. 27, under the caption "Historical Revision—Land owned by catholics in 1688" and where the estimates of Butler and others are discussed. It is there suggested that the proportion of land which escaped forfeiture was greater than that allowed for by Butler.

On the expiry of the time allowed for the making and hearing of claims the Trustees were directed to proceed by way of auction to sell the residue of the forfeited estates which had not been restored or already granted; upon payment of the purchase monies they were to execute deeds of bargain and sale which were to be enrolled within six months from the date thereof; after such sales the estates were to be held of the King as of his Castle of Dublin by free and common socage tenure.⁸³

⁸¹ From summary given by Hardiman in third col. of Rec. Commns. Reports cited pp. 39-40.

Of the 666 deeds of conveyance so made and enrolled abstracts have also been printed in the 15th Report of the Record Commission to which reference has already been made. These abstracts provide the following particulars; names of purchasers or persons to whom conveyances were made, the names of the lands, with their acreages, the consideration monies, the names of the former owners or persons attainted, and the dates of the conveyances and their enrolments. The area (plantation measure) of the lands thus sold has been estimated to have been 716,374 acres.⁸⁴ In conjunction with these abstracts, and in addition to the Ms. volumes, above indicated, in Trinity College, Dublin, there is also available for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution, tracings made by the Quit Rent Office staff from the original maps of the Trustees. These maps of which a detailed catalogue, parish by parish, is printed in the Supplement to the 8th Report of the Record Commissioners (pp. 334-50) were formerly in the Auditor-General's collection; on the covers of the volumes the endorsement was inscribed: "Maps of the lands forfeited in 1688, and sold in the year 1702, according to the several Surveys taken by the order of the Commissioners appointed under the 11th and 12th William III, for ascertaining and selling the same." Contained in the same series were three volumes of copies of Down Survey maps. It is not unlikely that in some cases, particularly those of double forfeiture of the same lands, that is in 1641 and 1688, certified copies of Down Survey maps were obtained for collation or other use. Where identical areas were the subject of both surveys the acreable content was shown by that of the Trustees to be greater than that recorded by the Down Survey; this is also evidenced by the Books of Survey and Distribution. The Quit Rent Office tracings now probably constitute the main surviving remnant of the Trustees Surveys; with the six-inch maps on which they were superimposed, they have been deposited in the Public Record Office. A collection in the British Museum relating to Mayo will be noticed in the second introduction.

Attention may also be drawn to the numerous valuable documents relative to the proceedings of the Trustees, forming the Annesley collection, received for photographing by the National Library and of which there is an account in Analecta Hibernica, No. 16 (pp. 341-73).

The abstracts of the Trustees conveyances appearing in the Books of Survey and Distribution contain the names of the purchasers and frequently the acreages of the lands purchased, both items being entered exactly opposite or in juxtaposition to the names of persons in column (8) who, apparently, had become the forfeiting proprietors on this occasion. It has been found in a few instances, however, that the names of the purchasers were not entered.⁸⁵

By virtue of the parallel arrangement or specification of the particulars, within the respective columns, the one entry of denominations of land abstracted from the Down Survey and returned in column (4) sufficed for the dual purpose of showing the transactions arising out of both the proceedings relative to the years 1641 and 1688. Thus across a single line and at a glance there comes into view the proprietorship of lands in Ireland at three periods of Irish history.

Frequent collation of all the foregoing various documents as abstracted in the Record Commissioners' Reports, with the Books of Survey and Distribution, has testified to the great care and accuracy with which, in general, the latter were compiled. The essential features of the Down Survey so far as these could be expressed in a descriptive manner regarding individual denominations of forfeited land have likewise been found, so far as comparison is now possible, to have been abstracted with the utmost precision; similarly in respect of details derived from the Civil Survey. Of the particulars furnished by the Down Survey as a whole, and as it existed prior to the fire of 1711, there has thus survived this complete and considerable compendium without the aid of which all the related published barony maps are unintelligible. What the Books of Survey and Distribution preserve of the Stafford Survey has been particularly noticed in the separate section of vol. I, dealing with the Roscommon text (p. xxxiii).

"ALPHABET" OF PLACE-NAMES

Beyond the formal lists of names of persons and of lands and acreages the text as a whole otherwise provides little material by way of guidance. Occasional references will be found indicating that particular lands were not seized or sequestered by virtue of the Civil Survey having returned the proprietors as "Protestants," or that lands were left "out of the stock of reprisals" by virtue of sales to "protestants" before a specific year;⁸⁶ more frequent references are to bogs or mountains noted as held in common or belonging to a particular parish. There are, also, occasional references to "regicides" lands which had been granted to the Duke of York;⁸⁷ to lands mortgaged to the Earl of Cork and others, or leased by a Protestant proprietor to a Catholic tenant.⁸⁸

It may be emphasised that the Books of Survey and Distribution were mainly concerned with exhibiting the distribution of forfeited lands and where, over wide areas, there had been no forfeitures, as in the instance of certain baronies in Fermanagh county, no returns whatever will be found.⁸⁹

Each volume opens with an "Alphabet" or index of the place-names of the lands set out in the text. The baronies forming a county would appear to have been in the first instance indexed separately on a broad alphabetical basis, the arrangement being founded on the order of appearance of place-names in the text rather than on their strict alphabetical sequence. In the final form of the Alphabet all the place-names beginning, for example, with the letter A occurring in each barony of a particular county are grouped together, in paginated sequence, under the names of the respective baronies, and so on until the final letter has been reached. As the same place-name may occur on different pages caution must be exercised in the use of these alphabets. In some instances where these Alphabets had suffered from frequent use fresh copies were made by the Quit Rent Office and inserted after the originals when the volumes were rebound in modern times. There are no indexes of persons.

To some extent the Books of Survey and Distribution of this series are annotated in connection with investigations, rendered necessary by Land Purchase proceedings. These pencil notes also include guidance to the pages at which the respective parishes appear, one of the blank folios usually that preceding the distinct baronial returns being availed of for this purpose.

ORIGIN AND PURPOSE

The origin and purpose of the Books of Survey and Distribution may now be noticed.

As originally designed it would appear that, according to the various headings of the columns set out above, the Books of Survey and Distribution were intended to comprehend merely the details of the distribution of the forfeited lands under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. It has been seen, however, that additional particulars, beyond the periods of these Acts, and consequent upon legislation some forty years later in date, were also included. That a common purpose was to be served by the inscription of such supplementary details is therefore to be inferred. It will be recalled, in this connection, that the set of Books of Survey and Distribution belonging to the Auditor-General had found its way to the Quit Rent Office and that it was duly returned to its proper habitat.

Since the Auditor-General's department contained transcripts of enrolments of various documents and of other material assembled over a long period for the purpose of ascertaining the King's rents,⁹⁰ the presence in his office of the Books of Survey and Distribution would prima facie suggest a relationship in this connection.

Lands granted or decreed in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation were subject to a constant, yearly and acreable rent called as already stated the Quit Rent. In the second volume of his Treatise of the Exchequer and Revenue of Ireland, Howard states:⁹¹ "From these Books (of Distribution) the Auditor-General at times hath in a great measure formed his constats of charges⁹² of rents which issue from his office; and hath thereon also founded his reports on references from the Court of Exchequer." A footnote briefly reviewing the contents of the Auditor's office—"the sure foundations for his constats" adds: "The distribution books may be auxiliary."

From the authoritative nature of the Books of Survey and Distribution, thus implied, it would be reasonable to assume that they were compiled by virtue of a legislative direction.

In this connection it is, perhaps, desirable to quote in the first instance what has already been advanced by way of explanation of the origin and purpose of the Auditor's Books of Survey and Distribution and, also, what has been stated judicially as to the legislative authorisation for their compilation. Mr. W. H. Hardinge, first keeper of the Landed Estates Record Office (1861) in the course of his well-known paper on Surveys in Ireland, already quoted, cites certain evidence which on the face of it would appear to be decisive in one respect. Having referred to the grants made by King William III of the private estates of King James, subsequently revoked, Mr. Hardinge states : " It is worthy of observation that these grants of the estates of King James testify to and explain the origin and compilation of the well-known Books of Survey and Distribution of the lands forfeited in the year 1641, concerning which there was much argument and legal ingenuity exercised in the case of Knox v. The Earl of Mayo, heard before Lord High Chancellor Napier on the 10th, 11th and 14th June, 1858 ; each of these grants contains a statement that all the lands granted were returned in a particular under the hands of the Auditor and Surveyor-General to have been the estate of the late King James, as appeared by the Books of Survey and Distribution compiled by the Commissioners appointed to carry into execution the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. The fact of this compilation by the commissioners was denied in argument in the case adverted to, and this point appears to be set at rest by these grants of William. The Commissioners for executing the Acts of Settlement and Explanation commenced their labours in 1662, and did not conclude them and deliver over their records of proceedings, as directed in the Act of Settlement, to the Auditor-General until 1680, or thereabouts. The Books of Survey and Distribution were not therefore, twenty years out of the Commissioners custody when the grants of William describing the mode of their compilation passed the great seal. The Attorney and Solicitor-General, as well as the Auditor and Surveyor-General were concurring parties to the statement . . . It is clear that as evidence of the fact stated, these authorities gave precedence to the Books of Survey and Distribution over the decrees and certificates of the Court of Claims and the after letters patent founded thereon and the reason why they did so is also clear ; the decrees, certificates and letters patent seldom particularise unprofitable lands . . . and thus left the quality, quantity and situation as well as the particular profitable townlands to which they respectively belonged to be determined by the surveys ; and as the Down Survey Maps do not connect the profitable lands expressed upon them with the adventurers and soldiers, or others to whom they were distributed under the Acts, the Books of Survey and Distribution were compiled for this very purpose."

It will be observed that Mr. Hardinge does not provide any authority, beyond the quotation cited, for the compilation of the Books of Survey and Distribution by the Commissioners of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. In the light of the high legal standing which he assigns to the Books, it is thought that if any corroborative legislative or other direction for their compilation had been within his knowledge he would gladly have made it known.⁹³ It may be presumed to some extent, therefore, that the only certain evidence the Record Keeper could adduce was the reference in King William's grants.

The case of Knox v. The Earl of Mayo in which Mr. Hardinge asserts much " legal ingenuity " was exercised, will be found reported in Irish Chancery Reports, 1858, Vol. VII., pp. 563-75. It is sufficient to state here that the admissibility of the Auditor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution as evidence was a pivotal issue in the proceedings. In support of the contention that they were not admissible on the grounds of being " mere abstracts " two decisions, to this effect, one by the Court of Exchequer in 1747, and the other by a prior Lord Chancellor, were quoted.⁹⁴ Lord Chancellor Napier, however, in Knox v. The Earl of Mayo held to the contrary and in giving judgment acknowledged the help he had received from Mr. Hardinge in the following terms : " I have ascertained from the experienced and intelligent officer of the Record office, Mr. Hardinge, that in his own time, and the time of his father to whom he succeeded, covering a period from 1787 to the present time, the records of the Auditor-General's Office, including the Book of Distributions have been always considered admissible and, on many occasions, admitted in evidence in trials relating to property of this class."

⁹³ Nor indeed does Howard in his well-known Treatise already cited.

⁹⁴ The King v. Daly reported in Howard, cited, vol. II, p. 115 and the case of The Archbishop of Dublin v. Trimleston, 12 Ir. Eq. Rep. 267.

Having stressed the importance of the question raised in the light of the security of titles and the enjoyment of a large class of property, the Lord Chancellor proceeded to explain the origin of the Books of Survey and Distribution under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation:

"By the 6th section of the Act (14 and 15 Car. 2, c. 2) the Commissioners are directed from various sources therein mentioned, and amongst others the 'Civil Survey' and by such other lawful ways and means as they should think fit, to make up books as therein directed, which, in the 46th section are called the 'Books of Distribution.' By the 60th section the Commissioners are directed, upon the completion of their labours, to hand over their books to the Auditor-General, and duplicate copies to the Surveyor-General, to remain as of record in their offices. By the 17 and 18 Car. 2, c. 2, sec. 23, rule 5, the Books of Distribution are mentioned in precedence of the Down Survey and in rule 11 it is stated that 'no defendant whose lots are not to be found within the Book of Distributions shall be liable to any new survey, his evidence being lost' About 1680 all these records including the Books of Survey and Distribution were . . . handed over to the Auditor-General." Quoting the statement made by Howard, given above, the Lord Chancellor concluded: "These books therefore are invested with the character of the public official documents of the country compiled by competent authority and used for the purposes of the Crown revenue and which upon established principles, by which faith is reposed in the conduct of public functionaries and credit given to public records should be held to be admissible and at least prima facie correct in describing what they profess to record as true."

THE ACT OF SETTLEMENT BOOKS

If the Auditor's Books of Survey and Distribution, to which the Lord Chancellor referred, had been the only set compiled its origin might, perhaps, be left entirely to judicial interpretation. As, however, other series existed earlier in date, it is necessary, in the interests of historical research, to indicate, in relation to the relevant sections of the Act of Settlement, the sources from which compilation of Books was directed to be made. Under section 6 of the Act of Settlement, quoted by the Lord Chancellor, the Commissioners were directed "to make up books of what is due to each adventurer and to ascertain the possession of such to whom lands are assigned therein expressing" the names of the former proprietors, the denominations of land, parish, barony and county. These books were to be compiled from certificates or particulars furnished by the adventurer and from the existing surveys of the late pretended powers. The certificates were to be given under the hands and seals of the adventurers and were to specify the lands of which they were then, or on the 7th May, 1659, possessed.⁹⁵

Section 46 of the same Act, also quoted by the Lord Chancellor, declared that where no "certain record of the lands assigned or set out to the soldiers" existed "so that the rent payable to us cannot be ascertained," certificates were to be obtained from them as to their possessions, in the same manner as from the adventurers. "You (the Commissioners) are out of the said certificates and out of the surveys and books of debentures, or books of distributions, or subdivisions of lands . . . forthwith to cause fair books to be made up of all the houses, lands, tenements and hereditaments set out to the adventurers, soldiers and other persons whose estates are confirmed by our said declaration, together with the rents and profits payable unto us . . . and you are carefully to reduce the measure of such lands" from plantation to English measure, "and accordingly to ascertain the rent payable to us."⁹⁶

The "books of distributions or sub-divisions" referred to in the foregoing sections were of Commonwealth origin,⁹⁷ and it would thus appear that save for the certificates of

The Lord Chancellor in the judgment, quoted above, indicates that the Books to be made up were called in the 46th section the "Books of Distribution"! The Books of S. and D. c. 1656-7 would also appear to be the Books referred to in the Act of Explanation, sec. 23, rule 5: "Where the books of distribution and the Down Survey agree in the satisfactions which have been allotted to any regiments, troops, societies or persons, or do not differ more than in one-tenth, there no re-survey shall be ordered, notwithstanding such information."

the adventurers and soldiers, which were to be furnished within forty days of proclamation, all the sources for the authorised compilation were already in existence. It will have been observed that the sources specified for the compilation do not include the decrees and certificates of the Courts of Claims, A.D. 1663-1665, nor the grants founded thereon. The suggestion may, therefore, be advanced that the Books compiled in pursuance of sections 6 and 46 of the Acts of Settlement were those described at p. 151 of Wood's Guide to the Public Record Office under the caption "Books of Survey and Distribution, 1661": "These contain names of proprietors in both, Civil and Down Surveys, with notes as to distribution, etc., viz. (1) incumbrances, (2) lands undisposed in May, 1659, or set by lease, (3) private grants, (4) lands not set by lease, or estates of King's Judges, (5) possessors in May, 1659." This account appears in the section of Mr. Wood's Guide devoted to the Surveyor-General's Office.

