INTRODUCTION

BOOKS OF SURVEY AND DISTRIBUTION

THE following text of the Book of Survey and Distribution for each Irish County is taken from the set of Books of Survey and Distribution, also called Distribution Books, formerly in official use in the Quit Rent Office, and now lodged in the Public Record Office, Dublin. All the counties of Ireland are included in the series which consists of twenty strongly bound large folio volumes (17½" x 13"), covered in green vellum; the county name or names and the Quit Rent Office serial number are printed in gold lettering on the spine of each volume; the further endorsement "Down Survey" is printed between the name of the county and the serial number. Since a common character and history applies to all volumes of the set the series as a whole may first, perhaps, be considered, special features of the actual county being noticed at a later stage (p. xxxiii). From the further circumstances that other series of Books of Survey and Distribution are extant, it is necessary to refer primarily to the particular identity of the Quit Rent Office set as described in the 56th Report (pp. 305-6) of the Deputy Keeper (Mr. J. F. Morrissey) of the Public Record Office (Ireland):

"This set is apparently the series of Distribution Books, Record Commissioners' Reports, Vol. II, p. 627. They are duplicates or copies of the set from the Auditor-General's Office which was preserved in the Record Office . . ."

The series described at the page of the Reports, above mentioned, forms the first item of a list signed by James Hardiman, a sub-commissioner of the Record Commission captioned "Classified Schedule of the contents of the Quit Rent Office, Custom House, Dublin."¹ In columns headed "Number of Books" and "Number of each Species" twenty volumes of "Distribution Books" are listed county by county for the whole of Ireland, two, and sometimes three counties usually adjoining being shown to form a single volume. The list is prefaced by a brief description of the nature of the volumes:

"Distribution Books containing the names of the proprietors and forfeiting persons in 1641, the names of the lands, number of acres profitable and unprofitable, and to whom they were distributed under the Act of Settlement." The "commencing date" is stated to be "Charles II."

The summary now here given indicates the arrangement of the twenty volumes as shown by the Record Commissioners' Reports, an arrangement which has since prevailed. The figures within square brackets represent the Quit Rent Office numeration printed as already mentioned, on the spine of each volume:

3 volumes each containing three counties, viz. Armagh Down and Antrim [No. 1], Fermanagh, Monaghan and Cavan [No. 3], Derry, Donegal and Tyrone [No. 7]

7 volumes each containing two counties, viz. Kildare and Carlow [No. 2], Dublin and Wicklow [No. 8], Kerry and Waterford [No. 11], Wexford and Kilkenny [No. 12], King's and Queen's counties [No. 13], Westmeath and Longford [No. 16], Meath and Louth [No. 17].

5 volumes each containing one county, viz. Cork [No. 6], Limerick [No. 15], Mayo [No. 18], Tipperary [No. 19], Roscommon [No. 20]

4 volumes of which two contain the county of Clare [Nos. 4 and 5] and two the county of Galway [Nos. 9 and 10] and

1 volume containing the counties of Leitrim, Sligo and the barony of Tyrawley, Co. Mayo [No. 14]

The Auditor-General's series, of which the foregoing volumes are copies, is listed in the same Report of the Record Commissioners (page 304) and there described as "Books of Survey and Distribution." The number and arrangement of the volumes are identical with the number and arrangement of the copies described above. Of their character, however, a fuller and more precise description is given and as this equally applies to the Quit Rent Office set it is here reproduced:

"These books are complete references to the maps in the Surveyor-General's Office, except the books of Galway, Mayo and Roscommon of which there are no corresponding maps of the Down Survey² and appear to be references to Strafford's Survey; most of the books also contain references to the Civil Survey of both of which last named Surveys, the maps are lost or were probably burned in the fire of 1711.³ These books must have been made after the Down Survey in 1655 but refer to the forfeitures in 1641, and to the distribution under the Act of Settlement; also to the forfeitures in 1688 and sale thereof in 1701.⁴ A further note states, under the heading of "Arrangement," that there is an index to each county.

² The Down Survey included the barony of Tyrawley, Mayo: see Hardinge's list in Mapped and Townland Surveys, Trans. R.I.A., vol. XXIV, p. 97; also, according to the same source, some maps for Galway pp. 95 and 96.

The Auditor-General's set perished in 1922.

That the Quit Rent Office Books of Survey and Distribution are copies of the Auditor-General's series is evidenced by a communication or order, dated 18th December, 1759, directed to the Clerk of the Quit Rent Office by the Commissioners of H.M. Revenue who were then charged with the management of the Land Revenues of the Crown in Ireland and of which Quit etc. Rents formed a part. From this communication which is here printed as entered in the Quit Rent Office letter-book for the period A.D. 1734-63 it appears (1) that Books of Survey and Distribution were in December, 1759, lodged in the Quit Rent Office (2) that "the said Books properly belonged" to the Auditor-General's Office and (3) that "a copy of the said Distribution Books" was in the Forfeiture Office where it was not required.⁵ It was accordingly directed that the Books belonging to the Auditor-General should be returned to his Office, the "copy" thereof in the Forfeiture Office "to be removed" to the Quit Rent Office. A receipt dated 22nd December, 1759, entered in the Quit Rent Office letter-book, already cited, and signed "Henry Meredyth, Deputy Auditor-General" evidences the immediate return to the office indicated of "Twenty Books

³ No maps accompanied the Civil Survey A.D. 1654-56.

"The Board having given directions to Mr. Howard, solicitor for the King's rents, to apply to the Court of Exchequer to strike off all double charges, and Mr. Howard having by memorial acquainted the Board that upon application for the Constats accordingly the Auditor General had informed him that he could not grant them because the Distribution Books from which alone they could be taken are in the Quit Rent Office, that the said Books properly belonging to the Auditor General's Office and that there is a copy of the said Distribution Books in the Forfeiture Office which are of no use there as the Business of the said Office relates only to the Forfeitures of 1688 and the Distribution Books relate to the Forfeitures of 1641 and proposing that the said copies be removed from the Forfeiture Office to the Quit Rent Office. The Board direct that the Distribution Books be accordingly delivered to the Auditor General on a proper receipt to the Board for the same and that the copies 'to' be removed from ye Forfeiture Office to the Quit Rent Office. By Order of the Commissioners, Richd. Ponsonby. To the Clerk of the Quit Rent Office." Q.R.O. series of letter books p. 93—P.R.O. 2B-42-139. There is, unfortunately, a gap in this series for the period 1716-1734.

of Distribution" by the hands of "Richard Vernon Esq., Clerk of the Quit Rents."

Though the precise date of the removal of the volumes from the Forfeiture Office to the Quit Rent Office has not, so far, been determined it is probable that the requirements of the latter Office were such as to demand their immediate transfer. A list, however, of books and documents contained in the Quit Rent Office, dated 28th February, 1813, furnished to the Record Commissioners by the Clerk of the Quit Rents, Mr. William Bower, includes "Twenty Books of Survey and Distribution under the Act of Settlement"; these are described as "copies."⁶ No such item appears in a return, of a similar nature, made by the Forfeiture Office, a further circumstance corroborative of the removal as directed by the Commissioners of Revenue. It may be added that a list, without date, of documents mostly Ms. volumes contained in the Quit Rent Office found amongst a miscellaneous collection of Quit Rent Office papers, now lodged in the Public Record Office, refers to "20 Books of Survey and Distribution perfect and authenticated transcripts of all the originals in the Auditor-General's Office."⁷

At a later stage the former close association of the Auditor-General's Office with the Quit Rent Office, and the circumstances governing the origin of the copies, and the succession of their custody will be noticed. For the present it is sufficient to state that every page of the twenty volumes is initialed at foot and at the end of each volume, noted as examined either by "Wm. Hawkins, Clerk in the Qt. Rts" or by "ff. Guybon, Dep. Clk. Qt. Rts." Similarly the "Alphabet" or index of denominations of land, preceding the text of each county, is noted as examined by either of these officials. The approximate period of copying may be inferred from a note in one of the two volumes for Clare [No. 4]: "Finished Ye Exman. of this 18th August, 1739, ff. G."

Throughout the twenty volumes the framework of the text, to which there is no title page, is the same save in one important connection presently to be mentioned. Large folio sheets, containing as many as ten columns, constitute the tabular arrangement within which the various particulars indicated by the excerpts from the Record Commissioners' Reports noted above, are entered. These are assembled on a territorial basis, the baronies within the respective counties constituting the distinguishing geographical units; further useful localisation is provided in the specification of parochial sub-divisions. Across the top of each folio page, the names of the county, barony and parish are written in large script; where a second parish appears on a folio, it is likewise prominently indicated. Clarity and uniformity characterise the handwriting of the copyist whose bold caligraphy throughout may be said to be almost as legible now as when first written.

The exception to the consistency of the format is in the apparently casual provision of headings or captions explanatory of the particulars recorded in the various columns. These headings are furnished for nine counties only, particulars of which are given here;⁸ they appear on the opening page of the first barony but are not repeated except in the case of two counties comprising the one volume. It may be said that these headings, more comprehensive in some instances than in others, provide, substantially, so far as internal evidence is concerned, the clue to the significance of the major part of the whole compilation since they indicate most of the sources from which the particulars returned have been derived. While those appearing in the present text for this county might be cited, with qualification, by way of illustration, the headings appearing in the Cork volume are of a more representative nature and are here accordingly reproduced from page 1 of the volume for that county; the figures appearing within parentheses are provided to facilitate further reference:

(1) "Number of reference in the Alphabet"	(7) No. of Profitable Acres disposed of on ye Acts
(2) Number of Plot in the Downe Survey	(8) To whome soe disposed with their Tytle whether by Decree, Certificate or Patent Reference to ye Record thereof
(3) Proprietors in Anno 1640 and their Qualifications	(9) No. of the Book or Roll and No. of ye Page or Skin
(4) Denominacons	(10) No. of Prof. acres remaining undisposed"
(5) Number of Unprofitable Acres by the Downe Survey
(6) No. of Acres profitable by the Downe Survey

Observations are called for in respect of a number of these headings and as to the manner in which certain columns are utilised throughout the series as a whole to record transactions quite distinct from those indicated by their captions.

As regards (1) "Number of Reference in the Alphabet" the relative column is blank for every county except Clare and Roscommon; this item was again referred to when the text for the latter county was discussed (Vol. 1, p. xxxvii).

With reference to (3) "Names of Proprietors in 1640 and their Qualifications," the year 1641 appears correctly in the headings of other volumes where 1640 is given in this instance. The "Qualifications" viz. "Irish Papist" "English Protestant" or simply "Protestant" when stated are expressed respectively in contracted forms: "I.P." "Engl Prot." or "Prot." The source from which such particulars were taken is shown by the appropriate heading in the Leitrim volume [No. 14] to have been the "Civil Survey"; that this was the source is confirmed by other series of Books of Survey and Distribution.⁹ For parts of Connacht in respect of which neither the Civil Survey nor the Down Survey was made, the Survey of circa A.D. 1636, known as Strafford's Survey, was adopted. The extent to which this was utilised will be noticed later. It may here be stated, however, that Strafford's Survey is not referred to specifically in any headings as a source from which particulars were drawn.

The heading at (8) indicates that in conjunction with the names of persons, to whom lands had been disposed, particulars are furnished of the instruments of their titles. While the names of such persons are given, the other details are not provided in the manner intimated, that is, by explicit reference to documents and dates thereof; but various distinctive marks or signs appearing immediately after the names of such persons are utilised to express merely the nature of the different instruments of title. This disappointing and, at first sight, mystifying feature characterises the entire series; it is, however, somewhat mitigated by the existence of a "Key" compiled in explanation of the Auditor-General's set and is available at the Public Record Office. Through the courtesy of the former Deputy Keeper, Mr. James F. Morrissey, this has been availed of for the purposes of the present text, the relative markings with their explanations being printed at p. liii.

For the series as a whole the headings (7) to (9) indicate the titles concerned to have been derived under "the ⁹ In the "First set" of the Headfort series, and in that of the R.I.A.; also in the Annesley set; these will be more extensively noticed later.

Acts," that is to say, by virtue of instruments issued in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation; corresponding markings¹⁰ signify Letters Patent of A.D. 1662-1684, Decrees of Innocence A.D. 1662-63, Certificates to Adventurers and Soldiers issued by the Courts of Claims A.D. 1666-69 and "Connaught Certificates" A.D. 1676-7. Titles derived under letters patent issued by way of concluding estates in land, left undetermined by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, viz. Commission of Grace Grants A.D. 1684-88, are also indicated by distinctive markings. To these various instruments of title further reference will be made.

As a consequence of the innovation of markings at (8) in substitution for descriptions of instruments of titles no details appear in the adjoining column (9) with reference to the entry or enrolment of the instruments of title concerned.

With reference to (10) "Profitable Acres undisposed," the entries under this head are infrequent and the space available was utilised in conjunction with that of the previous column (9) to set out the details of another transaction presently to be indicated.

Subject to the modifications and adaptations intimated, and to the adoption of the Strafford Survey for certain counties, the particulars given under the remainder of the headings (2) to (8) are furnished in respect of forfeitures (A.D. 1641) throughout the series of Books of Survey and Distribution.

The terms of the headings, as a whole, suggest that the Books of Survey and Distribution were designed originally to express solely the distribution of forfeited lands as authorised by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. When, in this connection, the compilation of the Auditor-General's series began cannot definitely be stated; for the reasons later to be advanced, it may, however, be suggested here that it coincided with the period when the Farm of the Crown Revenues ended, and when Revenue Commissioners were appointed for the management thereof in A.D. 1682.¹¹

Within, however, the columns so reserved, two additional and distinct items of importance not indicated by any headings are furnished. One is concerned with particulars of unforfeited land; the other with those of sales of the Forfeited Estates, A.D. 1688. These items where they occur appear respectively on the left and right hand sides of a Ms. folio page. The particulars given of unforfeited lands consist of the names thereof, usually with their estimated acreages, as well as the names of the owners in A.D. 1641. Column (2) reserved for the Down Survey number is utilised to indicate this feature by the insertion there of the letters C.S. these intimating the Civil Survey as the authority for the details appearing in the immediate succeeding columns.

The extent to which this information will be found, in the form indicated, throughout the series is governed by the geographical limitation of the Civil Survey;¹² the non-existence of forfeited lands in particular areas is a further governing circumstance.¹³

As regards the second feature, not indicated by any heading—the sales of the Forfeited Estates, 1688—advantage is shown to have been taken of the space afforded by columns (9) and (10) to which attention has been drawn. The distinctive sign employed here ⊗, in conjunction with the particulars furnished—names of purchasers and acreages—indicates Deeds of Sale A.D. 1702-3 made by the Trustees appointed for the sale of these estates.¹⁴

The order of presentation of this wide range of particulars lends a distinctive significance to each side of a folio page. In the sequence of the columns (1) to (6) there is provided the textual arrangement whereby (a) the details relative to forfeited lands derived from the Down Survey (b) the particulars of the proprietors of such lands in 1641, drawn from the Civil Survey, and (c) those, likewise, derived from the same source, relative to unforfeited lands, constitute the survey or left hand side; similarly the columns (7) to (10) containing the details of the disposition of such lands under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, and Commission of Grace (and (d) the further information of the sales of the Forfeited Estates of A.D. 1688), form the Distribution or right-hand side. Hence the origin of the title Books of Survey and Distribution.

¹² In Connacht the county of Leitrim only was included in this Survey; see introduction to Civil Survey publications by Ir.Mss. Commission.

¹⁴ 11 and 12 Wm. III, cap. 2, sec. 1.

¹⁰ Confirmed by collation with abstracts, etc., published in the third vol. of the Record Commission's Reports (1821-25).

¹¹ Lib. Munerum Pub. Hib., vol. 1, pt. II, p. 133.

It may be added that Church lands, Crown lands, and occasionally lands subject to or exempt from rents payable to the Crown, will also be found indicated by symbols and markings.

LEGISLATION AND SOURCES

From what has been stated it will have been manifest that the Books of Survey and Distribution constitute abstracts of numerous documents arising out of the administration of three governments, those of the Commonwealth, Restoration and Revolution. It is necessary therefore, to recall as briefly as may be the originating legislation of such documents, their character, the extent to which they were abstracted and how far confirmation is still possible from what has survived in authenticated copies, printed abstracts or otherwise.

The fountain-head of much of the confiscatory legislation enacted by the Commonwealth and Restoration Parliaments is the Act 16 Car. I, c. 33¹⁵ passed shortly after the beginning of the war of 1641, an event usually referred to in contemporary and subsequent legislative proceedings as the "Rebellion" or "Unnatural insurrection which broke out on the 23rd October" of that year.¹⁶ A well-known feature of this Act was the assignment of two and a half million acres, English measure, and their allotment to persons who had advanced or adventured money for the suppression of the rebellion. In this connection the Act 17 Car. I c. 34 distinguished profitable from unprofitable land, defining the former as meadow, arable and profitable pasture, and the latter as bogs, woods, barren mountains and loughs which were to be "cast in over and above" the confiscated acreage specified¹⁷; each person who had "adventured" money was to be satisfied on this basis. Thus, it would appear, originated the distinction subsequently drawn in the allocation of the forfeited lands, classified as profitable or unprofitable in the various surveys and grants.

A later Act (17 Chas. I cap. 36) contains an important revisory provision, relative to the land measure to be employed, which likewise remained a permanent feature of the ultimate distribution of the confiscated estates. The number of acres to be assigned to each person was to be computed "according to plantation measure" the acre of which is defined by the Act as consisting of inter alia "21 feet to the pole or perch" as contrasted with the English content of 16½ feet:¹⁸

"Therefore be it enacted that every Acre of the said two millions and a half of Acres shall consist of eight score perches or poles, and every perch or pole shall consist of one and twenty foot. And all the said Acres shall be measured forth out of the said Rebels Lands according to that measure."

Under the Act of 17 Car. I, c. 34, already cited, the confiscation was to be effective "without any office or inquisition . . . found"¹⁹ and it was to apply to the estates of all persons in rebellion on the "23rd October, 1641." Again, the basis of the ultimate procedure is foreshadowed by these provisions.

Out of the lands to be assigned and which were to be held in free and common soccage, and not by feudal tenure an acreable and perpetual rent, called, in a later Act,²⁰ a Quit rent, was to be reserved to the Crown according to a scale provided for the different provinces. In later times it may be observed the department charged with the collection of these rents was known as the Quit Rent Office.

Finally, it was directed that when conditions permitted, a survey was to be made of "all the lands of the rebels and all the lands forfeited by virtue of this Act."²¹

More than ten years, however, were to elapse before such conditions materialised as would permit of the determination of the confiscated estates in the manner prescribed.²² In August, 1652, an Act of the Commonwealth Parliament²³ declared that, by virtue of the suppression of the "Rebellion" a position had then been reached when a settlement of the Irish nation might be effected. The preamble intimated that the settlement intended did not contemplate the "extirpation" of the whole Irish nation. A series of "Qualifications" distinguished various punitive circumstances—degrees of guilt in the "horrid rebellion—" under some eight heads, and defined the penalties and forfeitures attaching to the respective persons comprehended thereby. Those falling within the first five were "excepted from pardon for life and estate," the third designating particular persons so excepted. Other penalties were banishment, proportionate forfeiture of estates and removal to such places in Ireland as the Commonwealth might appoint. In this last connection, the seventh and eighth qualifications foreshadowed the subsequent Connacht transplantation project. These refer to persons, not otherwise comprehended, who were to forfeit respectively two-thirds and one-third of their estates. The eighth qualification, being of the widest application may here be cited:²⁴

"That all and every person and persons of the Popish Religion who have resided in Ireland at any time from the 10th day of October, 1641, to the 1st day of March, 1650 and have not manifested their constant good affection to the interest of the Commonwealth of England (the said persons not being comprehended in any of the former qualifications) shall forfeit one-third part of their estates in Ireland to the said Commonwealth, to be disposed of for the use of the said Commonwealth, and the other two-third parts of their respective estates to the proportion or value thereof, to be assigned in such place in Ireland as the Parliament shall think fit to appoint And that all other persons who have resided in Ireland within the time aforesaid, and have not been in actual service for the Parliament, or otherwise manifested their good affections to the interest of the Parliament of England, having opportunity to do the same, shall forfeit one-fifth of their estates to the use of the said Commonwealth."

Throughout most of the Books of Survey and Distribution the qualifications of proprietors of land in 1641 are frequently specified, as already indicated, by the contractions I.P. ("Irish Papist") and "Prot" (Protestant), this latter class being comprehended in the second part of the eighth qualification quoted above, though not stated to be subject to removal.

THE GROSS, CIVIL, AND DOWN SURVEYS

While the proscription of the nation was thus announced the terms of its settlement were not communicated until the following year when a further Act of the 26th September, 1653, declared that forfeited lands within the province of Connacht and Clare, save as excepted, were reserved for the habitation of "all the Irish nation."²⁵ Forfeited lands in the remaining provinces and counties, save those reserved for particular disposition by the Commonwealth were charged with the satisfaction of the claims of the adventurers and soldiers and of other public debts. Ten whole counties were assigned in the first instance for the satisfaction of the claimants in the two former classifications.

An Order in Council (1st June, 1653) for the determination of Adventurers' claims and a Commission with Instructions dated 22nd June, 1653, authorising various surveys were confirmed by and annexed to this Act. In pursuance of the latter and by virtue of a subsequent Commission²⁶ dated 2nd June, 1654, three distinct surveys ultimately emerged: the Gross Survey, the Civil Survey, and, in further pursuance of Articles of Agreement dated 11th December, 1654, between the Surveyor-General and Dr. William Petty, the Down Survey.

The two last named Surveys constituted the main sources from which particulars appearing on the left-hand side of the folio pages of most of the Books of Survey and Distribution were compiled. In one instance only, presently to be specified, has the Gross Survey been found so far to have been utilised as a source for particulars returned in these Books.

It will have been obvious that by virtue of the eighth qualification alone in the Act of 1652, cited above, forfeiture of their estates to a greater or lesser extent as the case might be, was the fate of most of the proprietors of land in Ireland. Before such forfeitures could be applied towards the satisfaction of the various claimants, the lands involved had first to be ascertained and precisely defined before being mapped according to actual admeasurement.

The procedure to be followed in obtaining specified and preliminary particulars of these forfeited estates was also to apply according to the Instructions of June, 1653 to Church lands, to lands belonging to the Crown of England in the year 1630 or since, and to unforfeited lands. For the purposes of the Civil Survey, Courts of Survey were to be set up and the testimony of the oldest inhabitants of the country obtained regarding the following items: Names of the lands and their owners in 1641; the estimated quantities (acreages) qualities and the situation parish by parish of such lands together with their boundaries, rents valuations, letting value in 1640, and whether they were charged with charitable or pious uses; again where mines, quarries or timber trees existed, these were to be indicated.²⁷

The recording of all these details, concerning individual denominations of land, amounted to a descriptive survey of the country, save for those parts of Connacht reserved for the Irish, and for which, when required, the earlier survey of Strafford was available.²⁸ A year, however, was to elapse before this unique account of the land of Ireland was begun. The cause of the delay or postponement is indicated by the final sections of the same Instructions of June, 1653, where it is stated that in order to expedite the plantation of adventurers and soldiers, other means, involving less time and expense than the Survey just indicated, might be found to ascertain the particulars required. Accordingly, a "Gross Survey" was directed to be made of what lands had been forfeited, and an estimate obtained of their quantity; thereby it was hoped allotments could more speedily be made between the adventurers and soldiers and "afterwards . . . a more exact admeasurement."

In these circumstances originated the Gross Survey, on the history of which within recent years, new light has been thrown by Professor R. Dudley Edwards in the course of a review.²⁹

Features and imperfections of the Gross Survey are indicated officially in a "Memorandum" quoted in a communication from the Lord Deputy and Council to the Committee of Adventurers: "That these surveys were taken upon oath and estimated by the acre at the rate of 21 feet to the perch, and that there is no distinction of profitable or unprofitable land, nor any mention made of proprietors or of what lands are forfeited and what not but is a gross survey of the whole contents of the ten counties."³⁰

That Gross Surveys of other counties, subsequently made, contained some particulars as to names of proprietors is evidenced from the fragmentary specimens published in well-known works³¹ and from the one instance of its citation in the Books of Survey and Distribution, namely in the volume for Monaghan county. There in the column reserved for the Down Survey Reference Numbers the "Gross Survey" is recorded as the authority for the details given in respect of the barony of Farney: Names of proprietors and names of denominations of land with the estimated acreages of each, these latter being distinctively set out in the "Profitable" column. The relative unprofitable proportions are nowhere distinguished, nor are the parochial locations given of the numerous lands specified. It is not surprising, therefore, to find an Order of April ²⁹ "It was a gross estimate of the land of each barony prepared under orders issued about 11 July, 1653, to commissioners of the precincts. It has been vaguely accepted that it extended over as much of the country as did the subsequent Civil Survey which covered 27 counties. Most of the surviving evidence connects the Gross Survey with the counties first allotted to the soldiers and adventurers and some of the documents even suggest that it was confined to these . . . But so very confused and imperfect were the first returns for these counties that special persons were nominated to complete with the aid of all available records a 'gross estimate' distinguishing the circuit or largeness of one barony from another; which was completed on the 19th December, 1653. The division between the adventurers and soldiers could consequently be made on the following January 24. In the meantime the survey had been extended to the remaining counties of Leinster, Munster and Ulster and to Sligo in Connacht in order to ascertain the total amount of land at the disposal of the State . . . Hardinge's contention that the Gross Survey included the mapping of part of the country cannot be substantiated." Irish Times, October 2, 1943.

14th, 1654, directing the immediate taking of the Civil Survey, already authorised, by which might be "certainly and distinctively known" the names and situations, qualities, estimated quantities, "meets" and bounds of forfeited lands.³² Shortly afterwards fresh Commissions and instructions, dating from 2 June, 1654, began to be issued for the undertaking of this great descriptive work which in more than one of these commissions was distinctly named the "Civil Survey." Though a Commission was issued as late as 1st September, 1656, two-thirds of this Survey had been completed within a year.

While the account of the boundaries of the various territorial units, for more than three-fourths of Ireland which the Civil Survey had provided, judging by what has survived, might well entitle it to be described as the Boundary Survey of the Gael, its importance to the State, by virtue of other details, transcended these and other valuable descriptive particulars. Forfeiting proprietors defined by the Commonwealth Act of 1652 are so indicated in the Civil Survey by the specification of their "qualifications." In this way the Civil Survey, in turn, distinguished the forfeited and other lands whose acreable contents had been directed to be estimated by the acre at the rate of 21 feet to the perch. As will presently be seen this Survey constituted the basis of the next Survey to be undertaken—the Down Survey.

The Books of Survey and Distribution contain abstracts of the Civil Survey to the following extent (1) names of proprietors, and usually their qualifications, of lands forfeited in 1641 and (2) names of proprietors of unforfeited lands and frequently, the names and estimated areas of such lands, in respect of the same year.

From the substantial remnant of the Civil Survey which has survived—it originally extended to twenty-seven counties—nine volumes have already been published by the Irish Mss. Commission. In this connection collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution can be made in respect of some ten counties by virtue of the published Civil Survey material.

The third and last of these surveys was the well-known Down Survey executed under the direction of Doctor, later Sir William Petty. Besides the well-known edition by Larcom of Petty's own history of the Survey this noted cartographical achievement has been the subject of learned exposition in Dr. Y. M. Goblet's "La transformation de la géographie politique de l'Irlande au xvii^e siècle (1930)"; it has also been the subject of many judicial decisions to which further reference will be made. Useful contributions on the subject of existing collections of barony maps include Lord Kerry's paper, "The Lansdowne maps of the Down Survey," Proc. R.I.A., vol. xxxv, sec. C., pp. 385-457 and Mr. S. Ó Domhnaill's "The Maps of the Down Survey," Irish Hist. Studies, vol. iii, No. 12, pp. 381-92.

Deriving its original sanction from the Commission and Instructions of 22 June, 1653, confirmed by the Act of September of that year, the Down Survey was perfected and concluded in accordance with Petty's Articles of Agreement³³ with the Surveyor-General of 11th Dec., 1654, and by virtue of an Order of 3rd Sept. 1656. This last directed the survey of such lands as had not then been admeasured including those allotted to the Adventurers.³⁴

The Down Survey was founded on the Civil Survey³⁵ from which abstracts of the forfeited lands, Church lands³⁶ and Crown lands were furnished to the surveyors for the purpose of ascertaining, by actual admeasurement, the contents of such lands as divided into the "lowest denominations" and as held by former proprietors. The lowest denominations are defined in Petty's agreement as "townlands, plowlands, cartrons or any other usual denominations of lands proper to the respective counties." By the Order of 3rd September, 1656, the sub-division of forfeited lands into denominations for admeasurement was also to be "according to the number of proprietors who have forfeited their estates and have lands contained in any of the said denominations," the "metes" and bounds of such respective estates to be distinguished.³⁷ Forfeited estates as so defined on the Down Survey maps are frequently found to correspond with civil divisions, or

From admeasurements made of the forfeited lands were composed parish and barony maps, the former expressing distinctively the place-names and boundaries of the forfeited denominations as well as the distinguishing reference number given to each surround; these reference numbers correspond with those entered in the Books of Survey and Distribution within the column reserved for the purpose. Other particulars inscribed were the respective acreable contents and qualities, arable, pasture, etc., of such denominations, the unprofitable portions being similarly defined. Bounds of unforfeited lands were also indicated, these being described either as "Land unforfeited" or "Protestant Land." Such particulars were supplemented by representations of natural features, of the location of buildings and existing woods. The scale to which each map was made was likewise specified.³⁸

The barony maps were designed in the first instance merely to express the civil bounds of the baronies in order that the meares thereof "might be better known and preserved."³⁹ In their final form they described, in addition to the boundaries of parishes, those of the forfeited denominations, including the reference numbers, and, so far as space permitted, the place-names. The reference numbers in the barony and parish maps are the same and correspond with the Books of Survey and Distribution.

Explanatory of the parish and barony maps were the "Books of Reference" more generally known as "Abstracts or Reference Sheets." These, together with the maps, all duly certified, constituted the Down Survey. Assembled in volumes, the folio pages which faced each parish and barony map represented the "Books of Reference" or "Abstracts." Guided by the Civil Survey, the particulars furnished by the "Books of Reference" in respect of the parish maps were: (1) description of parish boundaries and notable features, (2) number of each denomination in the "Platt" or map, (3) names of proprietors with usually their qualifications, (4) place-names of denominations of lands, (5) their number of acres as admeasured, (6) the profitable and unprofitable quantities and (7) their respective qualities—arable, meadow, and bog.

At the conclusion of the returns for each parish appeared the total of its forfeited land and the proportion represented by Church land. Facing the barony maps which follow each of the respective parochial series, the "Books of Reference" describe the barony boundaries, and furnish a summary of the forfeitures in each parish; these details were supplemented by numerous indexes.

Before the acceptance by the State the Down Survey was subject to examination⁴⁰ and revision by the Surveyor-General and eventually became the basis of the distributions of the forfeited lands amongst the adventurers and soldiers in accordance with the Commonwealth legislation; it was again adopted as the basis of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation in respect of new provisions governing the distributions under these enactments.⁴¹

The Books of Survey and Distribution record, parish by parish, the following particulars abstracted from the Down Survey: (1) the reference numbers in the parish maps to each forfeited, admeasured denomination, including those comprising Church and Crown lands, (2) denominations—place-names thereof, (3) the admeasured acreable contents in respect of both the profitable and unprofitable parts of such denominations and (4) acreages of bogs, commons, and frequently mountains.

What had survived of the Down Survey subsequent to the fire of 1711 perished in 1922. Substitutes now available for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution consist of the "exact copies" made in 1786-7 of the sections which had escaped the fire of 1711. These comprise parish and barony maps as well as Books of Reference. This collection assembled in 17 volumes was formerly in the private keeping of Messrs. Reeves, Solicitors, but is now, as to 15 volumes, lodged in the National Library, Dublin; the remaining two volumes are deposited in the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland but of these it is understood photostats have been obtained by the Director of the former Institution. is the subject of a report by Mr. Charles McNeill in Analecta Hibernica, No. 8, p. 419. There are also available the tracings from the parish maps made by officials of the Quit Rent Office, in connection with the duties of that Office in regard to Land Purchase proceedings and which include the superimposition of the Down Survey on the six-inch maps; these tracings and maps are now lodged in the Public Record Office, Dublin; and finally there are the well-known published barony maps, reproduced by the permission of the French Government, which constitute in miniature an alternative source to the Down Survey as a whole.

There remain to be noticed the documentary sources for the particulars appearing on the right-hand or distribution side of the folio pages of the Books of Survey and Distribution. Most of these derive their authority from the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, whereby not only royal confirmation was afforded of the titles gained by the Adventurers and Soldiers, under the Commonwealth legislation, but provision made for the restoration of former owners and the satisfaction of numerous additional claimants and interests.

RESTORATION INSTRUMENTS OF TITLE

Primarily, the restoration of Charles II in June, 1660, necessitated new legislation, the Acts of the usurped powers being void at law.⁴² Though the Declaration at Breda, in April of that year,⁴³ had intimated the King's willingness to abide by whatever Parliament might decide in respect of those who had received grants or had made purchases of estates, the scope of the new settlement was not revealed until the issue of the later Declaration of 30 November.⁴⁴ One of its outstanding provisions was the restoration to ⁴³ Gardiner's Constitutional Documents of the Puritan Revolution, 1625-1660, p. 465.

⁴⁴ This, briefly, provided (1) that the lands possessed by the adventurers and soldiers 7th May, 1659, should be confirmed to them (2) that all commissioned officers who were in regiments raised in Ireland or transported out of England in the service of the King or his father before the 5th June, 1649, should be satisfied their arrears in the counties and areas specified, (3) that all commissioned officers who had received no satisfaction for their service since 1649 should also be satisfied out of the same security, (4) that Protestants should be forthwith restored to their estates and reprisals of equal value assigned to the adventurers and soldiers who should be removed therefrom, (5) that Irish proprietors who had been dispossessed merely for being "Papists" and had sued out decrees, and were possessed of lands in Connacht and Clare should also be restored, and (6) that those who had served under the King's ensigns abroad and numerous noblemen and gentlemen, mentioned by name, were all, likewise, to be restored. Finally, a parliament was to be called and an enquiry instituted into the decrees and judgments given for forfeited lands in Connacht and Clare in which it was understood "much injustice and fraud" had been used.

their estates of "Protestants" and of "Irish proprietors . . . who had been dispossessed merely for being papists." Some five months later, under Commission of 30 April, 1661, Commissioners were appointed to carry out the provisions of the Declaration but subject to Instructions containing some seventy-two clauses, comprehending enquiries into various matters.⁴⁵ Notorious clauses of these Instructions defined, under eleven heads, the punitive circumstances constituting disqualifications for the restoration of the old proprietors.