In specifying the position as to the distribution of lands at the date of the King's Declaration of November, 1660, and in providing a basis for the determination of revenue, this series would appear to have furnished the requirements expressed in the above sections of the Act of Settlement. What survived the fire of 1711, perished in 1922, and no more can now be said than to express the opinion, based on the evidence alone of the above description, that these were the Books of Survey and Distribution compiled by the Commissioners of the Act of Settlement.⁹⁸

The question then arises, in connection with the quotation furnished by Mr. Hardinge, whether these Books of the Surveyor-General, cited in Wood's Guide, could contain particulars of the estates of King James subsequently granted away by King William.⁹⁹ Excepted from confirmation by the King's Declaration of November, 1660 (Sec. 35), were the estates of persons "who sat as judges" upon the life of King Charles I, or "who were of the guard of halbertiers, assisting to put the bloody sentence of death in execution." By section 194 of the Act of Settlement the estates of numerous persons specified, beginning with "Oliver Cromwell, deceased," were thereby settled and vested in his Royal Highness, James Duke of York. Since, apparently, the Surveyor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution returned the possessors of estates in 1659 the lands enjoyed by the regicides would be there recorded; but these Books also contained, as already stated, notes of the distribution of the estates of the "King's Judges" and accordingly it is to be inferred that the new proprietorship of James, Duke of York was duly indicated. If this be correct, the excerpt from King William's grants furnished by Mr. Hardinge would seem to establish the origin of the Books of Survey and Distribution in the Surveyor's Office—"1661"—quoted above, rather than of those of the Auditor-General. It may be added that the lands the subject of the suit Knox v. The Earl of Mayo were located in the county Mayo. A Book of Survey and Distribution for this county is not included in the list of "Books of Distribution" saved from the fire of 1711 in the Surveyor-General's Office, printed at page 542 of the first volume of the Record Commission's Reports; see, also, p. 502 of the same volume and pp. 705-6 of the "Custom House Index" in the P.R.O. In parenthesis, the unsigned "Preface" to a "Book of Survey and Distribution of Westmeath," published in 1852, intimates that the text was derived from one of the Surveyor-General's Books which had survived the fire. The title-page of the printed volume reads: "The Book of Surveys and Distribution of the Estates in the County of Westmeath forfeited in the year MDCXLI"; this is supplemented by the motto: "No country in Europe has suffered like Ireland, and were not the Accounts authentic beyond question, the facts would be incredible" (Ladiston: Printed by J. C. Lyons). A copy is available in the National Library, Dublin. In the text the instruments of title mostly specified—decrees and certificates of the Courts of Claims—relate to the period 1663-70; it would thus appear that series of Books of Survey and Distribution in the Survey-General's Office had contained different particulars.

COMMITTEES OF ENQUIRY A.D. 1670 AND 1671

Since, unhappily, the Surveyor and Auditor-General's sets of these unique and valuable Books have perished, no more, perhaps, might be said, but in the fortunate event of the survival of the Quit Rent Office duplicate or copy of the latter it is necessary to examine further the ⁹⁸ In the connection of the fire of 1711, a letter dated 21 June, 1711, sent by the then Clerk of the Quit Rents, Mr. Richard Thompson, to a local collector, with reference to a complaint regarding a demand for Quit Rent greater than that contained in the patent, may be quoted: "I can make no report thereon till I have made up the Books of Distribution of that county they being burnt in the Surveyor's Office which will be done before next term." question of the origin of the Auditor's series and to endeavour to establish an approximate date for its compilation. This now, can only be achieved by referring to circumstances associated with, or to be deducted from, the compilation of other sets of Books of Survey and Distribution. By way of preface it is necessary to recall, briefly, certain relevant matters.

The Commissioners of the Court of Claims to whom Mr. Hardinge attributed the compilation of the Books of Survey and Distribution were Sir Edward Smith, Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, Sir Edward Deering, Sir Allen Broderick, Sir Winston Churchill and Edward Cooke, Esq.¹⁰⁰ The powers of these gentlemen had come to an end with the conclusion of their work in the very early days of January, 1669, when, it is presumed, they returned to England. Under these Commissioners were sub-commissioners: Mr. Thomas Taylor, Mr. Thomas Syms, Mr. John Burniston and Mr. John Pettie.¹⁰¹ The last-named gentleman was Surveyor-General from the Restoration until February, 1667, his deputy being the first-named Mr. Thomas Taylor, ancestor of the Lords Headfort.¹⁰² Registrars to the Court were also appointed, their duties including the custody of all the documents used in carrying out the requirements of the Acts. For a period this custody was relinquished in respect of surveys, certificates and numerous other records, in favour of the sub-commissioners.¹⁰³ All the documents remaining in the office of the Registrars were according to Mr. Hardinge handed over in 1680 or thereabouts to the Auditor-General in pursuance of the 60th section of the Instructions annexed to the Act of Settlement.

A new body of Commissioners (with sub-commissioners) was appointed in October, 1670, to ascertain all debts and sums due to the King and to enquire "into all forfeited and concealed lands." To the sub-commissioners was reserved, exclusively, up to the 26th March, 1671, the discovery of concealed lands from the records. The Archbishop of Dublin was one of the Commissioners, and it is not unlikely that some or all of the sub-commissioners were those who acted in this capacity in the former Court of Claims.¹⁰⁴

Some months later, in January, 1671, by Order in Council, the King being present, a Committee of Enquiry, including the Dukes of Buckingham and Ormonde, was appointed to enquire into the proceedings under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, having particular regard to those who had lost their estates as represented by the petition of Colonel Richard Talbot.¹⁰⁵ It was alleged that various unauthorised differences were to be found between the King's Declaration of 30th November, 1660, and the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. By a further Order in Council¹⁰⁶ a new committee was appointed including Lord Anglesey and other noblemen, but not the Duke of Ormonde, to peruse all papers concerning the Settlement of Ireland from first to last with power to obtain copies of all documents relating to the proceedings, an abstract of which was to be laid before the King. An address of the English House of Commons to the King, dated March 26th, 1673, asked for the recall of the Commission stating that if pursued it "would shake the peace and security of the whole Kingdom." By virtue of this, and the intervention of powerful interests, the Commission was superseded, the documents copied for its inspection being assembled in twelve large volumes these passing, it has been suggested, to the custody in the first instance of Lord Anglesey.¹⁰⁷

CONCEALED LANDS—THE TAYLOR BOOKS

For some years, therefore, after the closing of the Court of Claims, considerable activity prevailed as to the proceedings of the various and respective commissioners appointed to carry out the King's Declaration, the Act of Settlement and the Act of Explanation. In 1672, Arthur Capel, Earl of Essex, was appointed Lord Lieutenant. In his published correspondence there are various letters regarding the compilation of certain books, under conditions of the greatest secrecy, which cannot but be associated with the enquiries then astir and concerning which the King, apparently, was much interested.¹⁰⁸ Writing to ¹⁰⁸ Letters of Arthur Capel, Earl of Essex, Ld.-Lt. of Ireland, in 1675; second edn.; Dublin, T. Walker.

Mr. Secretary Coventry from Dublin Castle, in May, 1675, on the subject of his proposed visit to England the Lord Lieutenant thus refers to one of the matters to be discussed: "By his Majesty's command all the records of the Act of Settlement, have been searched and extracts made out of them, in order to the discovery of concealed lands. This work is contained in 12 or 14 volumes now ready to be sent over and much matter will arise upon this subject to propose to his Majesty in order to the finding out such lands as are fraudulently concealed and concerning the distribution of them pursuant to the Acts of Settlement."¹⁰⁹

In an earlier letter of March 28th, 1674, to his confidential secretary, Mr. Harbord, Lord Essex described the qualifications of the person to whom he had entrusted the compilation; "Mr. Thomas Taylor, formerly a sub-commissioner in the Court of Claims, had the curiositie (and no other as I know of besides himself) to keep books of entrys of the disposition of all lands made by that commission. This is the man whom I have employed by comparing his books with the other records to see what can by this means be discovered to belong to the Crown. For what relates to the Records, this person Mr. Taylor is a very able man, and indeed, the only man in the Kingdom that can do a work of this nature." A further letter from the Lord Lieutenant to his secretary indicating conditions under which these Books were compiled may be given; it is dated January 23rd, 1674-5: "Upon this occasion I must remind you of a passage . . . that happened between my Lord of Arlington and me; it was concerning the preparing of books for the discovery of concealed lands in Ireland, and you cannot but call to mind how ill his lordship took it, that such a work had been so long in hand, and he knew nothing thereof, and yet when he saw what orders I had received and in what manner I was directed to proceed his lordship rested fully satisfied with what I had done."

Some six months later the Books were ready for transmission to the King, the Lord Lieutenant notifying Mr. Harbord on June 20th, 1675, that "the bearer Mr. Taylor" was then proceeding to England with the volumes adding that Mr. Taylor "had engaged" that no person would be allowed to view them until he, Lord Essex, had arrived. Their safe delivery may be inferred from the Warrant of March 17th, 1676, addressed by the King to the Lord Lieutenant:¹¹⁰

"Warrant for paying £500 as a free gift to Thomas Taylor who had by the Lord Lieutenant's direction drawn out several large books containing a complete account of the disposition of all such lands as were returned forfeited in Ireland according to the Down Admeasurement as the same were disposed of by the Commissioners of the late Court of Claims which work will be of great use in discovering such concealed forfeited lands there as are unjustly detained, which, when discovered, may be applied to the satisfaction of the interests there yet remaining unsatisfied, and will likewise promote the final settlement of that Kingdom."

In course of time these Books, forming 16 large folio volumes and expressing the particulars above indicated in respect of 28 counties of Ireland, were acquired by the Marquis of Buckingham and later by Lord Ashburnham; eventually they were purchased by Government and deposited in the Royal Irish Academy. The series is described in the 56th Report (pp. 406-7) of the D.K. of the Public Records.

The title-pages of these volumes may here first be noted:

"The Distribution of Forfeited Land in Ireland pursuant to the Acts of Settlement and Explanation composed by Thomas Taylor, Esq., by command of his Excellency Arthur Earl of Essex, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in the year 1677."

While the foregoing appears only in the volume for Dublin, Wicklow and Carlow the following title-page, suitably adapted appears in all the Books:

"A Distribution of Forfeited Land in the counties of Dublin, Wicklow . . . Returned by the Downe Survey showing whose they were in Anno, 1641, ¹⁰⁹ Quoted in H.M.C. 8th Rep. (Ashburnham collection) App. (pt. II.) p. 2. On the subject of "concealed lands" Lord Essex wrote to Lord Ranelagh on Jan. 12, 1674-5: "Upon death of Lord Dillon who left no sons, that honour and estate going to a cousin of his I find many people offering at discoveries of several lands which he possessed and did not of right belong to him . . . however the proprietors in his time were glad to shelter themselves under his name and these now fearing an enquiry are, as I hear, labouring to get some other great man to patronize their estates . . . most tho' not all of these lands are in the province of Connaught . . . and I do rather tell your lordship of this particular estate because I know it to be one of the greatest covers of concealed lands in this kingdom." —Letters, cited, p. 12. See, also, 14 and 15 Chas. 2. c. 2, sec. 10: "And whereas many being conscious of their own guilt or evil intentions with respect to rebellion begun 23 Octr. 1641 have made private settlements of their estates, and many of our protestant subjects having formerly mortgaged their lands, etc., unto such as have forfeited the same have notwithstanding entered upon and kept possession of our right . . . you are to make discovery of all such."

¹¹⁰ Cal. State Papers, 1676-77, p. 30.

and to whom they are now sett out by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation Tome, 1st Vol. 1st."

That there is here a set of Books having features in common with those characteristic of the Auditor-General's series will already have been obvious. Before intimating the bearing of this Taylor compilation on the origin of the latter, the relationship in matters of detail may, briefly, be more closely examined.

At the beginning of every barony in the Taylor volumes there are headings announcing the particulars contained in the various columns. These headings are of the same character and appear in the same order as those furnished in the Auditor-General's Books as evidenced by the Quit Rent Office duplicate or copy. There is also agreement in the sequence of the specification, parish by parish, of the same details explicitly stated in the Taylor set to have been derived from the Civil and Down Surveys; on the distribution side, however, the instruments of title, dates of decrees and certificates of the Court of Claims, are furnished, these being indicated merely by markings, as already stated in the Auditor-General's and Quit Rent Office series.

The absence of Books for certain counties—Roscommon, Mayo, Galway and Clare is explained by the fact that at the date of compilation the claims of transplanted persons had not been determined.

Save, therefore, as regards precise details of instruments of title, difference in arrangement of volumes and particulars governed by the date of compilation, it can be said that, basically, these Books are of the same nature as the Books formerly belonging to the Auditor-General and known as Books of Survey and Distribution.

The origin and purpose of the Taylor Books could scarcely have been more explicitly stated than in the documents quoted above. If Books expressing similar particulars had been prepared, or were in course of preparation, by the commissioners of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, what necessity, it may be enquired, existed for the King's command. The necessity, indeed, for that command strongly induces the opinion that authority for such a compilation or, for that matter, of subsequent compilations on similar lines, did not reside in the Acts of Settlement and Explanation.

ORIGIN OF THE AUDITOR'S SERIES

In the statement of Mr. Hardinge, cited above, it is very definitely intimated that the records of the proceedings of the Court of Claims handed over, as he states, in 1680, included the Books of Survey and Distribution whose origin was in question. Elsewhere he gives the year 1678 as the approximate date of transfer. Whichever be the correct year, it may here be pointed out and recalled that the Books of the Auditor-General expressed the distribution of lands under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation subsequent to 1680. Numerous patents were taken out between this year and 1684 as indicated by the Abstracts printed in the third volume of the Record Commission's Reports; and, likewise, grants between 1684-88 issued under the Commission of Grace.

The opinion may again be expressed that the Books handed over were those directed to be compiled by the commissioners under sections 6 and 46 of the Act of Settlement which, ultimately reaching the Surveyor-General's office, were later known as the "Books of Survey and Distribution, 1661."

It would seem then more likely that the Auditor-General's set was of relative departmental composition or origin, an assumption warranted, apart from other considerations, by contemporaneous textual observations such as "discharged on plea of Disclaimer by Order of Exchequer Michaelmas Term 1681."¹¹¹ While Howard in his Treatise on the Revenue is silent as to the authority under which the Auditor's set was compiled, he indicates, as already pointed out, its utility, if not purpose, in forming a basis for the issuing of the Auditor's constats and for founding his reports on references from the Court of Exchequer. The certitude and exactness demanded in the specification of the Quit Rent payable, as well as of the lands out of which they issued, with their locations, could only be assured, it is thought, by such a compilation as that represented by the Books of Survey and Distribution. It may be suggested, therefore, that the necessity for such a series, in this particular connection, would have arisen independently of the composition of similar Books for other purposes. Finally, it is considered that the markings, leading to the various titles of the persons to whom the lands were distributed were designed to facilitate easy reference to the numerous and distinct volumes in the Auditor's office containing transcripts of the decrees, certificates and grants made under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. This feature, on the face of it, indicates a system of reference the significance of which could only be understood by those charged with particular duties, a circumstance which may be thought conclusive as to the departmental origin and purpose of the Auditor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution.

The exact date when the compilation of the main body of the particulars contained in these Books began it is not easy to determine, but some guidance may be afforded by reference to yet another set and to circumstances connected with the history of the Revenue.