The judiciary, however, having considered the King's Declaration insufficient authority for warranting the disposition of men's possessions⁴⁶ it was embodied, together with the Instructions, into a Bill which passing the Irish Parliament 27 September, 1662, formed the Act of Settlement 14 and 15 Chas. 2nd cap. 2. By this all lands which from the 23rd October, 1641, had been seized or sequestered or disposed of to any persons and which were in the possession of such persons on the 7th May, 1659, were inter alia vested in the King except (1) Church lands which were to be restored forthwith, (2) lands belonging to the University of Dublin and (3) estates of innocent "papists" and protestants. Commissioners, constituting the Court of Claims A.D. 1662-3, were appointed to carry out the provisions of the Act, the periods within which the various claims were to be made being specified.⁴⁷ In ⁴⁵ Clause 50 directed that special care should be taken to confirm to the purchasers of lands, which had been decreed to transplanted persons in Connacht and Clare, the possessions so obtained. Further directions provided for the determination of the position with regard to the extent to which the adventurers had been satisfied, the compilation of books in connection therewith, the ascertaining of arrears due to the '49 officers, the discovery of the lands possessed by regicides and the determination of other matters constituting a stocktaking of the general position.

⁴⁷ "The time for restoring all Innocents and making reprisals was limited to 22nd August, 1663 and they (the Commissioners) spent their time, they say, in restoring Innocents who took out no decrees in Connaught, but those who took out decrees had as yet no opportunity of being heard, and many of them, as the Commissioners suggest, might prove innocent, some having been, as appears by the King's Declaration of 30 November, 1660, transplanted into Connaught merely for their religion. In order to account for the short time actually given . . . to the hearing of claims of Innocence, which was only seven months, from 13 January to 21 August, 1663, the Commissioners say they were delayed after their arrival in Ireland two months before the Act of Settlement was printed"—App. 19th Report D.K.P.R.(I.), p. 39.

About 7,000 claims were made but "six-sevenths were still unheard" when the time had expired; appeals for a further extension were silenced by the "insurrection of the Cromwellians." 32nd Report, D.K.P.R. (E.) App. 1. (Russell and Prendergast), p. 153.

the King's Declaration (clause 25) thirty-eight persons, noblemen and gentlemen, representing former proprietors who for particular reasons had merited grace and favour were to be restored forthwith without further proof; of these, twenty were restored under the Act;⁴⁸ many who served under the King's ensigns beyond the seas were similarly recommended by name but they would appear to have received nothing more than this distinction.⁴⁹ As the time appointed for hearing the claims of Innocence was limited to one year—actually seven months—and since the Commissioners were to restore in the first place such Innocents as had taken out no decrees in Connacht or Clare, under the Commonwealth Transplantation scheme, their labours were mainly confined to such proceedings. It may be explained that "Innocent Papists" and Protestants were required to claim because they were obliged to make out the qualification of innocence; when they made that appear, they were not obliged to take out any new patents because they were not to begin any new title from the King, but were remitted to their old title to such lands as they claimed; the lands came out of the Crown, not by any patent or grant, but by the divesting clause in the Act.⁵⁰

The Decrees of Innocence issued by the Court of Claims between January and August 1663 numbered over five hundred.⁵¹ These contained particulars of the claims made—the names of the lands, etc., of which the claimants were possessed in October, 1641, and their title thereto; after reciting that the necessary evidences had been produced, the decrees declared the "innocency" of the particular claimants.⁵²

These decrees are abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution, the names of the persons by whom they were obtained being specified with the particulars of the lands and the acreages thereof to which they were restored.

What is now available of such decrees for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution is contained, for the Dissatisfaction with the Act of Settlement led to its suspension, the Commissioners reporting to the Lord Lieutenant in November, 1663, that a new Act was necessary to remove obstructions to their proceedings.⁵³ After much negotiation between the interests to be satisfied it was ultimately decided that the adventurers and soliders should be confirmed in two-thirds of the lands of which they stood possessed on May 7th, 1659, likewise the Connacht purchasers as to two-thirds of what was in their possession in September, 1663, the '49 Officers to be entirely established in their present possessions.⁵⁴ These resolutions were subsequently formed into a Bill which, passing the Irish Parliament 23rd December, 1665, became the Act of Explanation 17 and 18 Ch. 2nd. cap. 2. Once more the lands forfeited by virtue of the rebellion of 1641 were declared vested in the King, "without any office or inquisition thereof found," but with an important distinction. Among the estates excepted from the lands so vested in the King by the Act of Settlement were those of all innocent persons; under the Act of Explanation estates so excepted in this classification were limited to those only in respect of which Decrees of Innocence had already been obtained under the Act of Settlement. Furthermore, all remaining claims to innocency were barred,⁵⁵ while those who had been decreed innocent and had not been restored, were left to law. By such means, and by the retrenchment of one-third of the lands possessed by adventurers and soldiers it was expected to provide a fund of land to meet existing deficiencies and further claims. Provision was made for retrenchment in another connection. The King's Declaration had directed, as already noted, the immediate restoration to their estates "without further proof" of a number of persons representing former proprietors, who had merited special grace and favour. Of these, as stated above, only twenty had been restored at the time of the passing of the Bill of Explanation which contained new provisions in respect of this class of nominees. Fifty-four persons, thirty-four of whom had already been named in the King's Declaration, were to be restored to their principal seats with 2,000 acres adjoining; whatever was possessed above this acreage, in 1641, was to be retrenched and vested in the King to the uses of the Acts.⁵⁶ In order to divest the lands, which by the vesting clauses were in the King, the various interested persons were obliged to make their claims before the Commissioners appointed to carry out the provisions of the Act and who constituted the Court of Claims A.D. 1666-69.⁵⁷ Upon its certificates, reciting the claimants' names and specifying particulars of the lands allotted, their location, number of acres, rents reservable and tenure, the Lord Lieutenant was authorised and required, upon request, to cause letters patent, under the great seal of Ireland to be passed of such lands.⁵⁸ Certificates so issued to the adventurers and soldiers, etc., numbered 1,767; those issued under the name of "Adjudications" to the '49 Officers numbered 100, this corresponding with the number of lots into which their security had been divided.⁵⁹ In the preparation of letters patent "new and proper names more suitable to the English tongue" than the "barbarous and uncouth names" by which most places were called, were to be inserted with an alias for the lands granted by such patents.⁶⁰ Except where the Strafford survey was utilised, the acreages of lands contained in these certificates and letters patent were in general those of the Down Survey. Finally such certificates were to be enrolled and letters patent obtained within six months of the issue thereof; where letters patent were not issued through official delay, the grantees were to hold under their certificates as fully as if letters patent had been issued; letters patent were likewise to be enrolled "within the space of two years next after the royal assent to this bill actually given." All letters patent were to contain a clause compelling the patentees to cause their letters patent to be enrolled within a time therein limited; without such clause the patents were to be void and of no effect.⁶¹

The names of the persons to whom such grants were issued, or if grants had not been taken out to whom certificates were given, are likewise abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution with the acreages of the lands disposed. It may be added that it is not easy to determine from the Books of Survey and Distribution the retrenchment directed by the Act of Explanation.

Further documents abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution were the "Connaught Certificates" and the letters patent founded thereon. Their origin resided in the King's Declaration of November, 1660, with Instructions, confirmed by the Act of Settlement. The governing provisions of the King's Declaration and Instructions in favour of the transplanters were (1) that persons who had received decrees for lands from the former "pretended" commissioners, and were not possessed of such lands by 1 November, 1661, were to be immediately satisfied⁶² (2) those who should be dispossessed by virtue of the King's Declaration—which had provided for the immediate restoration by name of certain former proprietors—were to be reprised out of lands of equal value before such dispossession,⁶³

and (3) those who had actually been removed from lands to which they had been transplanted, without any reprimand, were to be satisfied forthwith.⁶⁴ On the grounds that in obtaining decrees for lands in Connacht and Clare, during the usurpation, there had been much fraud and injustice, a Commission issued 24th October, 1662, to review and rectify the position.⁶⁵

Save, however, to confirm the protestant purchasers before September, 1663, of transplanters' lands, nothing had been done towards carrying out the foregoing provisions for some fourteen years. Then in accordance with the King's directions of September 22, 1675,⁶⁶ and in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation commissioners were appointed for hearing and determining claims of transplanted persons. Some 580 certificates were issued in the course of two years, the first being dated 20th March, 1676.⁶⁷ These certificates, according to the specimen which has been preserved, recited the lands set out to the claimants or their predecessors by the former Commonwealth Commissioners at Loughrea, and to the end that letters patent might issue for a final settlement declared, on the production of the necessary evidence, the claimants entitled to such lands in fee simple subject to the rents reserved.

COMMISSION OF GRACE, A.D. 1684-88

While the foregoing documents find their authority in clauses and sections of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, another series, also abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution, intimately connected with the Acts, and forming a sequence thereto, call for notice. These are the grants made A.D. 1684-1688 in pursuance of the Commission of Grace 36-37 Chas. II and 1-4 Jas. II.

When the Court of Claims (A.D. 1666-69) had been in session for over two years the Commissioners reported (February 14, 1668) to the Lord Lieutenant the result of their proceedings.⁶⁸ The claims of the main interests, for whom the Act was intended, had been heard and settled, viz., the adventurers and soldiers, the "protestant purchasers" in Connacht and Clare, and the '49 Officers. Much, however, remained to be done in giving out reprisals to such as were deficient. The general stock of undisposed land had been twice gone through in open court, the debt and deficiencies of all persons stated and though care had been taken to enlarge the stock, yet there was not enough land to go round: "And upon the whole matter it appearing that the stocks of reprisals will not hold to satisfy all the ends of the Acts so that not only the (54) persons commonly called the Nominees and others of the Roman Catholic religion which are by special provisoes to be restored after reprisals of such as are possessed of their estates and transplanted persons who have been removed by special provisions, but also many of his Majesty's Protestant subjects are likely to be in a great manner deprived of the benefit of settlement."

Instructions given in reply directed how the Commissioners were to adjudicate the remaining unsatisfied claims; deficient adventurers and soldiers, the Duke of York, the '49 officers and protestants were to be preferred before all others.⁶⁹

With the closing of the Court of Claims in January, 1669, the only channel of relief for those aggrieved by the settlement was by way of appeal to the King or the Lord Lieutenant. In response to a petition⁷⁰ to the former on behalf of Irish proprietors who were still unrestored a Committee of Enquiry was appointed in 1671 to examine all documents arising out of the proceedings.⁷¹ Though the relevant documents were copied for the purposes of this Enquiry, it was recalled under circumstances to which reference will be made at a later stage. Other petitions indicated that all that had been obtained by some of the Nominees—persons named in the Acts as meriting favour—were custodians of mountainous lands which had been retrenched.⁷²

Land-satisfactions and secure titles were also sought in different connections by the discovery of concealed or forfeited land or by the acquisition of unsatisfied debentures of adventurers and soldiers. "But of late it had been held for law that all the periods of those Acts (Settlement and Explanation) were expired and consequently that all concealed or forfeited land to be found was no longer in his Majesty as a royal trustee to the use of the Acts, but in his own right and therefore he hath lately issued a commission styled the Commission of Grace to free the subject from such former vexatious inquiries and to encourage those possessed under a doubtful title to purchase a confirmation at a moderate fine."⁷³

Thus originated the Commission of Grace, directed to the Duke of Ormond then Lord Lieutenant and others, under which numerous grants were made at the close of the reign of Charles II and during that of James II. The Commission recites that several lands to which the King was entitled still remained undisposed of, the possessors of which were disquieted for various reasons: Discoverers had endeavoured to establish defective titles, or commissions of inquiry, concealed lands, and patentees or other proprietors had been subject to much question respecting their titles, "either because they have no Letters Patent for them . . . or because the patents granted found void. . . or obscure." To remedy these inconveniences commissioners, as mentioned, were appointed with power to correspond with persons holding lands under such circumstances, and to grant new tenures direct from the Crown for such fines and rents, or increase of rents, and such tenures as they thought fit.⁷⁴

Under this Commission close on 500 grants were made between 1684 and 1688 the names of the grantees, with the acreages passed, appearing in the Books of Survey and Distribution with the appropriate marking indicating the instrument of title.

What has survived as a whole of all the foregoing grants, decrees and certificates issued in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, and of the Commission of Grace, is contained in the 15th Report, or third volume of the Record Commission⁷⁵ and of the Supplement thereto.⁷⁶ The material contained in these publications is confined, however, to abstracts, indexes and specimens of the various documents concerned, prefaced as regards the grants under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation with an introduction and notes by Mr. James Hardiman. The abstracts are those made from the enrolments of the grants passed under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, and under the Commission of Grace, and are stated to contain everything material in the original documents:—names of grantees, the lands and acreages granted, profitable and unprofitable, rents reserved to the Crown, dates of grants and of enrolment thereof. The abstracts of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation grants are supplemented by an Index of persons and of the several baronies and counties mentioned in the grants; there is also printed an "Account of the Savings contained in the Patents." Indexes of persons and lands accompany the abstracts of the Commission of Grace.

Particular indexes provided in the Report are those of the names of persons and places occurring in the enrolments of (1) the certificates of the Court of Claims for adventurers and soldiers (2) Decrees of Innocence (3) "Connaught certificates" and (4) Adjudications in favour of the (1649) officers. Each index is introduced by a transcript of the first certificate or decree appearing on the respective rolls. There is also printed an alphabetical list of persons on whose behalf the original certificates, or decrees of the Court of Claims were made.

In addition to this substantial corpus of Acts of Settlement material, there is also available for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution, the extensive collection of official copies of grants, and extracts therefrom, and of extracts of decrees and certificates, and other documents, assembled by the Quit Rent Office and now in the Public Record Office.⁷⁷

FORFEITED ESTATES OF A.D. 1688

The final entries appearing in the Books of Survey and Distribution originated in the sales of the estates forfeited in 1688; of these conveyances were authorised to be made by the English Act of Parliament, 11 and 12 Wm. III, cap. 2, which bears the title: "An Act for granting an Aid to his Majesty by Sale of the forfeited and other Estates and Interests in Ireland, and by a Land Tax in England for the several purposes therein mentioned." The preamble to the Act recites that soon after the accession of King William and his late Consort "a desperate and bloody war and rebellion" was levied in Ireland against them by many of their Majesties subjects who had since been reduced to their due obedience to the Crown of England. It was, therefore, "highly reasonable" that the estates of "such rebels and traitors should be applied in ease of his Majesty's faithful subjects of this Kingdom to the use of the public." It was enacted, accordingly, that all the lands and possessions, within the realm of Ireland, whereof any persons who stood convicted or attainted of treason since the 13th February, 1688, or who should be convicted before the last day of Trinity term 1701, or whereof the late King James was possessed, be vested in the thirteen persons named as Trustees, to the end that the same might be sold and disposed of, with a saving for the persons comprised within the "Articles of Limerick or Galloway."⁷⁸ Declaring null and void all grants made by King William since 13th February, 1688, save those allowed, and empowering the Trustees to reward discoverers of forfeited estates concealed, the Act directed all persons having claims on the lands vested in the Trustees to proceed therewith before the 10th August, 1700, subsequently enlarged to 25th March, 1702.⁷⁹ The Act constituted the Trustees a Court of Record and directed the sale of the estates and interests vested in them before the 25th March, 1702, a period likewise extended to

"It has been decided by the case of Annesley v. Dixon that the Commissioners who constituted the Court of Claims under the Act 11 and 12 W. 3, c. 2, had no power to decide what lands were vested in them as forfeited estates; that as regards the estates of innocent persons, they had no jurisdiction at all . . ." Irish Equity Rep. vol. XII, p. 267.

the 24th June, 1703.⁸⁰ Lands vested in the Trustees and not sold by this date were by the Act 1 Anne, stat. 2, cap. 21, vested in the Queen. This Act also ordained that the sales directed to be made should be only to such persons as were protestants. It was provided by the Act 11 and 12 Wm. III, cap. 2, section 41, that all the monies arising by virtue of the sales were to be appropriated and applied to the discharge of the arrears of pay due (1) to the officers of his Majesty's army who had served in the reduction of Ireland and in the late war against France and (2) of the debts owing for the transport service and the clothing of the army.

Reporting to the House of Commons on December 15, 1699, the Parliamentary Commission on the Forfeitures notified the outlawry of 3,921 persons and the forfeiture of 1,060,792 acres gross besides other forfeited lands of which no survey existed; the proportion of these lands restored to the old proprietors by virtue of the Articles of Limerick and Galway represented "233,106 acres" and those restored by the King's favour "74,733 acres"—all plantation measure.⁸¹ There was yet to be computed, the report continued, the value of between five and six hundred houses in Dublin, Cork and elsewhere, likewise of 61 mills, of fairs and markets, ferries and fisheries, the value of woods standing on forfeited estates being estimated at £60,000. Accompanying this Report was a number of books containing lists of outlawed and forfeiting persons, of claims adjudicated, of pardons and of reversal of outlawries, and of grants and custodiams then in being, which are available in Trinity College, Dublin (Mss. No. 744).⁸² A description of these books is given by Dr. J. G. Simms in IRISH HISTORICAL STUDIES, vol. III, no. 27, under the caption "Historical Revision—Land owned by catholics in 1688" and where the estimates of Butler and others are discussed. It is there suggested that the proportion of land which escaped forfeiture was greater than that allowed for by Butler.

On the expiry of the time allowed for the making and hearing of claims the Trustees were directed to proceed by way of auction to sell the residue of the forfeited estates which had not been restored or already granted; upon payment of the purchase monies they were to execute deeds of bargain and sale which were to be enrolled within six months from the date thereof; after such sales the estates were to be held of the King as of his Castle of Dublin by free and common socage tenure.⁸³

Of the 666 deeds of conveyance so made and enrolled abstracts have also been printed in the 15th Report of the Record Commission to which reference has already been made. These abstracts provide the following particulars; names of purchasers or persons to whom conveyances were made, the names of the lands, with their acreages, the consideration monies, the names of the former owners or persons attainted, and the dates of the conveyances and their enrolements. The area (plantation measure) of the lands thus sold has been estimated to have been 716,374 acres.⁸⁴ In conjunction with these abstracts, and in addition to the Ms. volumes, above indicated, in Trinity College, Dublin, there is also available for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution, tracings made by the Quit Rent Office staff from the original maps of the Trustees. These maps of which a detailed catalogue, parish by parish, is printed in the Supplement to the 8th Report of the Record Commissioners (pp. 334-50) were formerly in the Auditor-General's collection; on the covers of the volumes the endorsement was inscribed: "Maps of the lands forfeited in 1688, and sold in the year 1702, according to the several Surveys taken by the order of the Commissioners appointed under the 11th and 12th William III, for ascertaining and selling the same." Contained in the same series were three volumes of copies of Down Survey maps. It is not unlikely that in some cases, particularly those of double forfeiture of the same lands, that is in 1641 and 1688, certified copies of Down Survey maps were obtained for collation or other use. Where identical areas were the subject of both surveys the acreable content was shown by that of the Trustees to be greater than that recorded by the Down Survey; this is also evidenced by the Books of Survey and Distribution. The Quit Rent Office tracings now probably constitute the main surviving remnant of the Trustees Surveys; with the six-inch maps on which they were superimposed, they have been deposited in the Public Record Office. A collection in the British Museum relating to Mayo will be noticed in the second introduction.

Attention may also be drawn to the numerous valuable documents relative to the proceedings of the Trustees, forming the Annesley collection, received for photographing by the National Library and of which there is an account in Analecta Hibernica, No. 16 (pp. 341-73).

The abstracts of the Trustees conveyances appearing in the Books of Survey and Distribution contain the names of the purchasers and frequently the acreages of the lands purchased, both items being entered exactly opposite or in juxtaposition to the names of persons in column (8) who, apparently, had become the forfeiting proprietors on this occasion. It has been found in a few instances, however, that the names of the purchasers were not entered.⁸⁵

By virtue of the parallel arrangement or specification of the particulars, within the respective columns, the one entry of denominations of land abstracted from the Down Survey and returned in column (4) sufficed for the dual purpose of showing the transactions arising out of both the proceedings relative to the years 1641 and 1688. Thus across a single line and at a glance there comes into view the proprietorship of lands in Ireland at three periods of Irish history.

Frequent collation of all the foregoing various documents as abstracted in the Record Commissioners' Reports, with the Books of Survey and Distribution, has testified to the great care and accuracy with which, in general, the latter were compiled. The essential features of the Down Survey so far as these could be expressed in a descriptive manner regarding individual denominations of forfeited land have likewise been found, so far as comparison is now possible, to have been abstracted with the utmost precision; similarly in respect of details derived from the Civil Survey. Of the particulars furnished by the Down Survey as a whole, and as it existed prior to the fire of 1711, there has thus survived this complete and considerable compendium without the aid of which all the related published barony maps are unintelligible. What the Books of Survey and Distribution preserve of the Stafford Survey has been particularly noticed in the separate section of vol. I, dealing with the Roscommon text (p. xxxiii).

"ALPHABET" OF PLACE-NAMES

Beyond the formal lists of names of persons and of lands and acreages the text as a whole otherwise provides little material by way of guidance. Occasional references will be found indicating that particular lands were not seized or sequestered by virtue of the Civil Survey having returned the proprietors as "Protestants," or that lands were left "out of the stock of reprisals" by virtue of sales to "protestants" before a specific year;⁸⁶ more frequent references are to bogs or mountains noted as held in common or belonging to a particular parish. There are, also, occasional references to "regicides" lands which had been granted to the Duke of York;⁸⁷ to lands mortgaged to the Earl of Cork and others, or leased by a Protestant proprietor to a Catholic tenant.⁸⁸

It may be emphasised that the Books of Survey and Distribution were mainly concerned with exhibiting the distribution of forfeited lands and where, over wide areas, there had been no forfeitures, as in the instance of certain baronies in Fermanagh county, no returns whatever will be found.⁸⁹

Each volume opens with an "Alphabet" or index of the place-names of the lands set out in the text. The baronies forming a county would appear to have been in the first instance indexed separately on a broad alphabetical basis, the arrangement being founded on the order of appearance of place-names in the text rather than on their strict alphabetical sequence. In the final form of the Alphabet all the place-names beginning, for example, with the letter A occurring in each barony of a particular county are grouped together, in paginated sequence, under the names of the respective baronies, and so on until the final letter has been reached. As the same place-name may occur on different pages caution must be exercised in the use of these alphabets. In some instances where these Alphabets had suffered from frequent use fresh copies were made by the Quit Rent Office and inserted after the originals when the volumes were rebound in modern times. There are no indexes of persons.

To some extent the Books of Survey and Distribution of this series are annotated in connection with investigations, rendered necessary by Land Purchase proceedings. These pencil notes also include guidance to the pages at which the respective parishes appear, one of the blank folios usually that preceding the distinct baronial returns being availed of for this purpose.

ORIGIN AND PURPOSE

The origin and purpose of the Books of Survey and Distribution may now be noticed.

As originally designed it would appear that, according to the various headings of the columns set out above, the Books of Survey and Distribution were intended to comprehend merely the details of the distribution of the forfeited lands under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. It has been seen, however, that additional particulars, beyond the periods of these Acts, and consequent upon legislation some forty years later in date, were also included. That a common purpose was to be served by the inscription of such supplementary details is therefore to be inferred. It will be recalled, in this connection, that the set of Books of Survey and Distribution belonging to the Auditor-General had found its way to the Quit Rent Office and that it was duly returned to its proper habitat.

Since the Auditor-General's department contained transcripts of enrolments of various documents and of other material assembled over a long period for the purpose of ascertaining the King's rents,⁹⁰ the presence in his office of the Books of Survey and Distribution would prima facie suggest a relationship in this connection.

Lands granted or decreed in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation were subject to a constant, yearly and acreable rent called as already stated the Quit Rent. In the second volume of his Treatise of the Exchequer and Revenue of Ireland, Howard states:⁹¹ "From these Books (of Distribution) the Auditor-General at times hath in a great measure formed his constats of charges⁹² of rents which issue from his office; and hath thereon also founded his reports on references from the Court of Exchequer." A footnote briefly reviewing the contents of the Auditor's office—"the sure foundations for his constats" adds: "The distribution books may be auxiliary."

From the authoritative nature of the Books of Survey and Distribution, thus implied, it would be reasonable to assume that they were compiled by virtue of a legislative direction.

In this connection it is, perhaps, desirable to quote in the first instance what has already been advanced by way of explanation of the origin and purpose of the Auditor's Books of Survey and Distribution and, also, what has been stated judicially as to the legislative authorisation for their compilation. Mr. W. H. Hardinge, first keeper of the Landed Estates Record Office (1861) in the course of his well-known paper on Surveys in Ireland, already quoted, cites certain evidence which on the face of it would appear to be decisive in one respect. Having referred to the grants made by King William III of the private estates of King James, subsequently revoked, Mr. Hardinge states: "It is worthy of observation that these grants of the estates of King James testify to and explain the origin and compilation of the well-known Books of Survey and Distribution of the lands forfeited in the year 1641, concerning which there was much argument and legal ingenuity exercised in the case of Knox v. The Earl of Mayo, heard before Lord High Chancellor Napier on the 10th, 11th and 14th June, 1858; each of these grants contains a statement that all the lands granted were returned in a particular under the hands of the Auditor and Surveyor-General to have been the estate of the late King James, as appeared by the Books of Survey and Distribution compiled by the Commissioners appointed to carry into execution the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. The fact of this compilation by the commissioners was denied in argument in the case adverted to, and this point appears to be set at rest by these grants of William. The Commissioners for executing the Acts of Settlement and Explanation commenced their labours in 1662, and did not conclude them and deliver over their records of proceedings, as directed in the Act of Settlement, to the Auditor-General until 1680, or thereabouts. The Books of Survey and Distribution were not therefore, twenty years out of the Commissioners custody when the grants of William describing the mode of their compilation passed the great seal. The Attorney and Solicitor-General, as well as the Auditor and Surveyor-General were concurring parties to the statement . . . It is clear that as evidence of the fact stated, these authorities gave precedence to the Books of Survey and Distribution over the decrees and certificates of the Court of Claims and the after letters patent founded thereon and the reason why they did so is also clear; the decrees, certificates and letters patent seldom particularise unprofitable lands . . . and thus left the quality, quantity and situation as well as the particular profitable townlands to which they respectively belonged to be determined by the surveys; and as the Down Survey Maps do not connect the profitable lands expressed upon them with the adventurers and soldiers, or others to whom they were distributed under the Acts, the Books of Survey and Distribution were compiled for this very purpose."

It will be observed that Mr. Hardinge does not provide any authority, beyond the quotation cited, for the compilation of the Books of Survey and Distribution by the Commissioners of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. In the light of the high legal standing which he assigns to the Books, it is thought that if any corroborative legislative or other direction for their compilation had been within his knowledge he would gladly have made it known.⁹³ It may be presumed to some extent, therefore, that the only certain evidence the Record Keeper could adduce was the reference in King William's grants.

The case of Knox v. The Earl of Mayo in which Mr. Hardinge asserts much "legal ingenuity" was exercised, will be found reported in Irish Chancery Reports, 1858, Vol. VII., pp. 563-75. It is sufficient to state here that the admissibility of the Auditor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution as evidence was a pivotal issue in the proceedings. In support of the contention that they were not admissible on the grounds of being "mere abstracts" two decisions, to this effect, one by the Court of Exchequer in 1747, and the other by a prior Lord Chancellor, were quoted.⁹⁴ Lord Chancellor Napier, however, in Knox v. The Earl of Mayo held to the contrary and in giving judgment acknowledged the help he had received from Mr. Hardinge in the following terms: "I have ascertained from the experienced and intelligent officer of the Record office, Mr. Hardinge, that in his own time, and the time of his father to whom he succeeded, covering a period from 1787 to the present time, the records of the Auditor-General's Office, including the Book of Distributions have been always considered admissible and, on many occasions, admitted in evidence in trials relating to property of this class."

⁹³ Nor indeed does Howard in his well-known Treatise already cited.

⁹⁴ The King v. Daly reported in Howard, cited, vol. II, p. 115 and the case of The Archbishop of Dublin v. Trimleston, 12 Ir. Eq. Rep. 267.

Having stressed the importance of the question raised in the light of the security of titles and the enjoyment of a large class of property, the Lord Chancellor proceeded to explain the origin of the Books of Survey and Distribution under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation:

"By the 6th section of the Act (14 and 15 Car. 2, c. 2) the Commissioners are directed from various sources therein mentioned, and amongst others the 'Civil Survey' and by such other lawful ways and means as they should think fit, to make up books as therein directed, which, in the 46th section are called the 'Books of Distribution.' By the 60th section the Commissioners are directed, upon the completion of their labours, to hand over their books to the Auditor-General, and duplicate copies to the Surveyor-General, to remain as of record in their offices. By the 17 and 18 Car. 2, c. 2, sec. 23, rule 5, the Books of Distribution are mentioned in precedence of the Down Survey and in rule 11 it is stated that 'no defendant whose lots are not to be found within the Book of Distributions shall be liable to any new survey, his evidence being lost' About 1680 all these records including the Books of Survey and Distribution were . . . handed over to the Auditor-General." Quoting the statement made by Howard, given above, the Lord Chancellor concluded: "These books therefore are invested with the character of the public official documents of the country compiled by competent authority and used for the purposes of the Crown revenue and which upon established principles, by which faith is reposed in the conduct of public functionaries and credit given to public records should be held to be admissible and at least prima facie correct in describing what they profess to record as true."

THE ACT OF SETTLEMENT BOOKS

If the Auditor's Books of Survey and Distribution, to which the Lord Chancellor referred, had been the only set compiled its origin might, perhaps, be left entirely to judicial interpretation. As, however, other series existed earlier in date, it is necessary, in the interests of historical research, to indicate, in relation to the relevant sections of the Act of Settlement, the sources from which compilation of Books was directed to be made. Under section 6 of the Act of Settlement, quoted by the Lord Chancellor, the Commissioners were directed "to make up books of what is due to each adventurer and to ascertain the possession of such to whom lands are assigned therein expressing" the names of the former proprietors, the denominations of land, parish, barony and county. These books were to be compiled from certificates or particulars furnished by the adventurer and from the existing surveys of the late pretended powers. The certificates were to be given under the hands and seals of the adventurers and were to specify the lands of which they were then, or on the 7th May, 1659, possessed.⁹⁵

Section 46 of the same Act, also quoted by the Lord Chancellor, declared that where no "certain record of the lands assigned or set out to the soldiers" existed "so that the rent payable to us cannot be ascertained," certificates were to be obtained from them as to their possessions, in the same manner as from the adventurers. "You (the Commissioners) are out of the said certificates and out of the surveys and books of debentures, or books of distributions, or subdivisions of lands . . . forthwith to cause fair books to be made up of all the houses, lands, tenements and hereditaments set out to the adventurers, soldiers and other persons whose estates are confirmed by our said declaration, together with the rents and profits payable unto us . . . and you are carefully to reduce the measure of such lands" from plantation to English measure, "and accordingly to ascertain the rent payable to us."⁹⁶

The "books of distributions or sub-divisions" referred to in the foregoing sections were of Commonwealth origin,⁹⁷ and it would thus appear that save for the certificates of

The Lord Chancellor in the judgment, quoted above, indicates that the Books to be made up were called in the 46th section the "Books of Distribution"! The Books of S. and D. c. 1656-7 would also appear to be the Books referred to in the Act of Explanation, sec. 23, rule 5: "Where the books of distribution and the Down Survey agree in the satisfactions which have been allotted to any regiments, troops, societies or persons, or do not differ more than in one-tenth, there no re-survey shall be ordered, notwithstanding such information."

the adventurers and soldiers, which were to be furnished within forty days of proclamation, all the sources for the authorised compilation were already in existence. It will have been observed that the sources specified for the compilation do not include the decrees and certificates of the Courts of Claims, A.D. 1663-1665, nor the grants founded thereon. The suggestion may, therefore, be advanced that the Books compiled in pursuance of sections 6 and 46 of the Acts of Settlement were those described at p. 151 of Wood's Guide to the Public Record Office under the caption "Books of Survey and Distribution, 1661": "These contain names of proprietors in both, Civil and Down Surveys, with notes as to distribution, etc., viz. (1) incumbrances, (2) lands undisposed in May, 1659, or set by lease, (3) private grants, (4) lands not set by lease, or estates of King's Judges, (5) possessors in May, 1659." This account appears in the section of Mr. Wood's Guide devoted to the Surveyor-General's Office.

In specifying the position as to the distribution of lands at the date of the King's Declaration of November, 1660, and in providing a basis for the determination of revenue, this series would appear to have furnished the requirements expressed in the above sections of the Act of Settlement. What survived the fire of 1711, perished in 1922, and no more can now be said than to express the opinion, based on the evidence alone of the above description, that these were the Books of Survey and Distribution compiled by the Commissioners of the Act of Settlement.⁹⁸

The question then arises, in connection with the quotation furnished by Mr. Hardinge, whether these Books of the Surveyor-General, cited in Wood's Guide, could contain particulars of the estates of King James subsequently granted away by King William.⁹⁹ Excepted from confirmation by the King's Declaration of November, 1660 (Sec. 35), were the estates of persons "who sat as judges" upon the life of King Charles I, or "who were of the guard of halbertiers, assisting to put the bloody sentence of death in execution." By section 194 of the Act of Settlement the estates of numerous persons specified, beginning with "Oliver Cromwell, deceased," were thereby settled and vested in his Royal Highness, James Duke of York. Since, apparently, the Surveyor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution returned the possessors of estates in 1659 the lands enjoyed by the regicides would be there recorded; but these Books also contained, as already stated, notes of the distribution of the estates of the "King's Judges" and accordingly it is to be inferred that the new proprietorship of James, Duke of York was duly indicated. If this be correct, the excerpt from King William's grants furnished by Mr. Hardinge would seem to establish the origin of the Books of Survey and Distribution in the Surveyor's Office—"1661"—quoted above, rather than of those of the Auditor-General. It may be added that the lands the subject of the suit Knox v. The Earl of Mayo were located in the county Mayo. A Book of Survey and Distribution for this county is not included in the list of "Books of Distribution" saved from the fire of 1711 in the Surveyor-General's Office, printed at page 542 of the first volume of the Record Commission's Reports; see, also, p. 502 of the same volume and pp. 705-6 of the "Custom House Index" in the P.R.O. In parenthesis, the unsigned "Preface" to a "Book of Survey and Distribution of Westmeath," published in 1852, intimates that the text was derived from one of the Surveyor-General's Books which had survived the fire. The title-page of the printed volume reads: "The Book of Surveys and Distribution of the Estates in the County of Westmeath forfeited in the year MDCXLI"; this is supplemented by the motto: "No country in Europe has suffered like Ireland, and were not the Accounts authentic beyond question, the facts would be incredible" (Ladiston: Printed by J. C. Lyons). A copy is available in the National Library, Dublin. In the text the instruments of title mostly specified—decrees and certificates of the Courts of Claims—relate to the period 1663-70; it would thus appear that series of Books of Survey and Distribution in the Survey-General's Office had contained different particulars.