THE ANNESLEY BOOKS

Documents representing the Annesley collection, received for photographing in recent years by the National Library, Dublin, described in Analecta Hibernica No. 16, included another notable set of Books of Survey and Distribution similar in character to those already described but distinguished by a particular feature. This is the specification of the amount of the Quit Rent payable to the Crown in respect of each denomination of the distributed forfeited lands; in addition the instruments of title are indicated in an adjoining column reserved for "Observations." Where lands were not liable to rent the fact is intimated as in the following instance relating to an estate of the Duke of York: "Certe. and Patent—liable to no rent" or again where some particular condition prevailed: "Provisoe pa. 77 Act of Expl. Quit Rent remitted by Letters Patent from his late Majesty." The particulars thus furnished in respect of the lands disposed of under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation—the sales are not included of the 1688 forfeitures—are of such a nature, amounting to the identification of the liability or otherwise of every denomination of land to Quit Rent, as to suggest an effort to meet the possible inadequacy or uncertainty of the existing Crown Rental; whatever the purpose, the source of this particular information is to be related to the Auditor-General's office. The heading "Rent payable to his Majesty," in conjunction with the observation, indicated above, as to a remission by "his late Majesty," suggests that the compilation of this set was begun in the reign of Charles II. When and under what circumstances, this particular series reached the Annesley collection, research has yet to disclose. In addition to the foregoing Books, the Annesley collection also contains valuable documents relative to the proceedings during the years 1700-1703 of the Trustees appointed in 1699, and of whom Mr. Francis Annesley was one, to dispose by sale of the estates and interests forfeited in 1688. These estates, under the Act 11 and 12 Wm. III, c. 2, were after their sale, to continue liable to the same rents as were payable on the 13th February, 1688. The conveyances made specify such rents. By a later Act (1 Ann. c. 2) the Trustees, with the consent of the Revenue Commissioners, were empowered to apportion these rents. It may well have been, therefore, that this particular set of Books of Survey and Distribution was made available for the use of the Trustees in the connection stated.

THE COLLECTION OF CROWN REVENUES

Bearing further on the date of the Auditor-General's set is the resumption by the Crown in 1683 of the management of all its revenues and when "Commissioners and Governors" thereof were appointed.¹¹² From 1669, to that year, these revenues had been in the hands of "Farmers" who for the purposes of collection—and "slighting the course of the Exchequer,"—divided the country into districts without regard to the division by counties, appointed collectors of their own, a Clerk of Quit Rents and an Accountant-General.¹¹³ The revenue from Quit Rents during this period was affected either by commissions for the reduction of such rents where they were too high, or by their discharge under orders from the Court of Exchequer, of which alterations the Auditor-General had no record. Consequently, at the conclusion of the Farms he "was not able to make out any charge for the Collection of the quit rents, nor was there any certain rent roll or record for that part of the revenue, but it lay wholly in the breast of the clerk of the quit rents to the farmers, and his private books . . ." ¹¹⁴ To remedy this position the new Commissioners of Revenue took into the Public Service the Clerk of the Quit Rents and the Accountant-General who had been employed by the Farmers ; " and a few years afterwards the Court of Exchequer ordered a new Rent Roll to be compiled according to the collection by districts from the Auditor's Books, and the original grants decrees and other records." ¹¹⁵ Thus, incidentally, originated the office of Clerk of the Quit rents which afterwards remained a public department.

¹¹² Liber mun. pub. Hiberniae, vol. I, pt. II, p. 123.

¹¹³ Howard, op. cit., vol. I, p. 58. The same author states that under the old method, that is before 1669, the Auditor-General made abstracts of the patents which were reduced under the heads of the several counties and where the several rents lay. A rent roll was transmitted by him to the second Remembrancer's Office or to the Clerk of the Pipe which last office "made out process to the respective sheriffs of the counties" for the collection of the rents. The sheriffs, when they passed their accounts, accounted with the court of Exchequer for these rents "and the whole rent roll for each county being in open court read over to the sheriff, he upon his oath gave his answer to each particular." This method of collection was inconvenient for several reasons, notably "arrears" in payment, and neglect to levy rents due, which led to a change in the method of collecting by sheriffs. "And there is one more which was thought to be of greater force . . . In the year 1669 the whole revenue of this kingdom was set to farm to John Forth, of the city of London, alderman, and ten others for seven years . . . at several sums amounting in the whole to £219,500."

With this period of re-organisation of the management of the Crown revenues, that is to say, the closing years of the reign of Charles II, the Auditor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution, in their main content, it is thought, began to be compiled ; their completion must be assigned to a date subsequent to the sales in 1703, by the Trustees of the Forfeited Estates of 1688. The letter, however, of the Clerk of the Quit Rents, cited above (p. xxiv), is open to the interpretation that the Surveyor-General's set was then, A.D. 1711, the only official one in existence ; but a letter written by the same gentleman some years previously, on the 22nd November, 1698, creates the impression that two sets were at this time available for inspection :

" I have . . . examined the Survey Books of Distribution and Decree and Letters Patent of Sir Valentine Browne for remitting the Quit Rent and find he claimed and was decreed . . . but I find by the Downe Survey and Books of Distribution the lands to contain . . ." ¹¹⁶ The documents referred to, in conjunction with the Books examined, may be said to localise the places of examination as those of the respective offices of the Auditor and Surveyor-General.

THE AUDITOR-GENERAL AND CLERK OF QUIT RENTS

Before considering the origin of the duplicate set of the Auditor-General's Books, formerly lodged in the Quit Rent Office, the mutual interests and concerns of both departments should first be made clear. These are indicated in a report ¹¹⁷ written by the Clerk of the Quit Rent Office,

Mr. G. S. Smythe in 1869 when the question of a new custody for the former Auditor-General's collections—this office having been abolished, 1822, under Act 3 Geo. IV, cap. 56—was under renewed discussion.¹¹⁸

" From the creation in 1669 of the Office of Clerk of the Quit Rents the most intimate relations have always existed between the Quit Rent Office and that of the Auditor-General, the records in the custody of the latter officer being indispensable to the management and collection of revenue. All patents . . . all orders of Court of Exchequer for putting rents in or striking them out of charge in fact all instruments affecting the Revenue were entered in the Auditor's Office and the requisite addition or alteration or discharge noted on his Rental and thereupon a Constat containing a brief abstract of the new charge, discharge or other alteration with date of patent or instrument on which it was founded was sent by him to the Clerk of the Quit Rents that he might make his rental correspond. . . . Efficiency of the Quit Rent department was dependent on the facility of obtaining information from Records in charge of the Auditor-General. If a rent was found omitted or entered erroneously he corrected the record and caused a similar correction to be made in the Rental in the Quit Rent Office. He has also furnished General Report on lists of arrears of Quit etc. Rents . . . to assist the Collectors . . . and he exercised what might be termed a supervision over the duties of the Quit Rent Office which since 1669 was under a distinct control, but always considered and treated as a detached member of the Auditor's Office." From either circa A.D. 1683 or 1693, it may be commented, would have been the more correct year for the close connection indicated.¹¹⁹ Mr. Smythe throws further light on the relationship of the two offices by an instance of the dual positions held by one individual : " For many years up to his death in 1815 Mr. William Bower held the position in the Auditor's Office (First Clerk) . . . and during the same time he was Clerk in the Quit Rent Office, and performed the duties of the latter situation in the Auditor's Office with the cognizance of the Commissioners of the Revenue, and subsequently of the Commissioners of Excise, in whom was vested the control of the Quit Rent department ¹²⁰ . . . On consideration of the several facts stated it will appear that up to the year 1669, the Auditor-General performed all the duties since discharged by the Clerk of the Quit Rents so far as they related to the charge and receipt of those rents; that solely to enable him to perform those duties all grants and other instruments on which rents were reserved were entered in his office."

ORIGIN OF QUIT RENT OFFICE SET

If no other circumstances than those indicated were to be cited they might be considered as providing reasonable grounds for inferring the origin of the Quit Rent Office set of Books of Survey and Distribution. It will be recalled however that the Auditor's own Books were in the Quit Rent Office in 1759 and that a copy was in the Forfeiture Office. Apart from facilitating the making of a copy for official purposes, which may easily be imagined, it is thought that the circumstances of the Auditor's Books being away from their proper habitat was originally governed by other requirements. In this connection the Act 1 and 2 Anne, cap. 21, sec. 2 (English) directed that all the deeds, records and papers "whatsoever" belonging to the Trustees of Forfeited Estates, 1688, were to be transferred to the keeping of the Commissioners of Revenue. The documents so delivered, in 1703, are listed in the second volume of the Record Commissions Reports (pp. 614-17). In turn the Commissioners of Revenue appointed the "Clerk of the Forfeitures" whose particular business was the care of these records, making searches, and giving copies.¹²¹

Thus had come under the control of the Commissioners of Revenue the two departments of the "Clerk of the Quit Rents" and the "Clerk of the Forfeitures" both of which were most likely housed in the one building.

It may, therefore, be suggested that the Auditor-General for the purpose of completing his Books of Survey and Distribution in so far as the entering of the names of the purchasers of the Forfeited Estates of 1688 was concerned had recourse to the records of the Forfeiture Office. If so, then the absence of the Books from their proper habitat is explained.¹²² It may also be conjectured that when the necessary entries were completed the Books were returned to the Auditor-General via the "Clerk of the Quit Rents" by whom they were detained pending their copying. That they were for a very considerable period in the care of the latter is indicated by the year inscribed in one of the duplicate volumes 1739, as that of its examination, or comparison, and from the date, 1759, of the return of the set. If anything this is indeed further evidence of the very close relationship of the two departments.

To conclude this section, it would appear from the report of the "Clerk of the Quit Rents," Mr. G. S. Smythe quoted above, that in 1829 on the abolition of the Office of "Clerk of the Forfeitures," its records were placed in charge of the Quit Rent department for some years, but that under an order of the Commissioners of Woods, Forests and Land Revenues, dated 31st October, 1840, they were handed over to the officer in charge of the Auditor's Records.¹²³ It should be added that the control and management of the office of the "Clerk of the Quit Rents" had passed in 1827 to the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, from the Revenue authorities.¹²⁴ at p. vi is that cited at the opening section of this note. The powers of the Trustees came to an end 24 June, 1703, and their documents were handed over to the Commrs. of Revenue by deed dated 3 August of the same year. It is most unlikely that the Trustees themselves would have marked the Auditor's Books as indicated by Prendergast's note. Mr. L'Estrange was Senior Clerk in the Q.R.O. in 1863.

¹²⁴ "General Order—Excise Office, Dublin, 20 October, 1827; For the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the Act 7 and 8 Geo. IV., cap. 68 'for the management and improvement of the Land Revenues of the Crown in Ireland, and for other purposes relating thereto' Ordered: That the Clerk of the Quit Rents at this office execute all orders relating to the duties of his Department that he may receive from the Commissioners of Woods and Forests. By the Board, W. Wardley"—Letter Book 2B, 44, 62 P.R.O. A similar order dated 18th Decr., 1827 directed the transfer of records. LB: 2B, 35, 37. It would appear, it may be added, that the control of the Auditor's records by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests was frequently recommended. Smythe in his report, cited above, states: "So convinced was the Vice-Treasurer of Ireland of the intimate relationship between the Auditor's Records and the duties of the Clerk of the Quit Rents and of those Records being what he termed an appurtenant to the office of the latter that on the 11th July, 1831, he recommended to the Lords of H.M. Treasury that their control and direction should be transferred to the Commissioners of Woods in order that both offices should be under the same management. The proposed transfer was also contemplated in 1860 and in a report made to you (Commrs. of Woods) from this office on 19 Jan., 1864, the objections made in 1831 were observed upon and it was stated that 'it would be for the public benefit that the Keeper's (of the Landed Estates Records) Office should be placed under your control'." The recommendations thus made were not approved.

SOME PREVIOUS PUBLICATIONS

Besides the edition of a Book of Survey and Distribution for Westmeath, printed from a volume in the Surveyor-General's collection, there have been publications from other series. The appendix to vol. I of the History and Antiquities of Kilkenny by the Revd. Wm. Healy, P.P. (1893) purports to represent the Book of Survey and Distribution for that county as "copied from the original MS. preserved in the Record Office, Dublin, by the Author." While the names of the old and new proprietors are stated neither the Down Survey reference numbers nor any particulars of instruments of title are given in Father Healy's book. With the issue of the Cork Historical and Arch. Society Journal, July-December, 1932 (vol. xxxvii), was begun the publication of a Book of Survey and Distribution for that county "copied from the MS. volume in Library of R.I.A. by Anne Waters"; this belongs to the set "composed by Thomas Taylor" described above.

Students may be reminded that since the Auditor-General's series had contained a more complete account of the final distribution of land under the Acts of Settlement, Commission of Grace, etc., than other sets, including the Headfort series in the P.R.O. (56th Report p. 307) the Quit Rent Office duplicate of the Auditor's books, described at the beginning of this introduction, should always be consulted.

In addition to the various series already mentioned, yet another set of Books of Survey and Distribution formerly existed amongst the muniments at Kilkenny Castle; according to a letter from the Revd. J. Graves to Sir John Gilbert, printed at p. 295 of the latter's Life, by R. M. Gilbert, this set was abstracted between the years 1830 and 1848.

* * * * *

For topographical and genealogical research the Books of Survey and Distribution are of the utmost importance. Representing, as already stated, abstracts made before the fire of 1711 of the Strafford Civil and Down Surveys they have preserved for every Irish county vital particulars of place-names, phonetically expressed, as recorded over the period 1636-60. The loss which otherwise would have been sustained through the destruction of the surveys mentioned has thus been considerably mitigated. It has been pointed out that the well-known Down Survey maps, available to investigators since 1908, are unintelligible without the corresponding Books of Survey and Distribution; in this connection attention may be drawn to the fact that so far back as 1812 the publication of the latter was recommended in one of the Record Commission's Reports (Vol. I, p. 414). In conjunction with the Down Survey, as superimposed on the Ordnance Survey six-inch maps, the Books of Survey and Distribution provide exceptional material for toponymical studies.

In the specification, county by county, of the names of proprietors of land prior and subsequent to the Commonwealth settlement, the genealogist is provided with details of the losses no less than the gains of countless families. Here emerges the land of Ireland as it was held three centuries ago by Gaels and Gaelicised Normans, by Normans "The Old English," by "The New English" of the Elizabethan and of the later plantations and settlements. The Books of Survey and Distribution frequently provide the addresses of landholders and always the parishes in which their possessions were located, details which should prove of much help in genealogical research.

In another respect, that of statistical enquiry, these Books also provide material worthy of investigation. Hardinge, according to Prendergast, used them for the purpose of a section of the Appendix (E) to his paper on Surveys in Ireland. The relative section (pp. 100-4) is entitled "Table exhibiting the number of Irish Plantation Acres, Profitable and Unprofitable, Admeasured as Forfeited in each Barony." There is, however, a wide measure of disagreement between this "Table" and the "Particular of the Contents of the Baronys admeasured by Dr. Petty" printed at p. 137 of Larcom's edition of the History of the Down Survey. For example the latter shows for Dublin the total area admeasured as forfeited in that county to have been 73,894 acres plantation measures, whereas Hardinge states it to have been 64,931 acres of the same measure—a difference of close on 9,000 acres. The explanation in this, as in other instances, would appear to be that Hardinge deducted the acreages restored to former proprietors under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation from the total of the acreages originally admeasured as forfeited.

The Books of Survey and Distribution should also help to determine another statistical problem, that is as to the number of Catholic landowners in 1641. Petty's figure of 3,000 is challenged by Professor Butler in his "Confiscation in Irish History" (pp. 156-7) where he states that "we are warranted in assuming that for the whole island the number . . . . was at least 8,000 and may have been as many as 10,000 or even 12,000." It is thought that the careful examination, county by county, of the Books of Survey and Distribution should resolve this problem as likewise that of the total acreage forfeited (1641) and estimated by Hardinge at 1,973,769 plantation acres.

MAYO BOOK OF SURVEY AND DISTRIBUTION

At the outset a brief reference may be made to the geography of the county of Mayo which has been the subject of dispute and alteration in olden and recent times.