COMMITTEES OF ENQUIRY A.D. 1670 AND 1671

Since, unhappily, the Surveyor and Auditor-General's sets of these unique and valuable Books have perished, no more, perhaps, might be said, but in the fortunate event of the survival of the Quit Rent Office duplicate or copy of the latter it is necessary to examine further the ⁹⁸ In the connection of the fire of 1711, a letter dated 21 June, 1711, sent by the then Clerk of the Quit Rents, Mr. Richard Thompson, to a local collector, with reference to a complaint regarding a demand for Quit Rent greater than that contained in the patent, may be quoted: "I can make no report thereon till I have made up the Books of Distribution of that county they being burnt in the Surveyor's Office which will be done before next term." question of the origin of the Auditor's series and to endeavour to establish an approximate date for its compilation. This now, can only be achieved by referring to circumstances associated with, or to be deducted from, the compilation of other sets of Books of Survey and Distribution. By way of preface it is necessary to recall, briefly, certain relevant matters.

The Commissioners of the Court of Claims to whom Mr. Hardinge attributed the compilation of the Books of Survey and Distribution were Sir Edward Smith, Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, Sir Edward Deering, Sir Allen Broderick, Sir Winston Churchill and Edward Cooke, Esq.¹⁰⁰ The powers of these gentlemen had come to an end with the conclusion of their work in the very early days of January, 1669, when, it is presumed, they returned to England. Under these Commissioners were sub-commissioners: Mr. Thomas Taylor, Mr. Thomas Syms, Mr. John Burniston and Mr. John Pettie.¹⁰¹ The last-named gentleman was Surveyor-General from the Restoration until February, 1667, his deputy being the first-named Mr. Thomas Taylor, ancestor of the Lords Headfort.¹⁰² Registrars to the Court were also appointed, their duties including the custody of all the documents used in carrying out the requirements of the Acts. For a period this custody was relinquished in respect of surveys, certificates and numerous other records, in favour of the sub-commissioners.¹⁰³ All the documents remaining in the office of the Registrars were according to Mr. Hardinge handed over in 1680 or thereabouts to the Auditor-General in pursuance of the 60th section of the Instructions annexed to the Act of Settlement.

A new body of Commissioners (with sub-commissioners) was appointed in October, 1670, to ascertain all debts and sums due to the King and to enquire "into all forfeited and concealed lands." To the sub-commissioners was reserved, exclusively, up to the 26th March, 1671, the discovery of concealed lands from the records. The Archbishop of Dublin was one of the Commissioners, and it is not unlikely that some or all of the sub-commissioners were those who acted in this capacity in the former Court of Claims.¹⁰⁴

Some months later, in January, 1671, by Order in Council, the King being present, a Committee of Enquiry, including the Dukes of Buckingham and Ormonde, was appointed to enquire into the proceedings under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, having particular regard to those who had lost their estates as represented by the petition of Colonel Richard Talbot.¹⁰⁵ It was alleged that various unauthorised differences were to be found between the King's Declaration of 30th November, 1660, and the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. By a further Order in Council¹⁰⁶ a new committee was appointed including Lord Anglesey and other noblemen, but not the Duke of Ormonde, to peruse all papers concerning the Settlement of Ireland from first to last with power to obtain copies of all documents relating to the proceedings, an abstract of which was to be laid before the King. An address of the English House of Commons to the King, dated March 26th, 1673, asked for the recall of the Commission stating that if pursued it "would shake the peace and security of the whole Kingdom." By virtue of this, and the intervention of powerful interests, the Commission was superseded, the documents copied for its inspection being assembled in twelve large volumes these passing, it has been suggested, to the custody in the first instance of Lord Anglesey.¹⁰⁷

CONCEALED LANDS—THE TAYLOR BOOKS

For some years, therefore, after the closing of the Court of Claims, considerable activity prevailed as to the proceedings of the various and respective commissioners appointed to carry out the King's Declaration, the Act of Settlement and the Act of Explanation. In 1672, Arthur Capel, Earl of Essex, was appointed Lord Lieutenant. In his published correspondence there are various letters regarding the compilation of certain books, under conditions of the greatest secrecy, which cannot but be associated with the enquiries then astir and concerning which the King, apparently, was much interested.¹⁰⁸ Writing to

Mr. Secretary Coventry from Dublin Castle, in May, 1675, on the subject of his proposed visit to England the Lord Lieutenant thus refers to one of the matters to be discussed: "By his Majesty's command all the records of the Act of Settlement, have been searched and extracts made out of them, in order to the discovery of concealed lands. This work is contained in 12 or 14 volumes now ready to be sent over and much matter will arise upon this subject to propose to his Majesty in order to the finding out such lands as are fraudulently concealed and concerning the distribution of them pursuant to the Acts of Settlement."¹⁰⁹

In an earlier letter of March 28th, 1674, to his confidential secretary, Mr. Harbord, Lord Essex described the qualifications of the person to whom he had entrusted the compilation; "Mr. Thomas Taylor, formerly a sub-commissioner in the Court of Claims, had the curiositie (and no other as I know of besides himself) to keep books of entrys of the disposition of all lands made by that commission. This is the man whom I have employed by comparing his books with the other records to see what can by this means be discovered to belong to the Crown. For what relates to the Records, this person Mr. Taylor is a very able man, and indeed, the only man in the Kingdom that can do a work of this nature." A further letter from the Lord Lieutenant to his secretary indicating conditions under which these Books were compiled may be given; it is dated January 23rd, 1674-5: "Upon this occasion I must remind you of a passage . . . that happened between my Lord of Arlington and me; it was concerning the preparing of books for the discovery of concealed lands in Ireland, and you cannot but call to mind how ill his lordship took it, that such a work had been so long in hand, and he knew nothing thereof, and yet when he saw what orders I had received and in what manner I was directed to proceed his lordship rested fully satisfied with what I had done."

Some six months later the Books were ready for transmission to the King, the Lord Lieutenant notifying Mr. Harbord on June 20th, 1675, that "the bearer Mr. Taylor" was then proceeding to England with the volumes adding that Mr. Taylor "had engaged" that no person would be allowed to view them until he, Lord Essex, had arrived. Their safe delivery may be inferred from the Warrant of March 17th, 1676, addressed by the King to the Lord Lieutenant: ¹¹⁰

"Warrant for paying £500 as a free gift to Thomas Taylor who had by the Lord Lieutenant's direction drawn out several large books containing a complete account of the disposition of all such lands as were returned forfeited in Ireland according to the Down Admeasurement as the same were disposed of by the Commissioners of the late Court of Claims which work will be of great use in discovering such concealed forfeited lands there as are unjustly detained, which, when discovered, may be applied to the satisfaction of the interests there yet remaining unsatisfied, and will likewise promote the final settlement of that Kingdom."

In course of time these Books, forming 16 large folio volumes and expressing the particulars above indicated in respect of 28 counties of Ireland, were acquired by the Marquis of Buckingham and later by Lord Ashburnham; eventually they were purchased by Government and deposited in the Royal Irish Academy. The series is described in the 56th Report (pp. 406-7) of the D.K. of the Public Records.

The title-pages of these volumes may here first be noted:

"The Distribution of Forfeited Land in Ireland pursuant to the Acts of Settlement and Explanation composed by Thomas Taylor, Esq., by command of his Excellency Arthur Earl of Essex, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in the year 1677."

While the foregoing appears only in the volume for Dublin, Wicklow and Carlow the following title-page, suitably adapted appears in all the Books:

"A Distribution of Forfeited Land in the counties of Dublin, Wicklow . . . Returned by the Downe Survey showing whose they were in Anno, 1641.

¹¹⁰ Cal. State Papers, 1676-77, p. 30.

and to whom they are now sett out by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation Tome, 1st Vol. 1st."

That there is here a set of Books having features in common with those characteristic of the Auditor-General's series will already have been obvious. Before intimating the bearing of this Taylor compilation on the origin of the latter, the relationship in matters of detail may, briefly, be more closely examined.

At the beginning of every barony in the Taylor volumes there are headings announcing the particulars contained in the various columns. These headings are of the same character and appear in the same order as those furnished in the Auditor-General's Books as evidenced by the Quit Rent Office duplicate or copy. There is also agreement in the sequence of the specification, parish by parish, of the same details explicitly stated in the Taylor set to have been derived from the Civil and Down Surveys; on the distribution side, however, the instruments of title, dates of decrees and certificates of the Court of Claims, are furnished, these being indicated merely by markings, as already stated in the Auditor-General's and Quit Rent Office series.

The absence of Books for certain counties—Roscommon, Mayo, Galway and Clare is explained by the fact that at the date of compilation the claims of transplanted persons had not been determined.

Save, therefore, as regards precise details of instruments of title, difference in arrangement of volumes and particulars governed by the date of compilation, it can be said that, basically, these Books are of the same nature as the Books formerly belonging to the Auditor-General and known as Books of Survey and Distribution.

The origin and purpose of the Taylor Books could scarcely have been more explicitly stated than in the documents quoted above. If Books expressing similar particulars had been prepared, or were in course of preparation, by the commissioners of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, what necessity, it may be enquired, existed for the King's command. The necessity, indeed, for that command strongly induces the opinion that authority for such a compilation or, for that matter, of subsequent compilations on similar lines, did not reside in the Acts of Settlement and Explanation.

ORIGIN OF THE AUDITOR'S SERIES

In the statement of Mr. Hardinge, cited above, it is very definitely intimated that the records of the proceedings of the Court of Claims handed over, as he states, in 1680, included the Books of Survey and Distribution whose origin was in question. Elsewhere he gives the year 1678 as the approximate date of transfer. Whichever be the correct year, it may here be pointed out and recalled that the Books of the Auditor-General expressed the distribution of lands under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation subsequent to 1680. Numerous patents were taken out between this year and 1684 as indicated by the Abstracts printed in the third volume of the Record Commission's Reports; and, likewise, grants between 1684-88 issued under the Commission of Grace.

The opinion may again be expressed that the Books handed over were those directed to be compiled by the commissioners under sections 6 and 46 of the Act of Settlement which, ultimately reaching the Surveyor-General's office, were later known as the "Books of Survey and Distribution, 1661."

It would seem then more likely that the Auditor-General's set was of relative departmental composition or origin, an assumption warranted, apart from other considerations, by contemporaneous textual observations such as "discharged on plea of Disclaimer by Order of Exchequer Michaelmas Term 1681."¹¹¹ While Howard in his Treatise on the Revenue is silent as to the authority under which the Auditor's set was compiled, he indicates, as already pointed out, its utility, if not purpose, in forming a basis for the issuing of the Auditor's constats and for founding his reports on references from the Court of Exchequer. The certitude and exactness demanded in the specification of the Quit Rent payable, as well as of the lands out of which they issued, with their locations, could only be assured, it is thought, by such a compilation as that represented by the Books of Survey and Distribution. It may be suggested, therefore, that the necessity for such a series, in this particular connection, would have arisen independently of the composition of similar Books for other purposes. Finally, it is considered that the markings, leading to the various titles of the persons to whom the lands were distributed were designed to facilitate easy reference to the numerous and distinct volumes in the Auditor's office containing transcripts of the decrees, certificates and grants made under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. This feature, on the face of it, indicates a system of reference the significance of which could only be understood by those charged with particular duties, a circumstance which may be thought conclusive as to the departmental origin and purpose of the Auditor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution.

The exact date when the compilation of the main body of the particulars contained in these Books began it is not easy to determine, but some guidance may be afforded by reference to yet another set and to circumstances connected with the history of the Revenue.

THE ANNESLEY BOOKS

Documents representing the Annesley collection, received for photographing in recent years by the National Library, Dublin, described in Analecta Hibernica No. 16, included another notable set of Books of Survey and Distribution similar in character to those already described but distinguished by a particular feature. This is the specification of the amount of the Quit Rent payable to the Crown in respect of each denomination of the distributed forfeited lands; in addition the instruments of title are indicated in an adjoining column reserved for "Observations." Where lands were not liable to rent the fact is intimated as in the following instance relating to an estate of the Duke of York: "Certe. and Patent—liable to no rent" or again where some particular condition prevailed: "Provisoe pa. 77 Act of Expl. Quit Rent remitted by Letters Patent from his late Majesty." The particulars thus furnished in respect of the lands disposed of under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation—the sales are not included of the 1688 forfeitures—are of such a nature, amounting to the identification of the liability or otherwise of every denomination of land to Quit Rent, as to suggest an effort to meet the possible inadequacy or uncertainty of the existing Crown Rental; whatever the purpose, the source of this particular information is to be related to the Auditor-General's office. The heading "Rent payable to his Majesty," in conjunction with the observation, indicated above, as to a remission by "his late Majesty," suggests that the compilation of this set was begun in the reign of Charles II. When and under what circumstances, this particular series reached the Annesley collection, research has yet to disclose. In addition to the foregoing Books, the Annesley collection also contains valuable documents relative to the proceedings during the years 1700-1703 of the Trustees appointed in 1699, and of whom Mr. Francis Annesley was one, to dispose by sale of the estates and interests forfeited in 1688. These estates, under the Act 11 and 12 Wm. III, c. 2, were after their sale, to continue liable to the same rents as were payable on the 13th February, 1688. The conveyances made specify such rents. By a later Act (1 Ann. c. 2) the Trustees, with the consent of the Revenue Commissioners, were empowered to apportion these rents. It may well have been, therefore, that this particular set of Books of Survey and Distribution was made available for the use of the Trustees in the connection stated.

THE COLLECTION OF CROWN REVENUES

Bearing further on the date of the Auditor-General's set is the resumption by the Crown in 1683 of the management of all its revenues and when "Commissioners and Governors" thereof were appointed.¹¹² From 1669, to that year, these revenues had been in the hands of "Farmers" who for the purposes of collection—and "slighting the course of the Exchequer,"—divided the country into districts without regard to the division by counties, appointed collectors of their own, a Clerk of Quit Rents and an Accountant-General.¹¹³ The revenue from Quit Rents during this period was affected either by commissions for the reduction of such rents where they were too high, or by their discharge under orders from the Court of Exchequer, of which alterations the Auditor-General had no record. Consequently, at the conclusion of the Farms he "was not able to make out any charge for the Collection of the quit rents, nor was there any certain rent roll or record for that part of the revenue, but it lay wholly in the breast of the clerk of the quit rents to the farmers, and his private books . . ." ¹¹⁴ To remedy this position the new Commissioners of Revenue took into the Public Service the Clerk of the Quit Rents and the Accountant-General who had been employed by the Farmers; "and a few years afterwards the Court of Exchequer ordered a new Rent Roll to be compiled according to the collection by districts from the Auditor's Books, and the original grants decrees and other records." ¹¹⁵ Thus, incidentally, originated the office of Clerk of the Quit rents which afterwards remained a public department.

¹¹² Liber mun. pub. Hiberniae, vol. I, pt. II, p. 123.

With this period of re-organisation of the management of the Crown revenues, that is to say, the closing years of the reign of Charles II, the Auditor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution, in their main content, it is thought, began to be compiled; their completion must be assigned to a date subsequent to the sales in 1703, by the Trustees of the Forfeited Estates of 1688. The letter, however, of the Clerk of the Quit Rents, cited above (p. xxiv), is open to the interpretation that the Surveyor-General's set was then, A.D. 1711, the only official one in existence; but a letter written by the same gentleman some years previously, on the 22nd November, 1698, creates the impression that two sets were at this time available for inspection:

"I have . . . examined the Survey Books of Distribution and Decree and Letters Patent of Sir Valentine Browne for remitting the Quit Rent and find he claimed and was decreed . . . but I find by the Downe Survey and Books of Distribution the lands to contain . . ." ¹¹⁶ The documents referred to, in conjunction with the Books examined, may be said to localise the places of examination as those of the respective offices of the Auditor and Surveyor-General.

THE AUDITOR-GENERAL AND CLERK OF QUIT RENTS

Before considering the origin of the duplicate set of the Auditor-General's Books, formerly lodged in the Quit Rent Office, the mutual interests and concerns of both departments should first be made clear. These are indicated in a report ¹¹⁷ written by the Clerk of the Quit Rent Office,

Mr. G. S. Smythe in 1869 when the question of a new custody for the former Auditor-General's collections—this office having been abolished, 1822, under Act 3 Geo. IV, cap. 56—was under renewed discussion. ¹¹⁸

"From the creation in 1669 of the Office of Clerk of the Quit Rents the most intimate relations have always existed between the Quit Rent Office and that of the Auditor-General, the records in the custody of the latter officer being indispensable to the management and collection of revenue. All patents . . . all orders of Court of Exchequer for putting rents in or striking them out of charge in fact all instruments affecting the Revenue were entered in the Auditor's Office and the requisite addition or alteration or discharge noted on his Rental and thereupon a Constat containing a brief abstract of the new charge, discharge or other alteration with date of patent or instrument on which it was founded was sent by him to the Clerk of the Quit Rents that he might make his rental correspond. . . . Efficiency of the Quit Rent department was dependent on the facility of obtaining information from Records in charge of the Auditor-General. If a rent was found omitted or entered erroneously he corrected the record and caused a similar correction to be made in the Rental in the Quit Rent Office. He has also furnished General Report on lists of arrears of Quit etc. Rents . . . to assist the Collectors . . . and he exercised what might be termed a supervision over the duties of the Quit Rent Office which since 1669 was under a distinct control, but always considered and treated as a detached member of the Auditor's Office." From either circa A.D. 1683 or 1693, it may be commented, would have been the more correct year for the close connection indicated. ¹¹⁹ Mr. Smythe throws further light on the relationship of the two offices by an instance of the dual positions held by one individual: "For many years up to his death in 1815 Mr. William Bower held the position in the Auditor's Office (First Clerk) . . . and during the same time he was Clerk in the Quit Rent Office, and performed the duties of the latter situation in the Auditor's Office with the cognizance of the Commissioners of the Revenue, and subsequently of the Commissioners of Excise, in whom was vested the control of the Quit Rent department ¹²⁰ . . . On consideration of the several facts stated it will appear that up to the year 1669, the Auditor-General performed all the duties since discharged by the Clerk of the Quit Rents so far as they related to the charge and receipt of those rents; that solely to enable him to perform those duties all grants and other instruments on which rents were reserved were entered in his office."

ORIGIN OF QUIT RENT OFFICE SET

If no other circumstances than those indicated were to be cited they might be considered as providing reasonable grounds for inferring the origin of the Quit Rent Office set of Books of Survey and Distribution. It will be recalled however that the Auditor's own Books were in the Quit Rent Office in 1759 and that a copy was in the Forfeiture Office. Apart from facilitating the making of a copy for official purposes, which may easily be imagined, it is thought that the circumstances of the Auditor's Books being away from their proper habitat was originally governed by other requirements. In this connection the Act 1 and 2 Anne, cap. 21, sec. 2 (English) directed that all the deeds, records and papers "whatsoever" belonging to the Trustees of Forfeited Estates, 1688, were to be transferred to the keeping of the Commissioners of Revenue. The documents so delivered, in 1703, are listed in the second volume of the Record Commissions Reports (pp. 614-17). In turn the Commissioners of Revenue appointed the "Clerk of the Forfeitures" whose particular business was the care of these records, making searches, and giving copies.¹²¹

Thus had come under the control of the Commissioners of Revenue the two departments of the "Clerk of the Quit Rents" and the "Clerk of the Forfeitures" both of which were most likely housed in the one building.

It may, therefore, be suggested that the Auditor-General for the purpose of completing his Books of Survey and Distribution in so far as the entering of the names of the purchasers of the Forfeited Estates of 1688 was concerned had recourse to the records of the Forfeiture Office. If so, then the absence of the Books from their proper habitat is explained.¹²² It may also be conjectured that when the necessary entries were completed the Books were returned to the Auditor-General via the "Clerk of the Quit Rents" by whom they were detained pending their copying. That they were for a very considerable period in the care of the latter is indicated by the year inscribed in one of the duplicate volumes 1739, as that of its examination, or comparison, and from the date, 1759, of the return of the set. If anything this is indeed further evidence of the very close relationship of the two departments.

To conclude this section, it would appear from the report of the "Clerk of the Quit Rents," Mr. G. S. Smythe quoted above, that in 1829 on the abolition of the Office of "Clerk of the Forfeitures," its records were placed in charge of the Quit Rent department for some years, but that under an order of the Commissioners of Woods, Forests and Land Revenues, dated 31st October, 1840, they were handed over to the officer in charge of the Auditor's Records.¹²³ It should be added that the control and management of the office of the "Clerk of the Quit Rents" had passed in 1827 to the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, from the Revenue authorities.¹²⁴ at p. vi is that cited at the opening section of this note. The powers of the Trustees came to an end 24 June, 1703, and their documents were handed over to the Commrs. of Revenue by deed dated 3 August of the same year. It is most unlikely that the Trustees themselves would have marked the Auditor's Books as indicated by Prendergast's note. Mr. L'Estrange was Senior Clerk in the Q.R.O. in 1863.

¹²⁴ "General Order—Excise Office, Dublin, 20 October, 1827; For the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of the Act 7 and 8 Geo. IV., cap. 68 'for the management and improvement of the Land Revenues of the Crown in Ireland, and for other purposes relating thereto' Ordered: That the Clerk of the Quit Rents at this office execute all orders relating to the duties of his Department that he may receive from the Commissioners of Woods and Forests. By the Board, W. Wardley"—Letter Book 2B, 44, 62 P.R.O. A similar order dated 18th Decr., 1827 directed the transfer of records. LB: 2B, 35, 37. It would appear, it may be added, that the control of the Auditor's records by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests was frequently recommended. Smythe in his report, cited above, states: "So convinced was the Vice-Treasurer of Ireland of the intimate relationship between the Auditor's Records and the duties of the Clerk of the Quit Rents and of those Records being what he termed an appurtenant to the office of the latter that on the 11th July, 1831, he recommended to the Lords of H.M. Treasury that their control and direction should be transferred to the Commissioners of Woods in order that both offices should be under the same management. The proposed transfer was also contemplated in 1860 and in a report made to you (Commrs. of Woods) from this office on 19 Jan., 1864, the objections made in 1831 were observed upon and it was stated that 'it would be for the public benefit that the Keeper's (of the Landed Estates Records) Office should be placed under your control.' The recommendations thus made were not approved.

SOME PREVIOUS PUBLICATIONS

Besides the edition of a Book of Survey and Distribution for Westmeath, printed from a volume in the Surveyor-General's collection, there have been publications from other series. The appendix to vol. I of the History and Antiquities of Kilkenny by the Revd. Wm. Healy, P.P. (1893) purports to represent the Book of Survey and Distribution for that county as "copied from the original MS. preserved in the Record Office, Dublin, by the Author." While the names of the old and new proprietors are stated neither the Down Survey reference numbers nor any particulars of instruments of title are given in Father Healy's book. With the issue of the Cork Historical and Arch. Society Journal, July-December, 1932 (vol. xxxvii), was begun the publication of a Book of Survey and Distribution for that county "copied from the MS. volume in Library of R.I.A. by Anne Waters"; this belongs to the set "composed by Thomas Taylor" described above.

Students may be reminded that since the Auditor-General's series had contained a more complete account of the final distribution of land under the Acts of Settlement, Commission of Grace, etc., than other sets, including the Headfort series in the P.R.O. (56th Report p. 307) the Quit Rent Office duplicate of the Auditor's books, described at the beginning of this introduction, should always be consulted.

In addition to the various series already mentioned, yet another set of Books of Survey and Distribution formerly existed amongst the muniments at Kilkenny Castle; according to a letter from the Revd. J. Graves to Sir John Gilbert, printed at p. 295 of the latter's Life, by R. M. Gilbert, this set was abstracted between the years 1830 and 1848.

* * * * *

For topographical and genealogical research the Books of Survey and Distribution are of the utmost importance. Representing, as already stated, abstracts made before the fire of 1711 of the Strafford Civil and Down Surveys they have preserved for every Irish county vital particulars of place-names, phonetically expressed, as recorded over the period 1636-60. The loss which otherwise would have been sustained through the destruction of the surveys mentioned has thus been considerably mitigated. It has been pointed out that the well-known Down Survey maps, available to investigators since 1908, are unintelligible without the corresponding Books of Survey and Distribution; in this connection attention may be drawn to the fact that so far back as 1812 the publication of the latter was recommended in one of the Record Commission's Reports (Vol. I, p. 414). In conjunction with the Down Survey, as superimposed on the Ordnance Survey six-inch maps, the Books of Survey and Distribution provide exceptional material for toponymical studies.

In the specification, county by county, of the names of proprietors of land prior and subsequent to the Commonwealth settlement, the genealogist is provided with details of the losses no less than the gains of countless families. Here emerges the land of Ireland as it was held three centuries ago by Gaels and Gaelicised Normans, by Normans "The Old English," by "The New English" of the Elizabethan and of the later plantations and settlements. The Books of Survey and Distribution frequently provide the addresses of landholders and always the parishes in which their possessions were located, details which should prove of much help in genealogical research.

In another respect, that of statistical enquiry, these Books also provide material worthy of investigation. Hardinge, according to Prendergast, used them for the purpose of a section of the Appendix (E) to his paper on Surveys in Ireland. The relative section (pp. 100-4) is entitled "Table exhibiting the number of Irish Plantation Acres, Profitable and Unprofitable, Admeasured as Forfeited in each Barony." There is, however, a wide measure of disagreement between this "Table" and the "Particular of the Contents of the Baronys admeasured by Dr. Petty" printed at p. 137 of Larcom's edition of the History of the Down Survey. For example the latter shows for Dublin the total area admeasured as forfeited in that county to have been 73,894 acres plantation measures, whereas Hardinge states it to have been 64,931 acres of the same measure—a difference of close on 9,000 acres. The explanation in this, as in other instances, would appear to be that Hardinge deducted the acreages restored to former proprietors under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation from the total of the acreages originally admeasured as forfeited.

The Books of Survey and Distribution should also help to determine another statistical problem, that is as to the number of Catholic landowners in 1641. Petty's figure of 3,000 is challenged by Professor Butler in his "Confiscation in Irish History" (pp. 156-7) where he states that "we are warranted in assuming that for the whole island the number . . . . was at least 8,000 and may have been as many as 10,000 or even 12,000." It is thought that the careful examination, county by county, of the Books of Survey and Distribution should resolve this problem as likewise that of the total acreage forfeited (1641) and estimated by Hardinge at 1,973,769 plantation acres.

The foregoing is a reprint of the general introduction which appeared in the Roscommon and Mayo volumes. A reference it contains on p. vii, col. 1, par. 2 to the headings of the columns refers to the texts for these counties.

Likewise regarding a footnote (12) on p. viii, The Civil Survey, vol. x. Miscellanea, containing descriptions of barony boundaries, should be consulted.

References to the Galway Book of Survey and Distribution denote the pagination of the P.R.O.I. manuscript which is indicated in the text.

THE present text, for the greater part, has been derived from the Survey made in 1636 in connection with the projected plantation of Connacht (1635-38) and known as Strafford's Survey. It consisted of books made up in baronies, bound in parchment, and similar in format to the volumes of the Civil Survey of some twenty years later. This Survey expressed the bounds, meares, names and "by-names" of the quarters, plowlands, cartrons and other denominations of lands, including "trines," in the respective baronies and parishes of the proposed plantation; likewise the names of the owners or proprietors supplemented by a microscopic description of the soil of each denomination of land. Jurors testified, parish by parish, to the veracity of the particulars set out which comprise the present text.¹

The Survey also consisted of barony and parish maps described as entire and perfect, these expressing also the qualities of the land whether arable, pasture, meadow, wood or bog. The evidence of this Survey being the source of the present series, happily, has survived, and has already been explained at length in the Roscommon and Mayo volumes.²

The significance of the columnar headings, at the top of each page, has been indicated at pp. vii and viii of the first introduction here, where the suggestion is made that these headings were designed in later years to express solely the distribution of confiscated lands as authorized by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation (14 & 15 Ch. II and 17 and 18 Ch. II); furthermore that they appeared in only nine of the twenty volumes of the Q.R.O. series, these including Roscommon and Mayo but not Galway. For the comprehension of the text these have accordingly been inserted and are similar to those in the manuscript for the two counties mentioned.

The textual heading of the second column in the Roscommon volume specifies a particular year: "Proprietors Names: Anno 1641." It is found necessary to explain the reason for this year having been so given. The date assigned by law for the determination of liability to confiscation was in the first instance the 23rd October 1641.³ Confiscation was to be effective, without any office or inquisition found, and it was to apply to the estates of all persons in rebellion on that date. The Commonwealth government followed this precedent but extended the period of liability from the 1st October, 1641, to the 1st March, 1650.⁴ Hence the appearance of "1641"—the legal year—in relevant documents, notably the Civil Survey 1654-56 and the Roscommon Book of S. & D. published by the Commission. But a civil survey of Connacht and Clare was not included in the original scheme and its absence when the transplantation machinery was set in motion impelled the commissioners in charge of this project to submit to government certain proposals to which the following reply was received: "That instead of granting commissions to prove possession in 1641, all surveys that were formerly taken on oath and by juries should be conclusive and binding to all parties as to quantity, value and possession;" it was scarcely necessary to add "as at 1641."⁵ The surveys referred to were those taken by Strafford in 1636 and it was considered, no doubt, that the brief interval—it could have been even less than five years—did not warrant the issue of further commissions for determining possessions. In these circumstances, and in the light of the Roscommon precedent, the introduction of an unauthorized and, so to speak, "illegal" year could not be sustained in this or in any other text of the series.

Furthermore, as to the suggestion of including the Headfort Survey material, of which presently, it will have been noted that every page and barony of the present text was certified; it is of a semi-legal nature; to introduce another uncertified and incomplete text no matter how valuable and interesting is a suggestion that could not be entertained, to say nothing of adding more columns to the existing nine columnar dimensions of the volumes!

The frequent annotations in the present text indicative of collation with measurers' books and maps, likewise characteristic of the Roscommon and Mayo volumes, could have been made at the period of the survey, but it is thought that they were more likely the outcome of close scrutiny for some particular purpose at a later date or dates. There is evidence, which will be referred to later, that the survey was consulted by "Connaught purchasers," while the discovery of "concealed lands" was not only directed by the Act of Settlement,⁶ but Essex, in a letter to Ranelagh of 12 January, 1674-5, stated that most of such lands were in Connacht and that many people were offering to make discoveries.⁷ It may well have been that it was about this time the Strafford survey was subjected to close examination and for another particular reason—the issue of the long overdue Connacht Certificates which did not materialize until 1676 and which have been explained at page xvi. "Connaught purchasers" and "discoverers" will again have to be referred to, but for the discussion of the text as a whole, and its present arrangement, the territorial units within which it was framed must first claim attention.

It should, however, be stated forthwith that in the absence of both Strafford and Down Survey maps, the Commission decided to include with this volume an alternative source in the map of Galway county derived from Petty's Hiberniae Delineatio, commonly called Petty's Atlas, the first edition of which appeared in 1683; the second edition not earlier than 1719 was dedicated to the Earl of Shelburne. The accompanying map is from the former edition, barony boundaries, parish names and those of most places in the Book of S. & D. being there exhibited. Petty had full access to the Strafford maps and books and it is to be inferred that the Connacht sections of his Atlas were compiled from these. For the study of the present text the map will be found a useful adjunct.

The Commission has also made available through the good office of the National Library three further maps of Petty, dated 1657, of the Liberties of Galway and Athenry and of 'Loughrea Town and Townland Parish of Loughreagh.' The two former derive from the Q.R.O. collection, now in the P.R.O.I., and are accompanied by terriers descriptive—on civil survey lines—of persons and places, thus supplementing considerably the present text; the Loughrea parish map we owe to the courtesy of Dr. T. D. O'Farrell, who very kindly allowed the certified copy obtained from the P.R.O.I. by his father, in 1918, to be photographed. With specially prepared index sheet these maps and terriers have been superimposed on the six-inch O.S. maps, now lodged in the National Library, where photostat copies may be obtained at a moderate charge. The superimposition, including index sheet, has been made by Mr. Robert Johnston, formerly of the Ordnance Survey.

The references in the present volume to the Galway Liberties occur at pp. 72, 73 and 243 of the printed text; to those of Athenry at p. 327; the parish of Loughrea is likewise returned at p. 330 of the printed text.

The text in correspondence with the original volume is divided into two parts, the first containing eight baronies, representing vol. ix in the Quit Rent Office series, and the second, vol. x, nine baronies. In territorial returns of this wide range—approximately a million and a half acres, statute, are represented—it is an advantage to find some measure of territorial sequence regarding the contiguity of the extensive units surveyed, particularly when these are the constituents of some notable or historic region. This is happily the circumstance in Part I with regard to Iar Connacht where the texts of the territories forming Conmaicne Mara and Partraighe follow close on each other, with one exception; this is the intrusion between the baronies of Ross and Moycullen of that of Kiltartan, a member of the group of baronies forming what was known as the “Clanrickarde country.” There is a further agreeable feature in Part I in so far as it includes the barony of Clare—another limb of Clanrickarde—which means that in conjunction with Moycullen, the lands and the owners, old and new, on both the eastern and western shores of Loch Corrib and its islands, may readily be perceived. Indeed, this also applies to the northern and southern boundaries of Orbsen, the venerable name of the lake, through the medium of other baronies.