By the inquisition taken at the abbey of Cong on the 22nd August 1607, the "Boundaries of Mayo" were defined; these included the barony of Ross there stated to consist of 100 quarters of land.¹ Some twenty-two years previously in 1585, the year of the "Composition of Connaught" this barony was returned as residing within the territory of "Ireconnaght" which was stated to include as well the baronies of Moycullen and Ballinahinch.² Confirming this Galway pre-assignment is the return of the baronies stated to comprise the country or territory of Mayo in the corresponding "Indenture,"³ also of the year 1585; Ross does not here appear, and the nine baronies listed are those represented by the present text.

It has been stated that the barony of Ross was transferred to Galway by the Lord Deputy Fitzwilliam in consequence of a dispute between the rival rent collectors of the two counties.⁴ If the Galway collector had then the "Indenture of Mayo" to support his claim successfully, it is not an unreasonable assumption that his Mayo opponent was not without influence with the jurors of 1607 who began their return with the declaration that Mayo consisted of ten baronies.

The assignation however of Sir William Fitzwilliam, who left Ireland finally in 1594, prevailed and Ross barony continued to be wholly in Galway for nearly three centuries. Then under the Local Government (Ireland) Act, 1898 (Alterations of Boundaries up to 2nd November 1898), the transference to county Mayo was authorised of the Galway part parishes within the barony of Ross, of Ballinchalla, Ross, and Ballinrobe with numerous islands in Lough Mask, representing in all close on twenty-six thousand acres—half the area of the barony.⁵

It may be added that under the same Act nearly ten thousand acres of the Sligo barony of Tireragh (parishes of Kilmoremoy, Kilmore and Castleconor) were also transferred to Mayo; against this gain in territory, nineteen thousand acres were taken from the Mayo barony of Costello (parish of Kilcolman) and given to Roscommon.

While we are indebted to the Ordnance Survey Department for these particulars, there is an aspect of the matter to which it is desirable to direct attention.

Collation of the Census of Townlands of 1871 with that of 1901 or of 1911, occasions in the topographer, unmindful of legislative changes, much confusion regarding territorial locations. The parish or townland always known to have been in a certain barony of a particular county and actually shown by the Census of 1871 to have been so, is found in that of 1901 to be elsewhere—an incredible contradiction of tradition, geography, and local history! It is of serious concern when the investigator, consulting only the Census of 1901—or that of 1911—is led to refer to, or perhaps to purchase, on the basis of its returns a publication of an historical nature. Obviously a measure of guidance is called for by the separate printing of a complete list of all such territorial changes since 1831.

In the absence of both Strafford and Down Survey maps for the county as a whole, the Commission decided to include with the present volume an alternative, if less detailed, source in the map of Mayo derived from Petty's Hiberniae Delineatio, commonly called Petty's Atlas, the first edition of which appeared in 1683; the second edition, not earlier than 1719 was dedicated to the Earl of Shelburne;⁶ the accompanying map is from the former edition. Barony boundaries, parish names and those of most places in the Book of S. & D. are exhibited here. Petty had full

At p. 324 Knox states that the barony of Ross in earliest times was in the territory of the "Tuath Resent Umoir and of the Partraighe whom the Conmaicne put out of sight." He identifies it as within the FitzGerald manor of Lough Mask and that when it was first laid out it comprised the lands of the Joys, the Walshs and the Partry in which McThomas and McTybod were chiefs. Sir Murrough O'Flaherty was considered to hold the entire barony under MacWilliam. He adds that the parish of Partry or Ballyovey was in Carra in 1585. It is returned in this bar. by the present text p. 132-3. Note on p. 132 at map number 77 "Derrin-first."

access to the Strafford maps and it is to be inferred that the Connacht sections of his Atlas were compiled from these.⁷ For the study of the present text the Mayo map is an indispensable adjunct.

It may be recalled from his "Brief Account of the Down Survey" written in 1659, that Petty visualised an achievement in regard to this Atlas which was not to materialise for over thirty years. "Maps of each county and province, as also of the whole island, will be published in print according to the several ancient and modern divisions of the same."⁸ His petitions of some years later reveal obstacles and difficulties. In 1664 and again in 1665 he appealed to the King "for encouragement and assistance to finish the map of Ireland" in the making of which he had been "at many hundred pounds charge and several years labour."⁹ These petitions found expression in the Act of Explanation (1665) when for "his better encouragement to finish the several maps and descriptions of this Kingdom" a special clause (Sec. 100) directed the imposition of one penny per acre "out of all the lands in the admeasurement whereof he was employed." That there should be a practical result to this statutory direction Petty was empowered under the same authority, to enter upon lands and levy whatever was due; at the same time it was made legal for the tenants or occupiers to deduct from their rents the amounts so collected.

The unmeasured, that is unforfeited, lands was another object of concern to Petty; even so, the county and provincial maps—"and of the whole Kingdom"—were stated by him in 1673 to have then been "engraved upon copper," but, he significantly adds "all which, could the defects of them be supplied with the yet unmeasured lands, would be exposed to public view."^{9a} It was not however until eight years later, in 1683, and four years before his death, that the first edition appeared.

It should however be noted that since Strafford's Survey purported to include all divisions, Petty's difficulty with regard to unforfeited or unadmeasured lands should have been less a problem in the preparation of his maps of Connacht counties. Confirmation of this will be found on reference to the Strafford barony map of Athlone published with the Roscommon volume in this series.¹⁰

The second map included with this volume is that of the barony of Tirawley, 1657, derived originally from the Down Survey maps entitled "Hibernia Regnum" located in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris.*

* * * * *

The present texts are taken from two distinct volumes in the Quit Rent Office collection of Books of Survey & Distribution, one of these, numbered (18) in the series, contains the nine baronies of Mayo county, deriving mostly from the Strafford Survey of 1636-7; this will be referred to hereafter as the main text; the other—bound up with Sligo and Leitrim counties—from the volume numbered (14) representing the barony of Tirawley, according to the Down Survey, 1657; it forms Appendix A (p. 205). There are included, therefore, two distinct texts for this barony, differences in admeasurements, descriptions of lands and proprietors' names being notable features.

Captions of the columns in both of the original texts are the same but since only one barony of the county was the subject of the Down Survey a revision became necessary; this consisted in deleting from the sixth column of the main text the words "by the Down Survey." It has already been explained (p. VII) that the provision of captions was of a casual nature since they appear in respect of the text for only nine counties. Either the pattern was mechanically used or that for Tirawley barony thoughtlessly adopted for the whole county.

In the text for Roscommon the captions of the seventh column—distribution side—is fuller in respect of the contents: "To whom so disposed with their title by decree, certificate, or patent; references to the record thereof"; the two final columns in the same text, but without captions in the present, are headed "No. of the book or roll and of the page or skin" and also "No. of the profitable acres remaining undisposed." Where these acreages are shown by the present text in either of the final columns—otherwise blank—the caption "Undisposed in Book of S. & D." has been inserted within square brackets.

The numbers in the first column of the main text are the reference numbers to the maps of the Strafford Survey, and those in the Tirawley text (App. A) to the Down Survey. This numeration varies as regards sequence. For example, through Costello barony (p. 79) it ascends from 1 to 264 whereas, elsewhere, parishes are numerated separately as in the main text (pp. 161-200). Save for Burrishowle (p. 95) where reference numbers are given in respect of only one parish (Aghagower) they are provided for most denominations of land in the remaining baronies.

An exception to the conventional form occurs on and after p. 132, within the barony of Carra, where a double numeration is given in fractional form, thus: $\frac{1}{77}$. Of this an instance has been cited in the introduction to the Roscommon volume (p. 1) where it was shown that the number above the line was that of the reference to the "Alphabet" and the lower number to the map. The caption "No. of reference in the Alphabet" there given is not provided by the present text, where the references to the maps appear under "Numbers in the Plot."

* * * *

Textual annotations, and there are many, belong to different periods—those contemporaneous with the Strafford Survey itself, and those of a later date corresponding with that of the compilation of the Books of S. & D. in the latter half of the 17th century. They may be distinguished by the knowledge of the nature of the documents then available; these included the inquisition of the county, taken in 1635, returning names of reputed owners and of their lands,¹¹ the Books of Reference to the Strafford Survey particularising the lands of each parish, their proprietors, admeasured acreages, areas under woods and bogs, churches, castles, mills and so forth—all returned on the sworn testimony of jurors and admeasurers. These Books would be analogous to the Books of Reference to the Down Survey but apparently—from the specimens which are available—

more detailed and in this respect more akin to the Civil Survey of twenty years later.¹²

Textual observations from this Strafford source may be cited. At the foot of p. 84, opposite the reference number 75, there is this note: "... as the Gentlemen of the Parish depose"; these doubtless were the jurors for the parish concerned and who had testified that the particular lands specified were located in Sligo county. Again at p. 131, reference number 155, there is the statement "by direction made $\frac{1}{2}$ profitable." How closely the present main text is a reproduction of the Strafford Books of Reference is indicated on p. 105 at the lands of Fraugh: "Measured for my Lord of Mayo, but said to be bought by him in 1616 from James Cusack yet Bryen McCormuck, Richard McEdmond and Thomas oge McTeige are said to be the ancient proprietors of the same."

There are numerous annotations attributable—obviously in some instances—to a later date, evidencing the scrutiny of the Strafford books and maps, and constituting a redaction of the Survey. Thus, certain lands on p. 85 were "Not found in the Survey but guest to be one of the quarters of Clancoogan mentioned in the Survey"; again, on p. 82, particular lands were "not found in the Measurers Book" while on p. 121, at Mullinbronane, there is this direction to a Strafford boundary map "vide Touch Plot." An observation at p. 91 leaves no doubt that it is post Strafford: "These . . . quarters in the possession of Sir Lucas Dillon past unto him since the Survey by Lord Dillon in exchange for other lands."

That a text earlier than the present was in existence but no longer available is made clear by the note at p. 51: "More by Distribution Book."

Tirawley barony, within the main text, (pp. 163-200) is annotated throughout with quotations of the acreages of the Down Survey and with particulars of the rents payable to the Crown in respect of most denominations of land in the barony. Thus, below place-names, in column 3, will be found the entry "P. Down Survey," or, simply "Down Survey" and in the 5th column its admeasurement in acres is given under the Strafford figures. This provides material, at a glance, for the study of the respective admeasurements in both surveys of this barony. In the two final and uncaptioned columns are given the amounts of the annual rents payable to the Crown in respect of each denomination with respective descriptions of such rents—Crown, Composition or Quit.¹³ There can be little doubt that these annotations emanated from the Auditor-General's department where there was then available particulars of Restoration, and earlier, instruments of title.

A final example may be given of a note on p. 100 (barony of Burrishowle), appearing after groups of persons whose names are rendered McGnele—McGneale—McGrele—"these not in Survey"—that is in the Strafford Survey of this particular barony. Families of this name are returned in Murrisk barony in the inquisition of 1635. A further reference will be made to this name.

TRANSPLANTATION PROCEEDINGS

In format and general character the main text agrees with that of Roscommon published as volume I in this series. The introduction to the latter (pp. xxxiii—xliv) established the adoption of the Strafford Survey made in 1636-7 for the then projected plantation of Connacht, as the main source from which basic particulars for these Connacht Books of S. & D. were drawn after the Restoration.¹⁴

¹³ These rents have been defined thus: (1) Crown rents: These are the ancient rents reserved upon grants made by the Crown of its demesne lands and land of inheritance, fairs, markets, ferries and fisheries. They arise with few exceptions under grants made during a period commencing with the reign of Henry VIII and ending with that of Charles I.

(2) Composition rents: These are rents reserved in the Compositions entered into in the reign of Queen Elizabeth with the Lords and Chieftains of Connaught and Thomond. A large number of Crown rents and some Composition rents which were in existence in 1641 issued out of lands which were forfeited as the result of the rebellion of that year and were extinguished by such forfeiture, but on the regrant of the lands, in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanations, they became subject to Quit rents.

(3) Quit rents are the rents payable to the Crown under the Acts of S. and E. out of the lands forfeited in consequence of the rebellion of 1641. The lands when allotted were to be held in free and common soccage, and not by feudal tenure, and were to be subject to a constant yearly rent reserved to the Crown as follows:—Out of each acre in Ulster, 1d.; Connacht, 1½d.; Munster 2½d. and Leinster 3d., the Ulster rate afterwards increased to 2d. See memo. by J. Harper Scaife, p. 236 of Report of Committee on Irish Forestry, 1908.

Attention was also drawn to sec. 5 of the Act of Exp. (1665) which directed the use of Strafford's survey for purposes of computation.

In the interval this Survey had also been adopted by the Commonwealth government for the purpose of effecting its proclaimed policy of transplanting to Connacht those of the Irish nation comprehended by the Act of September 1653, and by subsequent orders and decrees. The present texts must in consequence be read in the light of this historic and factual proceeding, for which the Strafford Survey was to prove the key to the lands of the west.

As Connacht and Clare were not for the most part, within the scope of the Civil Survey commission, the following directions to the Commonwealth court set up at Athlone was given in August 1655:

"That instead of granting commissions to prove possession in 1641 all surveys that were formerly taken upon oath by juries should be conclusive and binding to all parties. The Lord Deputy and Council do think fit to leave the same to the consideration of the court to judge the sufficiency of such surveys."¹⁵

Numerous documents testify to what these surveys were. One of March 22, 1656-7 is explicit: ". . . all Surveys of that Province which had been taken in Lord Strafford's time had been delivered to Sir Charles Coote, Lord President of Connaught for the use of the commissioners at Loughrea." Though transcripts have been suggested, it would appear that the original documents went to Loughrea. When the Lord President wished to pass a patent for the lands, given to transplanters, which he was buying-up, an official was directed to proceed to Loughrea for collation of the lists of such lands with the original survey.¹⁶

The adoption of the Strafford Survey for the purpose of the Transplantation being thus evidenced, a brief reference to its character and contents is called for. Of this Survey A.D. 1636-9, which perished in the fire of 1711, an official account by the Surveyor—General Benjamin Worsley and Major Miles Symner is preserved in Petty's History of the Down Survey, edited by Larcom.¹⁷ It consisted of Books of Survey (or Reference) made up in baronies and of county, barony, and parish maps. The Books of Survey "bound up in parchment" returned the "bounds, mears, names and by-names of all the quarters, plowlands and other denominations of lands" lying in the respective parishes "together with all the owners and proprietors of the said lands." Each book contained the names of the jurors who testified on oath, parish by parish, as to the particulars set out and also a certificate from the surveyors who had admeasured the lands testifying to their quantities and qualities. The barony and parish maps are described as "entire and perfect—the said plotts or maps expressing also the quality of the said land whether arable, pasture or meadow."¹⁸

Though well-known to history, it may be recalled that all persons "having right to favour and mercy"—significant words in the light of those who were comprehended and what was intended—had been ordered to transplant themselves before the 1st May, 1654.

While ostensibly the whole province of Connacht and county Clare were available for this project, an ordered procedure was prescribed and reservations made. It was announced in 1653 that Connacht proprietors should have recompense in other lands, within these regions, for the value of their lands assigned to transplanter.¹⁹ Subsequently, in December 1653, commissions for the examination of witnesses according to specified interrogatories regarding the conduct of proprietors during the war, were sent to the commissioners of the precincts, these constituting the units of administration throughout the country.²⁰ Sir Charles Coote's offer to prove delinquency against "most of the persons" who had considerable estates in Connacht was then accepted.²¹

To implement the project, courts were established at Athlone and Loughrea, the former being known as the Court of Qualifications; it heard and determined according to law the claims of persons who were or had been "Popish Recusants."²² On its decrees the Loughrea court set forth lands proportionable to the stocks and tillage in the places from whence the transplanter had removed. Neither Crown nor Church lands were to be assigned, these being reserved for disposal by the Protector.²³

Particulars of Mayo proprietors, there were approximately 100 of them, who received decrees, are given in the "Account of the lands set out to transplanter," printed in the Reports of the H. M. C. (Ormonde collection).²⁴

In 1656 certain baronies in Connacht and Clare were assigned to the transplanter from other provinces.²⁵ Under this arrangement the "inhabitants" of Down and Antrim were assigned the Mayo baronies of Clannorris, Carra and Kilmaine and those of other Ulster counties, not specified, the baronies of Murrisk, Burrishoole, Erris, part of Tirawley and Costello. The barony of Gallen is not mentioned, though it was unlikely to have been overlooked. Tirawley barony, withdrawn for disbanded soldiers, will be noticed later; lands within three miles of the sea and Shannon were also reserved.

Some months later, in July 1656, it was stated that this rule was proving incapable of application since the lands available in certain baronies were becoming exhausted.²⁶

The name of at least one Ulster transplanter, who in addition to an Athlone decree received a Restoration grant will be recognised in the Gallen section of the Mayo text—"Tirlagh or Torlogh O'Neale"; he was the son of Henry O'Neill of the Fewes in Armagh and grandson of Sir Tirlagh McHenry O'Neill. In the Athlone decree of 1655, made in favour of Tirlagh's father, there is a detailed recital of his Armagh lands and an account of his conduct—satisfactory to the authorities, during the war; it concludes by awarding him in Connacht two-thirds of his former estate. This rare and interesting document is published in the 32nd Report Deputy Keeper, Public Record Office, (E.).

While the "Accompt of lands set out to the Transplanted Irish in Connaught" mentioned above, specifies the names of those who had received decrees, and the acreages granted, neither the names of the lands nor their location is given. These particulars are available from another source to which reference must here be made.

¹⁸ Of this survey Petty wrote (p. 16 op. cit.) "That . . . it was done only according to the lowest denominations; this not only so but with distinction of proprietries, sub-divisions and double books and plotts." Larcom commenting on Petty's description says that it was apparently the most valuable work of the kind which had then been performed in Ireland. Having referred to the loss sustained by its destruction in 1711 he adds that "there were then existing estate maps in possession of families in Connacht traditionally believed to be duplicates of Strafford's maps." The loss had been the greater since Connacht originally excepted from Petty's work (p. 325).

The report on the Headfort collection of Books and Maps printed in the second volume of the Record Commissioners' Reports (pp. 14-32), furnishes under the head of "Books of Survey and Distribution" the following description of several volumes believed to have been partly compiled from the Strafford Survey containing the counties of Mayo, Roscommon, Clare and Galway:

"A third set, evidently not the Down, but apparently that commonly called the Earl of Strafford's Survey. It contains the proprietors in 1641; denominations of land, acres profitable and unprofitable; to whom set out by final settlement; number of profitable acres so set out; to whom granted by Decree, Certificate or Patent; and lands undisposed of. It differs from other sets previously described in this Report in having only acres mentioned without roods or perches."

These Books of S. & D. were purchased by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests and Land Revenues in 1837 and were for many years deposited in their Dublin Quit Rent Office. They are now available in the P.R.O., Dublin: See 56th Report of the Deputy Keeper (pp. 307-8).

The particular feature of interest in these volumes to which attention may again be called is the column captioned "To whom set out by final settlement." It has been shown in the introduction to the first volume of the present series that the names appearing in this column are those of the transplanters to whom lands had been set out by the Loughrea commissioners on the basis of the decrees of the Court of Athlone. This is an important link with the proceedings of the Transplantation Courts since the names of the lands, their parochial and baronial locations, as well as their acreages, appear. Collation further establishes, not infrequently, the counties of origin of the transplanters, this by means of the addresses given in the "Accompt" as well as the acreages which will be found occasionally to agree.

Though Mayo was reserved for Ulster transplanters, those from elsewhere may clearly be identified. Taking for example the barony of Costello there are found in the Headfort book approximately eighty names of persons who had received Commonwealth decrees in conjunction with the names of lands and acreages. Such names as Cruise, Barnewall, Butler, Purcell, O'Brien—all suggest counties of provinces other than Ulster. Most of such names, however, will not be found in the present main text for Costello barony. On referring to that region (pp. 80-93), it will be observed that Lord Dillon is returned, on the distribution side of the text, as the owner of almost the whole barony.

A copy of a petition from a planter in the Prendergast Collection, illustrates what must have happened in many cases. The petitioner—J. Nolan (he could have been from either Ballinrobe or Sligo), states that he had received from the Commonwealth, 1,100 acres; of these he lost by Lord Dillon's restoration under the Act of Settlement 800 acres, and 300 acres through Lady Mayo's restoration to her jointure; "he prayed a reprize out of lands given up by Sir James Bellew and then in custodiam to Ulick Brown."²⁷

In relation to the distribution or right-hand side of the present texts it is important to remember the governing provisions of the King's Declaration in favour of transplanters who were to be reprised before a second dispossession in the space of a few years materialised; these are given at p. xvi of the opening introduction. This question became acute in the case of Sir Theobald Bourke, fourth Viscount Mayo who had been directed to be restored by the Act of Settlement²⁸ It was represented in 1664 that his estate could not be restored by the late Court of Claims "though never so Innocent" without the transplanters being first removed.²⁹ On this issue the views of Lord Orrery communicated on April 14, 1666, to the Lord Lieutenant (Ormonde) may be noted: "Orrery understands from Lord Mayo that the major part of the commissioners (of Claims) doubt whether Lord Mayo can by his clause in the last Act be restored before a previous reprisal to Adventurers, Soldiers and Transplanted Irish. The words are to be restored forthwith and before a previous reprisal, unless to those lands to which adventurers and soldiers are in possession. He (Orrery) conceives the transplanted Irish are included and to be removed before reprisal. If they ²⁷ Prendergast Coll., vol. M-Y, p. 32.

²⁸ The petition of Theobald, Visct. Mayo to the King is dated Feb. 1660/1. It sets out his service to the King in Connacht, and his adherence to the peace until Clanrickarde was overpowered. His father, though included in Clanrickarde's articles, was condemned and shot to death under cover of an illegal sentence, his estate seized and disposed to transplanters; educated in the Protestant religion and had lived in England for 8 years; prayed for restoration to his father's estate.

Abstracted by Prendergast (vol. VI, p. 444) from Carte papers.

are to be reprised previously, it will by implication determine the Transplantation to be confirmed. And Lord Mayo's private case will determine the grand question."³⁰

The present texts show the estates in 1641 of (1) Miles, the second Viscount Bourke and (2) those of his grandson Theobald, after the Restoration. Material is therefore provided for the collation as to what lands were lost and restored or granted. It is observed that some of the second Lord Mayo's lands passed to John Boswell (p. 46), and that in other instances Lord Mayo's restoration was to be "After reprise."

The absence from the present texts of many transplanters names returned in the Headfort Book of S. & D. is further explained by the sale by transplanters of their lands to persons known as the "Connaught Purchasers." Sixteen of the latter are named in section 50 of the Act of Settlement, and by way of guidance to the suggested origin of title of persons returned on the distribution side, a selection may here be given: Lord Kingston, Lord Coote—baron of Coloony, Carey Dillon, Sir George Bingham and Major Arthur Gore. These with others were also known as the "Breda Nominees",³¹ Information as to names of "Connaught purchasers" will also be found in the "Catalogues of Reports and Schedules addressed to the Court of Claims" printed in the second volume of the Record Commissioners' Reports (pp. 248-300).

Transplanters not falling within the respective circumstances indicated received in 1676 certificates on which patents were to be founded and when the position was, though belatedly, finally regularised as exemplified by the texts.

New Mayo proprietors, after the Restoration, also included personages who, apart from other considerations may be presumed to have merited the King's favour, such as George (Monk) Duke of Albermarle who was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, 1660-2.

Representing proprietorship both in 1641 and after 1660, the respective Earls of Cork appear in Kilmaine and Tirawley.

Among those restored may also be noted the name of Colonel Garrett Moore (probably represented in later times by the Moores of Moore Hall). The lands granted to him were mostly in Kilmaine barony.

³⁰ Ibid., vol. V, p. 9.

³¹ Idem, p. 254: "His Majesty will agree to any Act of Parlt. for the confirmation of all grants and purchasers of estates by officers, soldiers and others. This included the purchasers of Connacht decrees."

The marks or symbols showing for each particular class the instruments of their title appear at p. lii. By far the most common is that indicating the dual instruments of a Connacht certificate and an Act of Settlement grant $\nless$; this sign can also indicate a certificate in respect of other claims plus an Act of Settlement patent. It has been observed that where the latter was obtained it is not always shown by the text as in the instance of Sir James Cuffe, on p. 24, where the sign $\nless$ indicating a decree or certificate only is given. By means of the Abstracts of Grants and the indexes printed in the third and supplementary volumes of the Record Commissioners' Reports it is possible to verify many of the markings in the text.

In some instances the difficulty of determining the grantee arises by virtue of two or more persons appearing in this capacity in respect of the same acreage or thereabouts. There is an example of this on p. 227 where Sir Robert Viner's name is given in conjunction with "Conly and Rose Geogegan" for 640 acres of Ballenglana, parish of "Doonefiny," barony of Tirawley. Here we know that the latter had received Connacht certificates and that "Bryne Geoghegan" son and heir of Conly received an Act of Settlement grant for the lands concerned.³² This patent is dated 12 March, 36th year of Charles II and was enrolled 15 May 1684. Sir Robert Viner's name is to be accounted for by the appearance in the Act of Explanation 1665 (sec. 215) of a provision vesting in him all the lands, loughs, and rivers of the half barony of Erris, and of the parish of Dunfiny in the county of Mayo adjoining. In such instances of conflict recourse should be had for the final outcome to the Crown Rent Roll of 1706 in the P.R.O., Dublin. Where no signs are given, and this occasionally happens, the same sources should be consulted in conjunction with the Q.R.O. collection of copies or certified copies of letters patent, decrees and other documents.

As regards Church lands these are usually distinguished by a cross over the letters "AB" or "B" signifying archbishop or bishop as the case may be. No other symbol appears; by section 102 of the Act of Settlement ecclesiastical persons who had been dispossessed were directed to be forthwith restored.

in 1702-3 are indicated by the sign ☉. The maps of these lands, which perished in 1922, are listed in the Catalogue in the Eighth Report of the Commissioners of Public Records of Ireland (p. 336); this shows that forfeited estates in Mayo were within the baronies of Kilmaine (Shruell), Gallen, Costello and Carra. There is, however, available, what is described in the British Museum Catalogue of Ms. Maps as "a further portion of the Trustees Survey," and which can now happily be consulted in the microfilm collection of the National Library, Dublin. These maps, fifteen in all, are of estates forfeited in the baronies of Clanmorris, Tirawley, Costello and Gallen. Five of them relate to Walter Bourke's estates in Clanmorris and Tirawley; other forfeiting proprietors whose lands were also mapped include Garret Dillon, James Brown, Thomas Bourke, Christopher Dillon, Manus O'Donnell and John Waddin. This last name, it may be interjected, recalling the illustrious one of Wadding was most likely the "John Wadding" who was a transplanter from Barnton in co. Wexford; the present text shows (p. 159) that his estate was purchased from the Trustees by Sir Henry Bingham.

It should be pointed out however that in at least one instance a sale by the Trustees has not been recorded by the present main text. The first map in the British Museum collection is of the estate of Walter Bourke and relates to "the three half-quarters of Bolligowne." These lands are returned on p. 63 and are shown to have been granted at the Restoration to Colonel Garrett Moore and to "John Shea, etc."; on referring to Shea's patent it is found however that there was a reservation in favour of Walter Burke of inter alia 39 acres in "Ballingowne."

Collation with inter alia the sources indicated is therefore desirable in relation to the sales by the Trustees of the Forfeited Estates as recorded by the present text.

* * * * *

Most of the 1641 freeholders returned by the main text bear Hibernicised names; the most succinct, and at the same time comprehensive and explanatory, list of these that has been found is contained in Sir Oliver St. John's "Description of Connaught," 1614 (Carew S.P. 1603-24):

"County of Mayo has of ancient English the Burkes that contained the name of McWilliam till it was by Composition abolished, the Prendergasts called the McMaurices, the Nangles called the MacCoystillos, the D'Exeters called McJordan, the Stantons called McYvilles, the Barretts called McPaddin's, the Burkes called McMeylers, the Burkes called McGibbons, the Burkes called MacPhillipins and some other inferior septs of the Burkes.

"Of new English there are John More, who has the country of Clanmaurice and some of the Bingham's; of English transplanted out of the Pale, the Earl of Ormond who has Buresowle; Sir Theobald Dillon who has the country of Clancoystillo, the Bowens and some others.

"Of the Irishry there are none but the O'Mayles who possess the waste country of the Owles."

Some names of freeholders returned by our texts whose patronymics indicate native Gaelic origin may, however, be noted. On p. 100 there are in family groups, as it were, owning very small estates numerous persons named respectively McGrele, McGneale and McGnele. The first rendering has been equated with Mac Néill—a branch of the Uí Fiachrach, and said to be in use in Mayo under the corrupted form of Mag Réill.³³

On p. 103 there is the interesting return of "Dermot Leigh alias Lia Offarishy" and others of the same name. The indicated profession of this proprietor confirms the association of the name Ó Fearguis—Ó Feargusa with that of a medical family who were hereditary physicians to the O'Malleys in Iar-Umhall, or west Umhallia, comprising the barony of Murrisk—and all that district to the north-east of Croagh Patrick.³⁴

There are some six references to properties which had survived in the hands of the O'Malleys or O'Maleys representing apparently all that was left to recall the possessions of the chieftains of Murrisk; even these were then lost. It may here be noted that a copy of a translation of an inquisition, dated 1607, into O'Malley's jurisdiction has been printed in recent years by Sir Owen O'Malley in the Journal of the Galway Arch. and Hist. Society (vol. xxiv, 1950).

The unusual instance, perhaps a very rare example, of the personal name of a proprietor, corresponding with the profession of law, appearing in conjunction with a topographical rendering of the same profession dating doubtless from early times, is given on p. 65, parish of Kilcolman, barony of Clanmorris. Here the owners of the denomination of "Ballybrehune 3 Quarters" include "Theobald Brehune, Owen Cragh McBrehane (2 Quarters) and Nehemiah Brehane."

³³ Woulfe's Stamne Saevéal 1751: M. H. Gill & Son, Dublin.

³⁴ Wilde: Introduction to the Census of 1851.

The inquisition of 1635 returns "Oghy McEbrehowne" in respect of "Ballybrehowne"; others of the same name—Connor and Gilleduffe—appear in respect of their interests, in the quarters of Tuorin and Dromine. While there are modern townlands of Ballynabrehon North and South, containing together over 600 statute acres, Tuorin has not been found either in the present main text or in the Census returns; it may have been a sub-denomination.

The name "McEbrehowne" or "Brehune" does not occur in O'Rahilly's paper on "Irish Poets Historians and Judges, etc."³⁵ He tells us that the Mac Aódhagáin family of brehons had by the sixteenth century carried their profession into many parts of Ireland and he instances their place in Galway associated with the writing of the Leabhar Breac.³⁶

It would be interesting to have the first, or an early, reference to the lands of "Ballybrehune" in a proprietary connection. The name suggests an endowment for the support of an Irish judge.