For some reason which is not apparent, the barony of Ballynahinch with which the text opens is returned in two sections of Part I, two parishes being included in each, the first containing Moyrus (p. 1) and Omev (p. 8) and the second the parishes of Ballynakill (p. 23) and Ballindown (p. 31). It is known from one of the early documents relating to the division of Connacht that Ballynahinch barony contained the “two Connemaras.” Hardiman (I.C. p. 92) has noted that for a long period the barony was divided into two half-baronies which were separated by the Owenglin river falling into the harbour of Ardbear. If the purpose of the text was to represent this division, then we should expect to find the alignment of Ballynakill and Omev to the north, and Moyrus and Ballindown in the south. Hardiman, no doubt, had authority to support his statement, but he does not quote it; it is certainly not confirmed by documents reciting the creation of Connacht baronies. In these picturesque and mountainous regions, parishes were of great extent, Moyrus containing over one hundred thousand statute acres, and it is not unlikely that the compilers of the Book of S. & D. followed the order of the parishes as they appeared in the measurers’ or other books of the original survey. It is interesting to find the “Twelve Mountains” or “Twelve Pins” of Bunnabeola returned on p. 3 (Part I) with the names of their owners before and after confiscation.

Similarly, the text for the barony of Ross is divided. It first appears (p. 14) between the two sections of Ballynahinch and is resumed (p. 39) immediately after the barony of Arran. Part of historic Cong in Ross appears at p. 20; the remainder was published in the Commission’s volume for Mayo (p. 40) in this series.

Hy Many is entered in Part II, though Part I includes a stepping-stone by its inclusion of former O’Kelly territory represented by the barony of Kilconnell. The text provides baronial proximity in its sequence of the northern regions of Ballymoe and Tiaquin, though to a limited extent, for here again division occurs, the latter barony being returned in divided sections at pages 18 and 170; Longford and Leitrim beside, respectively, the Shannon and Lough Derg, are adjoining baronies and happily they appear in this order—as likewise, to the south of the county, do Athenry and Loughrea. Geographically, Dunkellin barony, lying south, is remote from Killian in the east, though in the text they follow on one another; similarly Dunmore barony in the north appears between baronies located in the east and south of the county. Thus while there are examples of proximity of territorial regions in the arrangement of the text, it cannot be said to have been the governing consideration of the compilers.

A preliminary reference also to parishes and indexes may be made here.

In the modern arrangement many parishes extend into two baronies, some into three, and at least one into four. For guidance, a list (Appendix B.) of all such parishes has been compiled, and it is recommended, for reasons to be given later, that this list should always be consulted in addition to the parochial tables of contents preceding each barony. The latter were made for official use and are not part of the original text. A general index (Appendix A) will be found at the end of this introduction.

The textual indexes of lands preceding Parts I and II are based on the distinct pagination of the respective sections. The page at the opening of the text in Part II, though blank in the original, is numbered 1.

Unaccountably, the names of the proprietors in 1641 are not forthcoming for the whole barony of Ballymoe, nor for part of Tiaquin, both in Part II. The absence of this important feature is mitigated, however, by the survival in the Carew MSS. of a valuable document, though some years earlier in date, which is enlightening in this connection. It may be said to constitute a book of the Gaelic territorial distribution of Connacht and Clare in the year 1574 and thus calls for particular notice.

The creation of a barony was an event of the utmost significance and importance. It implied surrender, compromise, and the acceptance for the purpose of an imposed administration of a new topographical nomenclature for the old and living names of divisions and subdivisions of ancient units of Gaelic government; and, much more and much deeper, the required abandonment of Irish ways and customs and the introduction of the feudal system. It took the administrations of successive lord deputies, aided by an avenging sword, to create a Connacht barony.⁸

What has yet, however, to be conclusively determined is whether when the western province was first divided into the counties of Connacht and Roscommon baronial divisions had been created; according to Hardiman names of sheriffs were to be found in records as far back as Henry III (H.G. p. 99). Sir Henry Sydney when reporting to the Privy Council his division of 'Connaught', 28 April, 1576, does not refer to any pre-existing baronial arrangement.⁹ It could well be that a document of the year 1574 was enclosed by Sydney in his report; this presents the names of baronies "now appointed" without reference to any such pre-existing divisions. On the contrary, the introductory statement to this division as it affected the proposed county of Galway refers to it as containing the countries of "Clanrickard, Imany by west the Suck, Syllanchy, Jeher Conaght, Clanconway and Cerkomoe." These were to be divided into fifteen baronies but this plan did not materialise until 1585, the year of the Composition. It is this document to which it is desired to call attention and of which only one complete section has to our knowledge been published, but this happily is for the county Galway, and will be found in the first volume of the Journal of the Galway Archaeological and Historical Society, pp. 110-123. The baronies of Clare,

⁸ "The baronies appear to have been formed successively in consequence of the submissions of the Irish chiefs or captains who ruled over them, the territory of each constituting a barony. This may, in some measure, account for the extreme inequality of size between those divisions of subordinate jurisdiction and the manner in which parts of many of them are intermixed among each other." Moycullen and Ross were printed by Hardiman (I.C. pp. 25, 44, 148)'

Its importance in relation to the present text, particularly the baronies of Ballymoe and Tiaquin, may be gathered from a brief synopsis. For each proposed barony there is a specification in the first column of the names of the Irish countries of which it was to be formed, the names of the respective chieftains or overlords, the length and breadth of the proposed barony and the number of ploughlands; then follow names of parishes and finally in the third and fourth columns the names of the "Gentlemen" and likewise the names of their castles. It is from this document I have taken particulars which will bridge in some measure, I hope, the gaps for the freeholders in the two baronies specified.¹⁰ Hardiman, it may be added, held this source of exceptional importance: "Much of the topographical information contained in this document could not be procured elsewhere at the present day." With the exception he mentions in his reference to Moycullen, "all the castles are now in ruins." (I.C. p. 252)

Neither Ross nor Clonmacnawen baronies are included in this division for the reason that the former had been allocated to Mayo, and the latter, being then but a subdivision of Moycarn (Roscommon) had not as yet received baronial definition. As we have seen in the Mayo Book of S. & D. (p. xxxiii), Ross was restored to Galway by the lord deputy Fitzwilliam. We get a glimpse of the over-lord of this region, adjoining the western shores of Lough Mask, in a letter to Walsingham in 1585 by John Browne the well-known map-maker: "Since I sent to your Honour the platts [maps or plans] of Athenry and Galway I have bestowed some time to describe the county Mayo. . . . Neither have I been in the barony of Ross. . . . Yet Sir Moro-ne-doe [Sir Murrough na dtuadh O Flaherty] doth hold it from Mac William and taketh it as part of his county. He, while Sir Nicholas Malby lived, would not come to him nor would suffer no officer to come in his country; but Sir Richard Bingham doth keep another course with him . . ." ¹¹

It is necessary here to correct a statement made by Colonel J. P. Nolan, M.P., who presented to the Galway Archaeological and Historical Society a copy of the 1574 "Division." In an extremely brief note of introduction he states: "The date of the annexed list is 1574. . . Hardiman dubs it a 1585 list and refers it to the Titus Manuscripts. I could not discover the list in the Titus Manuscripts, British Museum, but found it in the Carew Mss. of Lambeth Palace. In his Iar-Connaught, Hardiman has published three baronies only . . . The supposed 1585 and this 1574 list are identical and are not two independent enumerations." ¹²

This is incorrect. In the catalogue of Manuscripts in the Cottonian collection, Titus B, XIII p. 555 there is the following entry: "154. A division of the province of Connaught into counties and baronies with notes of castles thereon 1586 (399)." This document, of which the Director of the National Library has kindly provided a photostat, proves conclusively that there were two distinct documents. The descriptions of both are similar save that in the 1586 return only "such special castles as are worth the writing" are described. On collation with the 1574 division it is found that for example the castle of "Carbery McEgan and the Judges of Dunery" were not within this category; nor had the author any time for parishes, none of which are specified. Otherwise in format there is substantial agreement between the two texts. In the left-hand corner of the later text there is this note: "Richard Bingham Chiefe (? Comr. and Govr.) in Conoght (? for whom) this was written."

Hardiman, it is true, gave the wrong reference, but this slip was doubtless due to the identity of the titles of both documents.

It may well be enquired why the Judges of Dun Doighre (now Duniry) should have been eliminated in the Bingham document. The present text is strongly suggestive of the decline in fortune which had befallen the historic residence from whence had come the celebrated Leabhar Breac or Speckled Book of the Mac Egans, now preserved in the R.I.A. O'Donovan records that in his time traces of the ruins of their house, which tradition said was a college, were still pointed out.¹³ At page 73 (Part II) of the present text, within the barony of Leitrim and parish of Duniry, at the denomination of Tamplebannogh appears the name "Patrick Mc Kegan" recte Mac Egan, as the proprietor in 1641 of $\frac{3}{5}$ ths of a cartron! While there is no reference to a house or college, the adjoining denomination is "Ballineskull," which is rendered Ballyscully in the Index of Townlands! It will be observed that a double confiscation was suffered at Tamplebannogh after 1641 and after 1689. "Donerie" had long been the estate of the earls of Clanrickard; it also adjoins these lands.

Here we may illustrate the importance of the 1574 document where our text is deficient. There, another residence of the Mac Egans is indicated at "Parke" in the barony of Tiaquin, north-east of Tuam; this was also eliminated by Bingham; all our text shows at p. 20 (Part II) is that it was confiscated in the interests of "Connaught purchasers" whose names are specified.

The present text indicates a further Mac Egan estate at p. 283 (Part II) parish of Kiltesskill, barony of Loughrea, to which particular attention is called. The entry is "Mellaghlin oge McChosney Mc Brehooone" whose lands are rendered "Ballegnockan." This apparently has been equated in the Index of Townlands as "Ballyknock." I suggest that a transposition of syllables was made here at some time, and that the correct form should be Ballyknockegan. Cosney, as O'Donovan shows, was a first name in the Ormond Branch.¹⁴

In the hope that the whole of the 1574 document may be published, and in the knowledge that land in those days followed the castles—there are approximately 270 returned for Galway county alone—no more need be said by way of recommendation. But it may be noted here that in Clare barony there were 33, in Moycullen 20, and in Ballynahinch 7, the greatest numbers being located in the eastern and southern sections of the county. The links with the present text may well therefore be expected to be numerous, and I may mention two before leaving this valuable document. In Ballynahinch "Donell Ecowga" (O Flaherty) "gentleman," is shown as the proprietor of the castle of "Bonowyn" (Bunowen).¹⁵ In our present text (p. 31, part I) "Murrough O Flaherty, esquire, and his mother" appear as the owners with the added information that on this quarter there stood a "Castle, a Church and a little mill." A transplanter from Westmeath became the new proprietor. Though this castle too was eliminated by Bingham, it is the first of the castles to be met in our text. In Moycullen there was another O Flaherty castle which the 1574 document (p. 115) shows to have been held by Rory O Flaherty and whom the editor states was the grandfather of the author of Ogygia. Though also eliminated by Bingham, it is interesting to find this reference (p. 119-Part I) in the Book of S. & D: "Leater and Mallan . . . with divers parcels of arable digged with spades with a little castle in reasonable repair and a new house with stone walls." It was possessed in 1641 by Ervan (? Urumhan) O Flaherty, later becoming the estate of a Galway transplanter, "Stephen Lynch."

A final word concerning the provenance of the 1574 document—I suggest that it is a copy or abstract of the "Books of Division" believed no longer to be extant, kept by Sir Edward Fitton, a former president of Connacht, and referred to in Walsingham's instructions to Malby (I.C. p. 304).

* * *

In the protracted negotiations for the division of the province, "submission" was the obstacle throughout Connacht. There had been Sydney's eloquence, when he thundered to the chieftains that the very root and origin of their ruin was the uncertain grant and unstable possession of their lands, Bingham's cruelty for which he was brought to trial and imprisonment, and lastly Sir John Perrott's benevolence which led to the conclusion of the "Composition of Connaught" in 1585 (I.C. p. 299). The skilful manner in which the baronies were defined in the Indentures, which read more like treaties than deeds, is reflected in the association of overlords with freeholders, and both as parties, with Church and State, signifying a unifying agreement and recognition as to their respective landed interests, the "consideration," for the promises made by the State, being the abolition "of all Irish authorities, jurisdictions and customs." The baronies were defined thus:

The territory of the O Flaherties called Ireconoght is divided into four baronies, Moycullen, Ballynahinch, Ross, and Aran" (C.C. p. 54).

The territory of Imany called O Kellyes country is divided into five principal baronies. Athlone (Co. Roscommon), Kilconnell, Tiaquin, Killian and Moycarn (Co. Galway and Roscommon).

The territory of Clanrickard is divided into six principal baronies, Loughrea, Kiltartan, Clare, Dunkellin, Athenry and Leitrim.

And so on for the rest of the county, the particulars being given in the Commission's volume.

These "Indentures" prepared the way for the titles—unenrolled, it has been said, at the instance of Sir Charles Coote—of most of the persons returned in the '1641' column of the Book of S. & D., and which may be consulted in the Calendar of Patent Rolls, James I. They have therefore an important bearing on the present text not only in regard to their definition of its baronies, but, negatively, in respect of lands which such documents did not include. These matters call for a brief notice here.

Before the Composition could become effective, Connacht had first to be pacified. It was followed by a rebellion and it has only to be stated that, while there were many O Flaherties parties to their particular Indenture, not one of them executed it save Sir Morrough (C.C. p. 54). Later, Sir Morrough himself joined in the rebellion and having suffered great losses, surrendered; he was pardoned on his promise to make peace—which he did. For his action in this he received a prodigious grant of lands throughout the new baronies representing Iar-Connacht. It is dated 12 January, 1587-8; (Elizabethan Fiants, 5121). "This was an extensive grant or in the language of the day 'a sweeping one' for Sir Morrough had no territorial rights whatever beyond his paternal inheritance of Gnomore. But such grants were common in Ireland. Many extraordinary incidents of the kind are recorded particularly in the 16th and 17th centuries." (I.C. p. 395).

It may be recalled that in the 'Indenture of Ireconnaught' the prospective grantees of the Crown were to hold their lands by knight's service of the Queen's castle of Arkynne (Aircin) in the great island of Arran. Here in 1565 the O'Flaherties had supplanted the O'Briens who had for many centuries possessed the isles. Before this, however, from about 1561, the Elizabethan Fiants show that the Crown was tip-toeing into Arran with either leases of land of ruined churches or to enable the wardens of Galway to send godly ministers to preach the Gospel. Some years after the Composition the isles were given to John Rawson, who in an enrolled instrument dated 5th June, 1594, is called "an industrious discoverer of lands for the Queen." (I.C. p. 78). This Rawson, whom the Fiants indicate to have been a soldier, was joined with one Henry Deane, gentleman, in a twenty-one years lease, 16 February, 1594, of numerous lands in Galway and other counties; the lands so leased are described as those "of traitors, of persons attainted or slain in rebellion" and of lands of religious houses such as Annaghdown abbey in the barony of Moycullen. It is added: "All the premises were concealed and detained from the Queen's hands until by the industry and at the cost of the lessees they were found to belong to her" (Eliz. Fiants, 5865).

Such sources should therefore be collated and it may be noted that while the foregoing Fiant refers to abbey lands in Moycullen barony, the present text at Clare barony (pp. 180-9) sets out numerous lands described as "Revenues of the Abbey of Annaghdowne." The links between the present text and the discoveries of concealed lands not included in the Indentures of Composition should provide material for an interesting thesis.

It is an unusual experience to find in the Books of S. & D. the same parish returned in two different counties, and in two different baronies, derived from different sources at different periods. The text provides an example of this, but first, regard must be had to the boundaries of Galway county which were defined in 1607, over twenty years after the Composition. Of the Inquisition an abstract is printed (H.G. p. 99) from which are learned the reasons for including the barony of Ross within the Galway county boundaries. At the original shiring, Ross had been included in Mayo, but upon consideration that the territory was subject "to the cutting and spending of the O Flaherties upon whom the Joyes (who inhabited the barony) depended" and to the fact that it was some times doubly charged as part of either county, it was united and joined to Galway. In parenthesis a considerable part of Ross barony was re-transferred to Mayo under the Local Government Act of 1898. (For further transfers and changes in Galway boundaries see my note at end of Appendix B.) It is at the end of the Inquisition and at the end of the meare of the county the dualistic parish is included: "and so retheyneing the stream, it goeth under the middle arche of the middle bridge of Ballinasloe, and from thence with the course of the stream it falleth into the Sheanon, and going out of the same into the river of Brossnagh (there are two Brossnaghs, thro which meareth Sir John McCoghlan's country, on that side from the barony of Longford, and the other which falleth between Ormond and the south side of the barony of Longford into the Sheanon) and so from the Brossnagh of Macoglan's country to Bungowlane, and so to Meanaghbegg where wee began." And so defined, the bounds of Galway county extended east of the Shannon including the parish of Lusmagh later to be assigned to the barony of Garrycastle, King's county (Offaly). Here the inquisitors were adhering to the traditional boundaries of the territory of a former ruling family—the O'Maddens of Siol Anmachadha (Silanchia), equated with the barony of Longford, which appears at p. 26 (Part II) of the present text. This explains the inclusion at pp. 58-61 of the parish of Lusmagh, derived from the Strafford Survey. Since the same parish is included in the Book of S. & D. for King's county (Offaly) derived from the Civil Survey of 1654-56, material for collation is available.

The inquisition of 1607 did not pass unchallenged in regard to lands which the earl of Thomond claimed as belonging to Clare county. These were "Ballynrowand, Kilbratry and Ballyshannoyhe" which will be found specified here at pp. 101, 103 and 104 (Part II) in the barony of Leitrim. The inquisitors, however, were adamant, maintaining "that being beyond the memory of man, these lands were held by the earls of Clanrickarde, and by them set for rent to the Clanshides, a sept of the MacNamaras who upon discontent, came thither to dwell." In this last connection reference should be made to p. 105 (Part II.) of the present text where Donnell McConMara is returned as joint owner with Redmond Bourke of lands which it will be noted were "past in the county of Clare," by a different name, after the Restoration, to the Earl of Ossory. Close to this entry is that of the name of Shane McMickenn and on p. 97 "Clan Mc Shaene proprietor" is shown in respect of a great mountain.