In Murrisk and Tirawley small properties were still retained in 1641 by "Cormuck" and "Teige O'Higgin." In his list of "rymers" who were pardoned in 1603 O'Rahilly quotes Cormuck of "Dwacharny," co. Sligo and a namesake "Cormock O Higgin" of co. Mayo who was pardoned in 1587.³⁷ A branch of this distinguished literary family was evidently established in the latter county though its estates were not so extensive as elsewhere. The prominence, a century later, of the family name in another profession has led to the interesting suggestion that when the bardic profession decayed, with the decline of Gaelic Ireland in the 17th century, the bardic families with no tradition of soldiering farming or commerce, turned to medicine.³⁸ Another literary family name—the O'Clerys, will be noticed at a later stage.

With Irish and Hibernicised Norman names of which there is shown to have been a wholesale clearance in the proprietary classification, will also be found Scottish. "Out of the county of Mayo" wrote Sir Henry Sidney in 1576, "came to me to Galway first seven principal men of the Clandonnells, all by profession mercenary soldiers by name of galloglas." Of McDonnells, close on twenty are returned by the main text with lands in at least four baronies. In some instances these would appear to have been granted to transplanter from Westmeath or to have passed to the Binghamms and others.³⁹

LAND MEASURES

Former land measures, specified mostly by the main text, are Quarters, Cartrons and Gneeves; there are a few instances of Trines (p. 113). As regards this last, indicating a third part, it enters into numerous place-names in the baronies of Costello, Murrisk, Gallen and Tirawley; Trine-aphilbin and Trinaghtphilbin will be noted in the personal name connections. This land measure does not appear in either Reeves⁴⁰ or in Larcom's Carew Ms.⁴¹ The latter states: "In Connoght all [land measures] are called Quarters and Cartrons. A Quarter contains 4 cartrons, every cartron 30 acres." According to Reeves, op. cit. (p. 480): "In Connaught the prevailing distribution was into townlands of vague import; quarters the fourth part of the former; cartron the fourth of a quarter; gneeve the sixth of a quarter. The cartron was computed at 30 native acres."

In the main text, throughout the barony of Kilmaine and other baronies, denominations will be found expressed as containing 4 Quarters; on p. 23 there is this interesting qualified definition: "The Demesne of Cloonegashell called by the name of 5 quarters but is 7 Quarters."

Unfortunately the admeasured acreages for each of these land measures vary so frequently and considerably as to render equation or reconciliation almost impossible. Knox says: "The quarter of 120 acres was at this time [Composition of Connaught, 1585] an uncertain quantity, a measure of value, not of actual acreage. Estates or denominations of land were estimated as containing so many quarters, meaning that their arable and pasture were equal in value to so many quarters of 120 acres of standard land." At that time indeed when the assessment of composition rent, payable to the Crown, was under consideration, it was recommended that in particular instances four quarters should be treated as one quarter of 120 acres owing to the poverty of the country.⁴²

The Rev. John Keogh, author of the Irish Herbal, in a notice of ancient Irish townlands written for Sir William Petty's Atlas admits his inability to provide an acreable equation for the Quarter⁴³: "I have learned it is an uncertain measure and anciently proportioned only by guess or according to the bigness of the townland whereof it was a parcel." He adds: "I have also busied myself . . . to inquire what town or general denomination of townland, each quarter belonged to . . . but therein I could not meet with satisfaction, it being a thing forgotten since the days of yore . . . And these ancient names of townlands have lost part of their general signification, being now applied only to some small parcels, as quarters or less pieces, and each other parcel of the ancient townlands hath another name according as the inhabitants were pleased to settle their habitations and little villages here and there sparsedly fixed and variously named . . ."

What is stated here will it is thought be found to some extent exemplified particularly where the apparently principal name of a place is first given, and stated to contain 4 Quarters, the names of the constituent quarters, or lesser measures, being also specified. Thus for example, we have on p. 188 "Rathleecackan 4 Qrs. (vizt) Bealtrae 1 Qr., Carrowkinlevy alias Rathlackan 1 Qr., Carrowkeeleralackan alias Rathlackan 1 Qr., Doondoaby alias Doonadobby 1 Qr."

Attention is also called to the instance of "Akill 4 Quarters," parish and barony of Burrishoole (p. 105)—now parish of Achill. Here likewise the names of the constituents are given, the contents of one quarter being expressed as representing 13,514 acres unprofitable and 310 profitable. A land measure is given here, not found elsewhere in the text—"Dowkillnally 6 balls, Quin 6 Balls."

It is hoped that the present text will be found useful in the identification of "The three townlands of Criathrach." Called Creaghe in modern times O'Donovan identifies the district as being situated on the north of the river Robe and extending eastwards from Lough Mask to the point where the river winds southwards before it enters the town of Ballinrobe.⁴⁴ He adds, however, "that there are few, if any, townlands now so extensive as the ancient Irish ballybetaghs, thirty of which made a triocho chead, or 120 quarters and that the denominations of land in modern times called townlands are generally quarters of the ancient Irish ballybetaghs."

On the basis of 4 quarters comprising a ballybetagh, as just indicated, the main text invites investigation in many instances, as to what extent the place-names returned express those of the ancient denominations.

FREEHOLDERS' TITLE

For the early period of Mayo history down to the close of the 16th century, the student has the advantage of Knox's History of the county of Mayo. A very useful feature of this work is the equation of the baronies of the county with their ancient Irish divisions and subsequent Norman lordships. Notes on the Diocese of Tuam and papers in the Journal of the R.S.A. were further contributions by Hubert Thomas Knox.

W. E. T. Butler's chapter on Connaught and Ormond in his "Confiscation in Irish history," provides material for the century of the present text. To the Books of S. & D. he devoted much study and his observations relative to the title of Connacht proprietors generally may be recalled.⁴⁵ "Thirty years after the Composition, and twelve years after his accession in July 1615, [King] James wrote directing that letters patent should be made out to every freeholder in Connaught and Clare as was intended at the making of the Composition in Elizabeth's reign. Accordingly we find in the Calendar of Patent Rolls of James I long lists of grants to Connaught owners from p. 330 on. In some instances, no doubt to save expense, the lesser proprietors joined together, and empowered one of the leading men to take out letters patent to their estates in trust for them. The result was the creation in Connaught, alongside of the great estates of the chief men, of what was in many cases a virtual peasant proprietary."

This is well exemplified by the present text notably in the baronies of Burrishoole, Murrisk and Tirawley.

Butler quotes a communication from Sir J. Jephson to Lord Dorchester, Calendar of State Papers, 1631: "the counties of Mayo, Sligo and Roscommon which it is proposed to plant are covered with thousands of families owning from £5 to £12 yearly value." He then cites the Books of S. & D. in confirmation and resumes: "To make the grants valid it was necessary to have the surrenders and grants enrolled in the Court of Chancery. It is asserted by Leland that the inhabitants actually had paid £3,000 to have their patents enrolled, and that it was due to the neglect of the clerks of the Court of Chancery that this had not been done. In July 1635, Commissioners were sent to Connaught to establish the title of the Crown. It was plain that on a legal quibble all or most of the patents granted under James I were invalid. But the natives could and did point out that James in 1615 and Charles in 1628 had intended to secure the landholders in their estates. This argument was brushed aside on the ground that James' letter had been obtained on false pretences. On these lines it was easy to make the Crown's title evident."

The claim by the Crown to numerous lands is recorded in the main text to which it is apposite to refer here.

Within five parishes of the barony of Gallen (pp. 147-162), and within the column assigned to "Proprietors in 1641," the Crown under the title of "King" is returned as the owner of numerous lands. This could have been the outcome of unfulfilled engagements or arrangements entered into at the time of the Connacht Composition in 1585 or, on first thoughts, a consequence of the proceedings of the Defective Title Commissions of 1604-06—reinforced by Straffords Acts of the Irish Parliament of 1634 and 1639.⁴⁶

In the absence of certain specific dates the matter is somewhat complicated and furthermore in so far as the Crown is not so returned in respect of neighbouring lands regarding which it is known a defective title had been found.

For the collation of the lands returned by the present text as in the possession of the Crown in 1641, there is available the Mayo inquisition of 1635.⁴⁷ This is the inquisition which was taken of proprietors' lands after the finding of the King's title in the same year to Roscommon, Sligo and Mayo.

⁴⁶ The Act (10 Charles I, Sess. 3) recites: "Doubts and questions may be invented, either for not enrolling or recording the Commission, etc., or for lack of finding Office or Inquisitions, or true Offices or Inquisitions, whereby the title of the Crown ought to have been found, before the making of such grants or Letters Patent." See Stolen Waters by T. M. Healy, Chap. XXX, where these Acts are discussed: Longmans, Green & Co. London. 1913.

⁴⁷ Already indicated as in course of preparation for publication by the Ir. Mss. Commn.

While the persons named are cautiously described as "reputed owners or possessors" nowhere in connection with the lands with which we are concerned is there any reference to, or reservation of, the Crown's interest. Gaelic names of proprietors so classified, by this inquisition, are O Hara, O Ruane and O Rowan, Mc Corckane—Mc Curcane—Corckane, quaere Mac Durcan and Grady. Of the Hibernicised names Mc Jordan is the most prominent; in this category also are MacStephens, FitzStephens, McHenry and McAndrew; Barretts and Burkes are likewise returned. In all some twenty reputed owners are named including also Thomas, fourth Viscount Dillon of Costello-Gallen. In a few instances corresponding place-names—there are some sixty involved—could not be found in the inquisition.⁴⁸

The parishes within which the lands are set out by the present text are Attymas (p. 153), Killasser (p. 150-2), Towmore (Toomore) (p. 152-3), Templemore (p. 159) and Kildacommoge (p. 161). Adjoining the first two of these are the Sligo baronies of Leyny and Tireragh, the river Moy being for the most part the western boundary.

Attymass has been identified as part of Coolcarney (Cúit Cearnasáda) a district forming the northern part of the barony of Gallen (Gailenga) but anciently a part of Hy-Fiachrach and the patrimonial inheritance of the Clandonagh O'Dowd; the remainder of the barony originally belonged to O Gara and his co-relatives.⁴⁹

Among the districts recited by the Indenture of Mayo (1585)—"Composition of Connaught"—as comprising the county are "Cowlékarny" and "Toe Bellahagh" and also "Bellalahen."⁵⁰ Of these Jordan Dexeter, described as chief lord of the barony, received by this deed many quarters of land with their appurtenances to be held by knight's service of the Crown manor of Strade; from the freeholders he was to receive 5/- out of every quarter in lieu of former rights; in turn, the freeholders were to hold their lands

⁴⁸ The variation in the rendering of place-names may be here illustrated:

from him by knight service as of his castle of "Beallalahen."⁵¹

When referring to other districts of Mayo mentioned in the Indenture, Knox says⁵²: "We may take it that while these represent hereditary estates in a general way, the great tuath of Coolcarney and Bellahagh was under the direct management and control of the chieftainship branch—the line of Thomas Duff—and that but for the change of tenure, estates would have been provided for other branches and had been to some extent."

It may be interjected that the Plantation Commissioners of 1635 held that there was no promise in the Indentures of 1585 that the inferior freeholders should have any patents.⁵³

Here may reside the explanation why numerous lands, returned by the inquisition as in the possession of Mac Jordan and other families, are shown by the present text to have been the propriety of the "King" in 1641⁵⁴; if estates had not been created, it would not have been a defective title that was at issue, but the absence in law of any title at all. Elsewhere in the present text of this Gallen barony, McJordans are frequently returned as proprietors, and that of Henry McJordan of Ballihagh (p. 149), will be noted; he was apparently the successor of Jordan Fitz-Thomas of the Indenture of Mayo.⁵⁵

It will also be observed that Lord Dillon is returned by the present text as the owner in 1641 of many lands in this barony of Gallen; his title here was originally derived through Jordan Dexeter of the Composition who sold his estate to Theobald Dillon, first viscount of Costello-Gallen.⁵⁶

See Butler as to this being contradicted plainly by the wording of the various indentures: Confiscation in Irish History, p. 101. The "Orders (1579) to be observed by Sir Nicholas Malby for the better government of Connaght" are printed in O Flaherty's West or H-Iar Connaught, ed. by Hardiman pp. 304-7. Here it is ordered that Sir John Burk, commonly called "McWilliam Euter" should be ennobled, his son to be a baron "and to have estates accordingly of so much as is their own, with a salvo jure to all other that have right."

Incidentally part of this estate—"Bellalahen" also rendered "Ballylaghan" will be recognised in the present text (p. 160) not under this name but in the names of denominations comprising the manor viz Lisgawney, Mullaghclare, Gortingare, etc., all shown to be in the proprietorship of Lord Dillon. Lodge notes that Lord Dillon was entitled to the annual rent of 5/- out of every quarter, with certain exceptions, of chargeable land in the barony.⁵⁷; this was a provision in favour of Jordan Dexeter in the Composition, as already indicated, which had also passed to Dillon.

Nevertheless in regard to certain lands—some six or more denominations,⁵⁸ returned by the inquisition of 1635 as in the possession of Lord Dillon, the present text gives the "King" as the owner in 1641; otherwise both documents in respect of numerous lands are in agreement as to Lord Dillon's interest. Was the exception here related to Theobald Dillon's acquisition from some person other than Jordan Dexeter whose title had been questioned, or was it connected with the proceedings in relation to lands of Lord Dillon in the adjoining barony of Costello where a defective title had been found by the Commissioners?

To this barony of Costello (pp. 80-93) we must then proceed; it had been the lordship of MacCostello from whom the barony took its name, but which was first named after Belahaunes (Ballyhaunis). The part north of the parish of of Aghamore, according to Knox⁵⁹ was in the Kingdom of Luighne or Gailenga and was a sub-denomination of the latter called Sliabh Lugha; the southern part was in the possession of the Ciarraige. In the 13th century it was held by two divisions called Ciarraige Uachtarach and Ciarraige Iochtarach, O Ceirin who had his principal castle at Lough Mannin being chief of all.

To Siabh Lugha—of which Hugh de Lacy had been given a grant under the de Burgo partition—Miles Mac Giosdelbh subsequently succeeded. An explanation of this name Mac Giosdelbh has been given thus:—"Jocelyn de Angulo came to Ireland with his sons Philip and Gilbert, called by the Irish Mac Giosdelbh where Giosdelbh is a corruption of Jocelyn corrupted back into English as Mac Costello."⁶⁰

Returning to the proprietorship of the barony as shown by the text, there is available in H.M.C. Reports (House of Lords)⁶¹ particulars of a complaint made by Thomas the fourth Lord Viscount Dillon concerning "an office found in the county Mayo": this was transmitted by the Commons to the Lords on the 9th September 1641. Having stated that Queen Elizabeth had granted certain lands to "Shan Mac Costello" which had been purchased by Theobald first Viscount Dillon of Costello-Gallen and confirmed to him by Letters Patent of King James I, it proceeds:—

"The late Lord Deputy [Strafford] intending to make a plantation in Mayo, etc., ordered commissioners to enquire into his Majesty's title but gave out that all who held lands by patent, if they produced their patents should not be disturbed. Lord Dillon therefore sent his patent which on the ground that he held from the King by Knight's service, as of the castle of Dublin, and not ex capite, was by an ex parte decision declared void. This decision was erroneous and contrary to law and the Commons demand that the proceedings may be cancelled."

This statement may be elaborated by adding that in June 1586, John Mac Costello, captain and chief of his name, surrendered the manors and lands of the barony of Costello which were regranted to him in July of the same year. Mac Costello's title being thus secure he sold immediately to Dillon, the transaction being recorded in the Annals of Loch Cé, 1586: "The Great Castle of Mac Goisdelbh and half the lordship of the country were given to Tibbot Dillon by Mac Goisdelbh, i.e., John son of the Gilladuff, son of Hubert. O Gadhra gave five towns in his division and the castle of Daire-mor to the same man. (Oilillín O'Gadhra that gave those away)."⁶² As has been indicated, the present text returns Lord Dillon as the proprietor in 1641 of almost the whole barony of Costello; nowhere does the Crown appear suggesting defective title or other proceedings. How then, in the light of the returns for Gallen, are those of Costello barony to be explained? Dates, so far as we have determined them, may provide the explanation; here the letters of Lord Deputy Wentworth will be found helpful in so far as they recall what had actually been done at the date of the correspondence. To begin with (1) the King's title to the counties of Roscommon, Sligo and Mayo had been found before the 30 September, 1635, (2) the inquisitions finding the names of lands and their reputed proprietors had been returned for the same counties by the 14 December, 1635, (3) the admeasurements for what is known as the "Strafford Survey" were in progress and their immediate completion urged on the 25 July, 1636, (4) the Defective Titles Commission was "going on roundly" and the revenue already increased in August, 1637, and, (5) the Lord Chief Justice, the Lord Chief Baron and the Attorney-General had been appointed to take view and consideration of all the patents under which any claim may be made "and we foresee that most of them will be void in point of law"—30 November, 1637.⁶³ It could well be therefore that it was not until after 1637 that Lord Dillon's title had been declared void and that in the meantime he had been returned correctly by the Strafford Survey of 1636-7 from which our text is drawn, as the owner. There is, however, this point. Lord Dillon's complaint of the voidance of his title was received by both the Commons and the Lords on the 9 September, 1641; the House of Lords subsequently adjourned the consideration of private causes until the 30 November.⁶⁴ The proprietorship on the survey side of the text is related to that existing on the 23 October of the same year; the text here it is considered should be read in the light of the Defective Title proceedings.

There remains the question of the return of the Crown in place of Lord Dillon for certain denominations in Gallen barony. The determining circumstances here may have derived from the time of the Composition; it can only be suggested that the title of the person from whom Lord Dillon acquired those particular lands was found to be irregular and that Lord Dillon himself could not satisfy the Commissioners of the Strafford Survey as to his legal ownership. Beyond this we cannot go, save to quote the significant statement by the Lord Deputy when announcing to Mr. Secretary Coke the appointment of judges to examine the patents: "So diligent have this people been to gain the countenance of Letters Patent, hoping thereby to anticipate the rights of the Crown so as if we should hold up to that course of allowing all Letters Patent, and not lay hold on the defects and infirmities of some, it would be an occasion to prevent that great benefit which this service (as we intend to order it) will effect to the King and Kingdom."

Attention may be called to p. 148 where the letter "K" (quaere for King) appears in the column for 1641 proprietors and to the absence of the names of some owners on this as on p. 162. It may be added that the Commonwealth confiscation of all Lord Dillon's estates was cancelled at the Restoration⁶⁵; in 1663 he was decreed in Mayo alone, 53,301 plantation acres of profitable land.

* * * * *

A reference is here called for in respect of a claimant to lands in these baronies whose name—Captain Dudley (or Dualtagh) Costello—is not specified by the present text but whose history and activities over the years 1666-7 are the subject of correspondence printed at pp. 92-7 of Appendix I (Carte Papers) in the 32nd Report of the Deputy Keeper of the Public Records (E.). Of Captain Costello the editors (Russell and Prendergast) say: "He and his ancestor had owned the baronies of Costello and Gallen in the county of Mayo until expelled by the wars and confiscations in 1641. At the end of the war (in 1652) he retired to Flanders and became a captain in the Duke of York's regiment of Irish, and gained great distinction for his gallant conduct at the siege of Betune in French Flanders. His name is found specially mentioned in the King's Declaration of 30th November, 1660, among the 232 gentlemen who are to be restored to their former estates 'as having faithfully served under the King's Ensigns abroad' with this qualification 'a reprice being first set out to the soldier or adventurer in possession of equal worth and purpose.' This made their restoration almost hopeless; but the Act of Explanation passed in 1666, extinguished every chance of restoration."

The correspondence which follows relates to the rebellion led by Captain Costello, his outlawry by proclamation, the failure of the army to capture him through the favour of the country, the directions of the Duke of Ormonde for the apprehension of the "titular Popish clergy" in the districts he frequented and the ultimate detection of Costello in "Colecornoy" where he was shot dead and his companions dispersed.

The claim by the editors regarding the extent of the proprietorship of Captain Costello until expelled by the wars and confiscations is manifestly an exaggeration, the vast acquisition by Dillon in the 16th century in both baronies being ignored. The small estates retained by families of the name, as at 1641, are set out in the texts of both baronies;⁶⁶ most of these were subsequently lost but in no instance is the name Dualtagh, Duald, or Dudley Costello given. He was probably a son or near kinsman of one of these.

Lieutenant-Colonel Dudley Costello was one of the signatories to the Articles of Agreement, 14 February 1652-3, for the surrender of the island of Inishbofin. The Agreement contained this clause:

"That it be allowed to Lieutenant-Colonel Costello's wife and children, for their family and tenants, to live in the island of Clounty in the county of Mayo, where now she liveth, for two years yet to come with 4 ploughs and 200 cows or as many of them as she or they may have in the lands about the said island . . ."⁶⁷

ABBAY LANDS

While Church lands are clearly indicated by the text and of which an index has been prepared for this volume (Appendix C), a note is called for in respect of the ascription "Abbeyland" found occasionally in most baronies. It appears as a rule under the name of a denomination of land and in at least two instances in the column reserved for the names of the 1641 proprietors. To facilitate examination of this inconspicuous feature detailed references are given.⁶⁸ Here the Abbeys or Religious Houses to which it is suggested ⁶⁸ Within the par. of Ballinrobe (pp. 24 & 25), Kilmaine bar. "Fryers' Quarter," "2 Abbeys ruined," "Fryry Field," "Abbeyland," and a parcel of "Churchland called Holy Rood." The Composition of Con. Ind. of Mayo, returns the Abbey of Ballinrobe as cont. 1 quarter.

Bar. of Clanmorris—par. of Kilcolman (p. 61), Caronab Killmodan returned as Abbeyland; likewise (p. 64) Lisenrekin and Drumreene; the Mayo Inquisition of 1635 states these belonged to Abbey of B.V.M. Ballinsmally (Ballinsmalla); Drumneene is there rendered Carrowdronmyne. At p. 75, par. of Templegarret, the "Acres of Mayo" and the denominations of Ardkorkagh and Portagh are described as "Abbey land"; these were former possessions of the Abbey of Mayo; the entry of "The scite circuit and precinct of the Monastery of Mayo and the lands thereunto belonging" appears on p. 76.

Bar. Costello—par. of Kilmovee (p. 82): "Abbey alias Ballymonistragh 4 quarters" and "Abbey alias Iskergare"; bar. Carra, par. of Burriscarra (p. 117) there is "Burriscarra alias Abbey quarter" and "fryers cartron"; bar. of Gallen—par. Attymass (p. 154) "Drumscoba ½ quarter, Carrigga ½ quarter. One quarter of these 2 (sic) quarters Abbey land" Quaere former Abbey of Strade; bar. of Tirawley, par. of Templemurry (p. 165): under Rathfran alias Cloonboy, Glenney alias Rathfran, "Tworcappell belonging to the abbey"; it will be observed that a dash is used in the place of an owner's name; the Earl of Cork had part of the possessions of the Abbey of Rathfran; he had also "A parcel of Abbey land called Moyne"—par. of Killala, p. 166, called "Abbeymoyne" on p. 222; par. of Crossmolina (p. 177) "A small parcel of abbeyland Cloonetolly alias Clonecally". Barony of Erris, par. Kilmore Erris (p. 202)—Abbeyland, Crosse, 2 quarters and Kiltene 1 quarter.

the lands in question belonged may be very briefly indicated: Ballinrobe, Ballintubber, Burriscarra, Cross and Mayo (Augustinian); Ballinsmala (Carmelite); Crossmolina and Moyne (Franciscan); Rathfran and (?) Strade (Dominican).

In the light of many other lands throughout the text, formerly the possessions of abbeys, not being so distinguished, being in the hands of lay proprietors, the purpose of the ascription in specific instances invites a measure of investigation here.

At the period of the "Composition of Connaught," 1585, fifty quarters of land were returned by the "Indenture of Mayo"⁶⁹ as "belonging to her Majesty" in right of eleven abbeys and religious houses; of these Cong was the most extensive with 16 quarters.⁷⁰ It is to be inferred that the Crown had not then disposed, except by way of lease, of these fifty quarters. What is indicated as "Abbeyland" by the present text—where quarters are given—would be well below half that number. A document printed in the Carew Papers (Cal. S.P., 1603-4, pp. 471-6) entitled: "The division of Connaught and Thomond" as it was then bounded (1574) is revealing as to the then existing position. While stating that the sum of the abbeys in the county was 21, it points out that 17 of these and they are named⁷¹ were "possessed either by friars or rebels so as her Majesty hath no commodity by the same." By "commodity" is meant, no doubt, revenue arising from either grants or leases. It would be useful to have in tabulated form an accurate account of the disposition by the Crown of these abbeys prior and subsequent to the period of this document.

Some seven places mentioned in the 1574 list of reoccupied abbeys will be found indicated as "Abbeyland" in the Book of S. & D. and it is thought that the purpose of this ascription was to indicate some aspect, dormant or otherwise, of the Crown's title or interest.

The instance of "Crosse, 2 quarters," parish of Kilmore, barony of Erris (p. 202) may be noted by way of example. This place was without an owner apparently in 1641, ⁶⁹ pp. 99-119.

⁷¹ Ballaghineaske, Ballinrobba, Mayo, Moyriske, Clyera, Inishturke, Burres-Owle, Crossmolyne, Moyne, Rosserke, Ballintubber, Burris-Caree, Teaghboyhyn, Stradin-Ballahane, Owrelare, Banyde, Beallahawnes."

"Abbeyland" being returned in the relative proprietorial column. This was a foundation of Ballintober Abbey—the Priory of Cross or Holy Cross—located on the west coast of the peninsula of the Mullet.⁷² Archdall quotes two inquisitions of 1594 and 1614 relative to the possessions of Ballintober founded, incidentally, by King Cathal Crobherg in 1216, which he states were leased by the Crown for 50 years, in 1605, to Sir John King;⁷³ the possessions of the Priory of the Holy Cross however is not included in either of these under this name; treating the Priory distinctively under "Cross," he refers to its relation with Ballintober and mentions an inquisition taken in 1585 but he does not specify either a grantee or lessee. The inquisition of 1614 printed by Knox is fuller and includes "the Religious House of Crosse or of the Holy Crosse"; while he prints a grant of other lands belonging to Ballintober (Kilteene) in Erris barony, he is silent with regard to a similar grant of the Priory of Holy Cross.⁷⁴

It is only when the Inquisition of Mayo, 1635, erroneously known as Strafford's Survey of Mayo is examined, that an owner is found recorded⁷⁵; here Ricard Cormuck is stated to be the "reputed possessor or owner" of the two quarters of Cross. Lands formerly belonging to Abbeys or Religious Houses are frequently mentioned in this inquisition, but not so in the present instance. Since the Book of S. & D. largely derives from the Strafford Survey which followed immediately on the foregoing inquisition, it must be presumed that in the course of proceedings the reputed proprietorship had not been established; that at the same time "Crosse" was found to be abbey land and accordingly so returned. Such entries are relatively infrequent in the Books of S. & D. as a whole, and the explanation given is subject to a more exhaustive examination of documents.

* * * * *

Attention may be called to either an omission or an incorrect reference in the present text. In the 1574 document quoted above "Beallahawnes" (Ballyhaunis) is reported as one of the reoccupied Abbeys or Religious Houses. Though "Bellahawine" is stated in the "Alphabet" or index of lands to be returned on p. 107 of the text, it does not appear there; this pagination may be wrong, but so far the name has not been found. According to Lodge, Theobald Viscount Dillon of Costello-Gallen was the owner at the date of his death (1624) of "the precincts of the monastery of Bealahaunes with the lands thereunto belonging"⁷⁶; unhappily the lands are not specified in the source quoted, but they may be given in his Ms. volumes of extracts from the Rolls at the P.R.O. Of this Augustinian House, Archdall recalls that at the commencement of the rebellion of 1641 "a company of friars took possession of the friary."⁷⁷

In the particulars of their possessions recited in inquisitions and Crown grants there is considerable material for the determination of the extents of abbeys and religious houses. With the knowledge of the names of grantees and their descendants, the present text will be found to facilitate in a large measure the identification of abbey lands. Thus in the name of Sir Robert Cressy (p. 49), opposite the entry of "An island where Cong town standeth," we meet that of the assignee of John Bingley and John King to whom in 1608 the Crown demised for 116 years, in reversion, St. Fechin's Abbey of Cong with all its possessions."

Appellations which became topographical will also be found a useful pointer as in "Grainge 4 quarters" (p. 177) recalling a possession of the Cistercian abbey of Knockmoy.

Much Ms. material is available for consultation; here attention may be called to the Memoranda on Crown Rents and the Foxford Rent Roll of 1706 in the P.R.O.D. Among the publications of the Commission will be noted the Brussels (Mooney) Ms. 3947 edited by Father Brendan Jennings in Analecta Hibernica No. 6.

TIRAWLEY BARONY

The withdrawal of the barony of Tirawley from the fund of land assigned to transplanters may now be noticed.

⁷⁶ Peerage of Ireland, vol. IV. p. 180.

⁷⁷ Archdall; op. cit. p. 494. See also Gen. Tribes & Customs of Hy-Fiachrach p. 160-1 where O Donovan prints from a short description of Mayo by Downing, written for Sir William Petty's Atlas, this account of the priory of Ballyhaunis:

"It [the priory of 'Bellahawnus'] stands on a fair hill over a small river. It is said to have been, before the foundation thereof, a manor belonging to the Lord Barry about the beginning of the English invasion. Certain it is that upon the beginning thereof, the Fitzgeralds, ancestors of the Earls of Desmond and Kildare, the Lord Barons of Kerry, and the Barrys had large possessions in the counties of Mayo and Sligo till they were driven thereout by one Burke." O Donovan adds: "He might also have added the family of Butler for the abbey of Burrishoole was erected by one of them shortly after the English invasion."

The explanation for this subtraction is recorded in communications from the "Commissioners of the Parliament of England for the ordering of Affairs in Ireland" to "the gentlemen appointed to make an additional survey in the county Sligo—Major Samuel Sheppard and Mr. Edward Crofton" and also to the Commissioners of the Court at Loughrea. These letters are reproduced here from the Prendergast collection.⁷⁸ The first has not been found in Dunlop where the proceeding has been dealt with under a comprehensive rather than a detailed heading:

"30 June 1654. Upon information that the forfeited lands in the [Sligo] baronies of Torrerrile (Tirerill), Corran, and Lyna (Leyny), lately added by our order to the survey of the forfeited lands of the barony of Carbery and Tireragh for the satisfying of the disbanded officers and soldiers that are to have their lands in the co. Sligo are still short of answering the proportion required for satisfaction of the said soldiery. And whereas it hath been represented by a Committee of Officers to whom the consideration thereof was referred that the lands which are wanting for satisfaction of this disbanded soldiery should be supplied out of the forfeited lands in the barony of Tyrawley in the county of Mayo and out of that part of it which lies most contiguous to the co. Sligo in the regard the same will tend much to the securing of the sea coast by such an English plantation the said barony having many fair and useful Harbours in it."

The second communication is dated 29 December 1654 and was addressed to the Commissioners at Loughrea⁷⁹:

"Proprietors whose lands are laid out to the disbanded soldiery in the barony of Tirawley.

"They are to be assigned proportions in some other convenient place, and that such transplanted as were placed there be placed elsewhere that the Commonwealth shall judge convenient."

A second communication to the Commissioners at Loughrea some eighteen months later—24 June 1656—recalls what had been effected up to that date in regard to the whole county.⁸⁰

"Whereas $\frac{2}{3}$ parts of county of Mayo in Province of Connaught have been already set out to answer arrears before 1649 and is tenanted with English inhabitants for the most part. And forasmuch as it is thought desirable that the other remaining part (being the maritime and bordering most upon the sea) should be likewise planted with English, that importing most of publique safety and advantage. It is thought fit and ordered that the Surveyor-General of lands and also the Commissioners sitting at Loughrea do take care that no Irish be permitted to sit down within the said county either as proprietors or Tenants to the Commonwealth for any lands there, to the end it be planted with such as are Protestants or of the English nation.⁸¹

Some two months later, on 18 August 1656, the Surveyor-General and Dr. Petty received instructions to proceed with the Survey of the barony of Tirawley; this was completed in 1657. The Down Survey barony map of Tirawley included in this volume is therefore to be related to this year.⁸¹

It has been seen that the Strafford Survey was directed to be adopted for the proving of possessions in respect of all the baronies of the main text; whether a commission was issued to prove possession in 1641, on the taking of the Down Survey of Tirawley barony, it is not now evident. Collation however of the text printed as Appendix A (pp. 205-227) with the main text of Tirawley (pp. 163-200) shows in not a few instances, a change in the names of the proprietors as of the year 1641. Compare for example the entry in the main text on p. 167 at reference number 55, where Tibbot and David Bourke are returned as the proprietors of a small part of a larger denomination set out at item 51 (for which no owners are given), with the Down Survey text at p. 223 (reference numbers 76 and 77); here Henry and William Nicholson and Stephen Banner are returned as the proprietors; in this instance it may be suggested that these were the proprietors found in possession at the date of the Down Survey.⁸² Again on p. 166 (reference number 16) "Walter oge Dexter" appears as the owner whereas in the D. S. (p. 223) William Dexeter is returned; on the same page of the latter "The Sept of Barretts and Richard Fleming" appear in respect of a small holding not shown in the main text. A more striking change here, in the parish of Templemurry, is the disappearance of the name of William Merrick (p. 165) and the substitution of "Stephen Dexter" p. 223.

A change of wider interest relates to the O'Clerys of Tirawley from whom the literary family of Ó Cléirigh of Tir Conaill claimed descent.

Some eight members of this family (O Cleary) are set out in the main text (p. 195) opposite the reference number (36) as the part proprietors of the lands of "Tullycleane alias Tullyclea" containing one quarter; this was held apparently as to 2½ cartrons by the O'Clerys and as to 1 cartron in "Knocknegeragh" and half a cartron in "Brackloonagh" by Sir Thomas Bourke; these lands are returned within the parish of "Killbelody" (Kilbelfad). Collation with the Down Survey text (p. 213), reference number 49, shows that different proprietors, namely Walter Bourk and John Bourk were in possession of these lands as at the year 1641. It will be noted that the place-names of the main text, save "Tullyclew," disappear in the Down Survey return; "Knocknegeragh" and "Brackloonagh" were doubtless sub-denominations and as such included in the admeasurement of "Tullyclew."

A. B. Clery in his paper on "The Muintir Cleirigh of Tirawley"⁸³ states that Sir Thomas Bourke had acquired in 1633 his interest in half of the cartron of Brackloonagh from Edmond M' Owin O'Clery and Dermot M' Edmond O'Clery for £10. It is to be presumed that he had also acquired "Knocknegeragh" before 1636-7 when the Strafford Survey was made; it follows also that the sale to Walter Bourk and John Bourk was subsequent to this date and could have been during or immediately before 1641. An example like this strongly induces the view that the proprietorship returned in the second column of the main text represents more generally the position in 1636-7 than in 1641. Whatever may have been the date of disposition, the "O Clerys" of the text were, it may be presumed, wise in their generation since their successors suffered confiscation without apparent compensation and in the interests of one Owen Vaughan.

Finally, in this connection of conflict, will be contrasted the number of proprietors returned on p. 189 (main text) in respect of the lands of "Portnehelly" with that given, on p. 226 (reference number 129), by the Down Survey source.

⁸¹ Hardinge: Surveys in Ireland, p. 97, Trans. R.I.A., vol. XXIV.

⁸² There is an Act of Settlement grant to Dr. Henry Nicholson in 3rd vol. of Rec. Commrs. Reports, p. 202.

⁸³ Jr. R.S.A.I., June, 1946.

Collation, in regard to place-names, of the respective Tirawley returns shows that in the main text these are much more numerous; this is explained by the specification there of sub-denominations, or constituents of larger denominations, which were included in one surround by the Down Survey under the name of the principal place. An example may be given here from p. 188 of the main text:

"Kilcomen 4 Quarters (viz.): Carrowstealagh alias Carrowstylagh, 1 Quarter, Kilcomen 1 Quarter, Ballinleana alias Ballylean 1 qr., Ballengarry alias Ballingarr 1 Qr."

The Down Survey text at p. 225, omits the constituent names of the other quarters specifying "Kilcummin" only. This will be found further illustrated by the barony map included in this volume.

Superimposition of the barony map on that of the O. S. six-inch will have to be relied on for the solution of many problems. Thus we have in the main text (p. 187) the denomination of Ardagh containing 4 quarters (of which Ardagh was one), but this name does not appear in the Down Survey returns; some of the constituent parts, however, are set out. The precision of the Down Survey in clearly showing that some of the lands concerned were Church lands, in contrast to this omission by the main text, will be noted.

The attenuated form of the Down Survey text will be observed in another connection. On page 227—the end of the barony, the "Commons" are stated to contain 34,300 unprofitable acres. Throughout the main text the "Commons" will be found separately returned at the respective denominations to which they belonged. A further distinguishing feature of the Down Survey text is the provision of the religious qualification of the proprietors, a requirement which did not arise at the time of the Strafford Survey.

On the distribution side, the Down Survey will also be found to represent more accurately the final position after the Restoration. Thus in the main text (p. 193) where Lord Collooney is shown to have received the whole of a forfeited denomination (Runegrey alias Runegree) the Down Survey text shows at p. 211 the grantees to have been not only Lord Collooney but Sir Arthur Gore and Lord Mayo "after previous Reprize."

For the purpose of contrasting the admeasurements of the two surveys four parishes, in which "Commons" are notably absent, were selected—Kilmoremoy, Templemurry, Rathreagh and Kilcummin, the acreages of the unprofitable and profitable being totalled in each instance. In the first parish the Strafford Survey was greater by 199 acres, this residing mainly in the area of profitable land; for the remaining parishes the Down Survey was greater by respectively 96 acres, 246 acres and 216 acres. In two of these parishes—Rathreagh and Kilcummin, the acreages returned as unprofitable were greater in the Strafford Survey. Occasionally the acreages of individual denominations were found to be the same or within five or six acres of each other; on the other hand the Down Survey was found to be twice that or nearly so of the Strafford in particular instances. It is considered, however, that in this connection the parochial basis is a more satisfactory one on which to base conclusions since the actual places represented by a "surround" may have been more in one than in another survey.

ANCIENT DIVISIONS OF THE COUNTY

O'Hanlon in his paper descriptive of the materials for the topography and history of Mayo, forming the Ordnance Survey collection, includes an "Ancient Map" of the former divisions of the county.⁸⁴ This map, he states, was constructed on a plan precisely similar to that of Galway and was of equal value to the antiquary: "Nearly all the remarkable ancient features of this county (Mayo) can be identified by means of this map so laboriously and carefully constructed by the learned and resourceful Dr. O'Donovan." Of the map on which that of Mayo was modelled, he says: "The ancient map of Galway was formed with much care and labour by Dr. O'Donovan, who erased nearly all the modern names of places from a county Index map and afterwards filled in, in his own handwriting, the Irish names in the Irish characters."

Examination of the Mayo map, through the courtesy of the Ordnance Survey, confirms the foregoing. Bearing O'Donovan's autograph in pencil without title or date save that of the imprint indicating the date when the county Index map was engraved in 1839, it presents in bold and legible script the old divisions and features of the county. Enquiry as to the particular period to which these divisions relate has been without success, but relative material may yet come to light in the Ordnance Survey archives.

⁸⁴ Jr. R.S.A.I., vol. ix, pp. 212-3.

It will be recalled that O'Donovan included in the Tribes and Customs, edited for the Irish Archaeological Society in 1844, a map entitled: "Map of Hy-Fiachrach with some of the adjacent districts in the counties of Mayo and Sligo." This small map (scale not stated) is identical in the rendering of the territorial divisions and other features, the caligraphy being clearly the same. It would seem therefore that the map in the Ordnance Survey collection represents a section of the Hy-Fiachrach map subsequently reduced for publication.

To the Hy-Fiachrach map O'Donovan gave an "Explanatory Index" printed at p. 477, and from this the following selection has been made of the old divisions and sub-divisions prior to the creation of the "county"; the identifications—the nine baronies of the present text are included—are given in O'Donovan's own words:

NOTE ON ORDNANCE SURVEY MAPS

The Map of Mayo from Hiberniae Delinatio, commonly called Petty's Atlas, 1683, showing the boundaries of baronies with parish and place-names at the period of the text, Charles II, accompanying this volume is provided for the use of the historical student interested in the contemporaneous geographical expressions of these historic divisions and the topography of the county as a whole.

A map of the barony of Tirawley from Hibernia Regnum is also included this being the only division of Mayo represented in the series of the Down Survey Maps, 1655-58, made under the direction of Dr. (later Sir) William Petty.

Both maps have been reproduced by the Ordnance Survey. The following Ordnance Survey maps and plans will, in varying ways, be also of use :—

County Index Maps to the 6-inch Sheets—showing Barony and Parish boundaries (scales ranging from $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles to 3 miles to 1 inch)—Price 5/—.

1 : 253440—4 miles to 1 inch (In sheets 18" x 12")—

(a) In five colours—paper flat 2/6, folded and covered 3/—; linen backed flat, 3/—, folded and covered 3/6.

(b) In two colours—paper flat 2/6.

1 : 126720— $\frac{1}{2}$ inch to 1 mile (In sheets 27" x 18")—

Published in coloured, layered form.

Prices—paper flat 3/—, paper folded and covered 3/6; linen backed folded and covered 4/6, linen backed flat 3/6.

1 : 63360—1 inch to 1 mile (In sheets 18" x 12")—

In 5 colours—paper flat 1/6, paper folded and covered 2/6; linen backed flat, 2/6, linen backed folded and covered 3/—.

In outline (with contours)—paper flat 3/—.

Combined sheets of the coloured Edition in sheet sizes greater than 18" x 12" are available at prices ranging from 2/— paper flat to 3/6 linen backed folded and covered.

Published by Counties

1 : 2500—25.344 inches to 1 mile (In sheets 36" x 24")—popularly known as 25 inch plans.

These plans show all classes of detail and the area of each enclosure is given in statute acres and decimals of an acre. Price 7/6 per full plan, and 4/— per part plan.

1 : 10560—6 inches to 1 mile (In sheets 36" x 24").

These sheets show all detail as in the case of the 1 : 2500 (25.344 inch) plans, except that the area of townlands only are given in statute acres, roods and perches. Price 7/6 per sheet and 4/— per part sheet.

All Ordnance Survey Publications may be purchased from the Ordnance Survey Office, Phoenix Park, Dublin, or from their Agents in the principal cities and towns in Ireland, or through any Bookseller or Stationer.

INDEX OF PERSONS

NOTE.—Throughout the text for the Mayo Book of S. & D., names of persons are entered for the most part in the second and seventh columns; these represent, respectively, proprietors in 1641 and grantees under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation and other proceedings; the names of purchasers of lands in 1703, forfeited in 1688, appear in the outer or final columns. In the accompanying Index of Persons, prepared for this volume, personal names wherever they occur have been indexed; when they appear twice on a page, the references are followed by (bis), and where they occur three times or more by (ff).

Problems presented by the text included the segregation of first or Christian names of the 1641 proprietors owing to the omission of punctuation or the conjunction and. Thus at p. 195 there is the following entry: "Shane Bryen Dermot Rory O Donnella O Clany." The last name here is a scribal error for O Cleary and for O Donnella may be read Donnella. Under O Cleary each of the first names has been indexed as representing distinct persons.

Another instance may be given appearing on p. 103: "Dermot Leigh alias Lia Murtogh Mc hugh oge Mahon Offarishy." It is considered that three persons are represented here, viz., Dermot the Physician, Murtogh Mchugh oge and Mahon. On p. 130 there is this cryptic entry: "Macrah } Feragh." There happens to be a Macrah Morah }
Offaris returned on p. 133 which it may be suggested provides the necessary clue.

In the midst of numerous McPhilbins, returned within the barony of Burrishoole (pp. 94-107), occurs the name McPlubin. This name has not been found in earlier records and the presumption is that another scribal error crept in. At the name McPlubin in the Index a cross-reference has been made to Mac Philbin; an asterisk indicates where the former name appears in the text.

The text has been adhered to in its different spellings of surnames with the same phonetic rendering. Bourke and Burke is an outstanding example, though in some instances the one person would appear to have received both forms. Cross-references have been given to guide the investigator. The variety in renderings of the same name may be instanced by Brehane, Brehune, and McBrehane; similarly O Costello, MacCostello and Costello.

Peers, having similar titles, returned in the columns for the earlier and later periods of the text have been distinguished. For example the Earl of Cork appears in such a connection. Two distinct persons are comprehended here, namely, Richard (Boyle) the first earl who died in 1643, and Richard, the second earl, who died in 1697. Although involving a measure of duplication, different noblemen of the same family who appear as proprietors in 1641 and at the period of the Restoration, in respect of the same lands, have been indicated in the Index and treated distinctively.

Where a proprietor was possessed of lands in many baronies the names of these have been given where the references conclude for a particular region; this it is hoped will provide a measure of localisation. In the foregoing connections the letters D.S. (Down Survey) refer to the second text for the barony of Tirawley, the subject of App. A.

In the Index of Church Lands, bishops and other ecclesiastics are indexed under the name of their bishoprics, but there are cross-references from the name of the bishopric in the present Index of Persons.

Statements of genealogical interest appended to proprietors names have been extracted in all instances.

APPENDIX C

INDEX OF CHURCH LANDS AND GLEBES

NOTE.—The lands included in the accompanying Index are those which the text returns in the proprietorship of ecclesiastical persons under the names of their bishoprics and, also, lands described as “Bishops’ land.” Periods of proprietorship represented by the text are 1641, the Restoration and the year 1703 when conveyances were made of lands purchased from the Trustees of the Forfeited Estates (1688). By virtue of the Act of Settlement (1662) bishops were forthwith to be restored to the possessions of which they had been deprived during the Commonwealth.

As stated in the Index of Persons, bishops and other ecclesiastics are here entered under the name of their bishoprics or other particular office. Personal names of such, with the exception of Mr. Goldsmith, Vicar of Burrishoole parish, are not furnished by the text; where these could be obtained from other sources they have been printed within square brackets.

The letters D.S. (Down Survey) refer to the second text for the barony of Tirawley—Appendix A.

Modern names are provided within brackets.

The Diocese of Tuam includes—Mayo county (part of), viz.: the baronies of Burrishoole, Carra, Clanmorris, Kilmaine and Murrisk, the parishes of Aghamore, Annagh, Began and Knock in Costello barony and the parish of Kildacommoge (part) in the barony of Gallen.

The Diocese of Killala includes the baronies of Erris and Tirawley and the parishes of Attymass and Kilgarvan in the barony of Gallen.

The Diocese of Achonry includes Costello barony except the parishes of Aghamore, Annagh, Began and Knock, and Gallen barony except the parishes of Attymass, Kildacommoge and Kilgarvan (Report Census Commissioners, 1861).