Hubbert Mc Shane Bourke appears in the vicinity (p. 100 Part II). Other areas in controversy as to county location are indicated by the present text, as for example, at p. 62 (Part I).

Lusmagh, in the barony of Longford (p. 26, Part II) leads to earlier documents closely relevant to the present text in relation to the territory of Hy Many, published by the Commission. First it may be recalled that this barony was accorded a distinct Indenture at the time of the Composition; it differed from other indentures in so far as while it specified the alias "Shellminghy" (Sylanchia) for Longford barony, the usual family or personal ascription is wanting in the body of the Indenture, viz., "O Madden's country," though the deed is so captioned. The first region there mentioned is Lusmagh. It has been considered that it was at this time, 1585, that what had survived (after the de Burgo acquisitions) of the ancient Hy Many had suffered a further reduction and limitation.¹⁶ The references, however, to 'Omany' and 'Lusmach' in numerous Ormond deeds, printed in the first volume of the series published by the Irish Manuscripts Commission and edited by the late Professor Edmund Curtis, justify reconsideration of the matter. At the deed No. 259 Curtis gives this note: "In 1253 Sir Richard de Rupella had a grant of Omany or Hy Many, namely O'Kelly's country, one of the "Five Cantreds" of the King reserved by Henry III when the remaining twenty-five were given to Richard de Burgo. It consisted of something more than the baronies of Kilconnell and Clonmacnowen, county Galway and Moycarn, county Roscommon." This reference is given in respect of a deed dated between (1281-1285) and by which Philip de Rupella granted to Sir Theobald le Botiller and his heirs for ever "the cantred of Omany in Connacht"; Lusmagh, as a distinct entity, was also included, but what particular regions 'Omany' of this deed represented are not specified unless Curtis assumed they were the same as specified in his note. The document No. 420, dated April 7, 1308, to which particular attention is called is an "Indenture of military retainer and payment therefor made between Edmund le Botiller and Sir William son of William de Burgo." It contains this clause: "And it is agreed that Sir William shall assure to O'Madechan (O'Madden) his lease of the land of Lusmauth which he had from the same Edmund, unless by law or right he shall be expelled from the lease so granted to him, either by Sir Edmund or Sir William. This suggests an encroachment on what was left of Hy Many long before 1585 and representing approximately nine thousand statute acres. It also raises the question of further leases to O'Madden west of the Shannon, and may explain the reason for a separate Indenture of the barony of Longford and its exclusion from that of Hy Many. In fairness to O'Donovan, who thought the disjoining had taken place in 1585, it need scarcely be recalled that the Ormond deeds were not available to him in the convenient form the Commission has presented them to students of to-day. In his Tribes and Customs he has provided the ancient boundaries with a map.

The view expressed in one or other of my introductions to the Civil Survey (1654-56) that parishes were then utilized documentarily as civil units for the first time must be reviewed in the light of the Strafford documentations; a reservation may then have been made as regards Connacht and Clare, however true it was regarding the rest of the country. Indeed the employment of the parish would seem to have entered the official mind much earlier still and of which we have evidence in the 1574 document of 'division' to which reference has already been made. Collation with that document has shown that in some instances there is close agreement between it and the present text, but in others considerable disparity. For example, seven of the nine parishes of Ballymoe barony of the Book of S. & D. are returned in the 1574 list; one of the two missing, Dunmore, is however, returned in the adjoining barony of the same name; the other, Drumatemple, may have been returned in the adjoining county of Roscommon for which the text is not at the moment available. In Clare barony, however, there is considerable difference, only a third of the parishes set out in the Book of S. & D. being returned.

A feature of the parochial specifications of the present text is the "controversies" which are recorded in regard to the location of lands. The three parishes of Lackagh, Kilmoylan, and Annaghdown, for example, "made claim" to lands returned at p. 168 (Part I). In the same barony Clare, at p. 171 there is half a parish left, as it were, in the air: "Grange 6 Quarters being abbey lands of the abbey of Knockmoy. These 6 quarters are counted half a parish by itself." The name 'Grange' is significant of Cistercian interests, and we leave it at that. Other instances illustrative of the text may be noticed. At p. 63 (Part II) parish of Tynagh, Longford barony, there is this note: "Clonepreisk and Gortenery being of the parish of Dunery and measured in this book"—presumably that of the measurer for the parish of Tynagh. These lands form the modern part parish of Duniry in Longford barony, the remainder of the parish being in that of Leitrim, but the introductory list of parishes, provided by the text, to Longford barony, makes no reference to any part of the parish of Duniry being contained in the barony.

It will be observed in the text for Dunkellin barony (p. 108, Part II) that numerous lands are reported to belong not only to other parishes, but to other baronies, notably to Loughrea, Kiltartan and Athenry; these are adjoining baronies on the east and south of Dunkellin whose barony limits may not have been too clearly defined or understood. For example, at p. 135, Part II, parish of Kilchreest, Dunkellin, there is this reference: "Ballingarry 2 quarters, vizt. Cloghmoyle 1 quarter, and Gortroe 1 quarter—one of these quarters is in the parish of Kilconwickny in the half barony of Loughreagh." Ballingarry is included in the modern parish of Kilconickny, barony of Loughrea; reference to a map will show that Kilchreest was a border-line parish.

There are, however, instances where no such guidance is afforded, or if it is, to a very limited extent. In the Index of Townlands the parish of Killrerin is shown to extend into four baronies—Ballymoe, Clare, Dunmore and Tiaquin. This parish (Killrerin in the text) appears at p. 121 (Part I), barony of Clare, and save for one reference would appear to have then been regarded as wholly within that barony; at "Dangenoghter" (p. 127) there is this note: "Controversie cast up in Longford plot in the parish of Moylay." Quaere Moylough. Dangan Oughter is the name of a modern townland in the parish of Killrerin, barony of Tiaquin.

These references or annotations are so numerous that a list of the modern parishes situated in two or more baronies has been compiled and is appended to this introductory matter; this should afford a guide to baronies of the text in which constituents of parishes may be found, though not distinguished by a relevant caption—Appendix B. A consolidated alphabetical index of the clearly specified parishes is also added—Appendix A.

Some other items of parochial interest, illustrative of the text, may be noticed very briefly. On p. 29 of Ballynahinch barony: "A parcel of Glebeland whereon standeth the ruinous parish church of Ballinekille"; Kiltartan barony p. 59, at the lands of Beagh, "All good arable containing the parish church"; Kilconnell barony, p. 223, "Fohinagh . . . whereof stands the parish church." Erasmus Spillman (? Spelman) was the proprietor after the Restoration—all the foregoing are in Part I. In Part II, p. 253, parish of Athenry, "Carroward: Church land whereof the 2 churches stand"; p. 240. Kilrekill parish—"Coolcorchie of the parish of the Abby of Gormagan." Returning to Part I, there is a reference on p. 187 to "the ruinous walls of a little old chapel" at Caroontemple, in the parish of Annaghdown, and also at p. 191 to "the ruinous walls of a decayed chapel within which some burials have been lately made" and which stood on a small parcel of glebe.

All the properties where the foregoing were located were in lay hands in 1641 and later.

The last of the territorial units calling for reference is the "Denomination" or townland. It is at this unit will be learned that the text commands or invites a wider audience than that composed of historians, genealogists or philologists. The very land itself is here, and what is said of each of the thousands of denominations should prove as informative and interesting to the agricultural scientist and the expert in afforestation as to the intelligent farmer who may find confirmation of age-long tradition in his family. Such descriptions, not unfamiliar in Part I, as "all rocky stony pasture and arable in some places intermixt, $\frac{1}{4}$ whereof is stones and rocks merely unprofitable, $\frac{2}{3}$ may be allowed profitable" or land for "the most part bush and good shrubby pasture" to "good arable land" and land "good for pasturable sheep," with the striking sub-divisions segregating the unprofitable from the profitable, all recall the similar features presented in the volumes of the Civil Survey of 1654-56 for other counties. The record of the existing woods—the "great woods" the "tall woods" the "oak woods" is valuable.

and their description will be found in many baronies.¹⁷ In view of the order given some years later by the Commonwealth government in 1656, to stop the "disposure" of wood for making of pipe-staves, barrel-staves and hogshead-staves, one reason for the desire to acquire land in Galway is explained.¹⁸ Likewise mills are reported in both parts of the text and a tucking-mill in Clare barony.¹⁹ Unexpected observations, too, will be met and in the descriptions of the mountains it is observed in one instance that it was "without any dwelling."

It is at this unit, too, we find the old land-measures—the quarter and the cartron. As regards trines, this ancient land-measure enters into numerous place-names in the baronies of Moycullen and Clare (Part I) and in the baronies of Ballymoe, Dunkellin and Tiaquin (Part II). This land-measure—instances of its equation will be found in the Mayo Book of S. & D.—does not appear in either Reeves, or in Larcom's Carew Ms.²⁰ The latter states: "In Connoght all land-measures are called quarters and cartrons, a quarter containing 4 cartrons, every cartron 30 acres," Reeves wrote that in Connacht "the prevailing distribution was into townlands of vague import; quarters the fourth part of the former, cartron the fourth of a quarter . . ."

While the lands in the present text are expressed in both quarters and cartrons, the admeasured acreages vary so frequently as to render equations impossible. Knox gives this explanation: "The quarter of 120 acres was at this time (Composition of Connacht, 1585) an uncertain quantity, a measure of value, not of actual acreage. Estates or denominations of land were estimated as containing so many quarters, meaning that their arable and pasture were equal in value to so many quarters of 120 acres of standard land."²¹ There is indeed an example in the present text where the land was "esteemed to be a quarter." It may also be noted that at the time of the Composition it was recommended in regard to the assessment of rent that in particular instances 4 quarters should be treated as one quarter of 120 acres owing to the poverty of the country.

O'Donovan points out "that there are few if any townlands now so extensive as the ancient Irish ballybetaghs, thirty of which made a triocho chead, or 120 quarters, and that the denominations of land in modern times called townlands are generally quarters of the ancient ballybetaghs."²² On the basis of four quarters comprising a ballybetagh, as here indicated, the present text describes some denominations as consisting of "4 Quarters," as for example, "Poblemunterfahy" at p. 284 (Part II). Through the technique of superimposition some Galway ballybetaghs should be capable of determination.

In his notice of ancient Irish townlands, written for Sir William Petty's Atlas, the Rev. John Keogh, author of the Irish Herbal, having admitted his inability to provide an acreable equation for the quarter continues: "I have also busied myself . . . to enquire what town or general denomination each quarter belonged to . . . but there in I could not meet with satisfaction, it being a thing forgotten since the days of yore . . ."²³

The memory was better in Galway, as evidenced by the present text. In Clare barony (Part I, pp. 122-130) numerous denominations of one quarter each are recorded as "belonging to" either the "Town of Ballenderge," the "Town of Dangen" or the "Town of Ballenagh." Thus remnants of ancient territorial distribution have been preserved in this Book of S. & D.

* * *

Though not in the same category of territorial distribution, lands belonging to abbeys constitute another striking feature of the townland unit. In Clare barony, for example, will be found specified the respective individual denominations recited as the former possessions of the following abbeys, thus named: Trinity (Tuam), Knockmoy, Kilnamannagh, Clare and Annaghdown; at the last named, which we have already indicated in another connection, the lands are described "as parcels of the revenue of the Abbathy." An abbey of St. Francis comes into view at "Ilandbraher at the mouth of the Lough"—Corrib (p. 108), while a possession of Cong—"Islandacrunny" emerges in Ballynahinch (p. 30). It will be found, however, that frequently a denomination is simply described as "Abbeyland" without ascription to any particular religious house. Thus while in Dunmore barony, the abbey of that name is given (p. 213, Part II) in respect of certain possessions, there are numerous "Abbey Lands" just described as such, without allocation to previous ownership. The text, on the whole, therefore, should be found helpful in determining the estates of religious houses.

²² The Gen. Tr. and Customs Hy-Fiachrach: p. 453.

²³ Printed by O'Donovan, op. cit., p. 453.

In this connection material which is available for collation with our text will be found in the Calendar of Patent Rolls, James I. For another important reason it is necessary to refer to the grant there printed, to Richard earl of Clanrickard in 1610. At p. 178 begins a list of lands of former specified religious houses, thirteen in all. For the most part, the houses are described in the patent, each being introduced either as "the late priory," "monastery" or "friary." Some are more definitely particularized as "the monastery of St. John the Baptist in Tuam," the "abbey of St. Francis in Portumna," the "Carmelite friary of Balliloghreagh".

First it may be noted that the volume of Extents of Irish Monastic Possessions, 1540-41, published by the Manuscripts Commission, does not include Galway, and consequently the description of the premises conveyed to the earl of Clanrickarde is of importance. We quote two examples :

"The late monastery or friary of Balleclare, with the site, church, and church-yard, 6 cottages and gardens, 24 acres arable, common of pasture for 24 cows on the commons yearly, and a waste water-mill in Ballenclare; rent £1:5:4." One other illustration of the details: "The Carmelite friary of Balliloghreagh with the site, church, church-yard, 7 cottages, 3 gardens and 5 acres arable in Loghreagh—a chief rent of 12 pence out of a house in the tenure of Thomas Colman, out of James Font's house, 2 shillings out of another house of Thomas Colman, 12 pence."

Unfortunately, there is no introduction to the Calendar of Patent Rolls, James I—one could still be written by way of postscript—or we might have learned the particular source from which the foregoing details were derived. Elsewhere in the patent the earl is given all advowsons and rights of patronage of all rectories, vicarages, chapels and prebends in the territories of Clanrickard and Dunkellin "which had belonged to King Henry VIII or were in the King's gift"; he was also granted a rent of 13/4 out of every quarter of land in Dunkellin "excepting those quarters reserved to Queen Elizabeth and the lords spiritual by the Composition." Obviously the patent was framed in the light of the records of the Religious Revolution, and of the Composition of 1585, and I suggest that the particulars of which two examples have been quoted are reproductions of the monastic "extents" or other inquisitions taken at the time. The similarity in the descriptions of the possessions to those of the monastic "extents," printed in the Commission's volume, suggest this source, and that the position is retrospective as to the premises at the date of the patent.

The territorial units of this Book of S. & D. having thus been very briefly noticed, we may, before passing to the final phases, glance at the inter-racial progress and recession over the centuries so concisely reported by a Vice-President of Connacht, Sir Oliver St. John in his description of the province in 1614.²⁴ Between 1216 and 1272 had been conquered, he tells us, the O'Heynes, and the O'Shaughnessys towards Thomond, the O'Kellies, O'Maddens and O'Connors towards the east, and some places as far and beyond the river of Suck. "From thence they carried [John and Richard de Burgo] their conquest onward . . . leaving on their left hand the O'Flaherties, the O'Mayles and the Joyes by reason of the strength and desertness of their countries. All this conquered land Richard de Burgo held as a sovereign lordship, allotting great portions of land to those that assisted him in his conquest which ever since have continued in their posterity. . . . The residue he retained to himself." Having described the O'Connors, the O'Connor Dun, and O'Connor Roe, as "ancient English lords," who had preserved for themselves the residue of Connacht, he proceeds to review, or rather to point out, the existing conditions of various families: "The O'Heynes were almost utterly banished; the O'Shaughnessys remain a rich and able family; the O'Maddens retain a vast country near the Shannon called Syllanchie, where they continue but a weak and poor family; the O'Kellies retained a large country called Imanny from within 15 miles of Galway to the Shannon and still possess the most part of it; the O'Flaherties retained the country of Eyre Connaught west from Galway along the bay of Galway to the sea." The significance of this description is indicated by the introduction of the naval advantages of Galway bay and the naming of the many fords of the Shannon "needful to be known in times of trouble and rebellion"—calamities indeed which were not so many years ahead.

The introduction (pp. v-xxxii), which is a reprint of that appearing in the first volume of this series, explains the origin and purpose of the Books of S. & D. as a whole; it summarizes the legislation authorizing their compilation and indicates the various sources from which the texts were derived. For most counties these consisted of the Civil and Down Surveys plus the instruments of title of the grantees coming in under or confirmed by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, the enactments of William III and Anne. The distribution or right-hand side of the text includes the names of persons or institutions representative of this legislation who may be classified broadly in the present text as confirmed Commonwealth proprietors, persons restored, transplanter, "Connaught purchasers," discoverers, grantees of the Crown, notably the Duke of York, and purchasers from the Trustees of Forfeited estates 1703.

It need scarcely be recalled that Connacht and Clare had been disjointed from the rest of the country as reserved areas by Commonwealth laws. The well-known Act of August, 1652, began by excepting from pardon for either life or estate prominent persons who had proved disagreeable to the existing government. The Galway offenders were Ulick Bourke, earl of Clanrickarde, [Francis] Bermingham, baron of Athenry, Geoffrey Brown, and Patrick Darcy—these two well-known lawyers—Anthony Brabazon of Ballinasloe, Murrough ne Mart O'Flaherty Redmond Bourk of Kilceman, and Thomas Bourk of Anbally.

Many interesting documents and letters concerning the foregoing will be found in the Cal. of MSS., Ormonde New Series, vol. I. (1902). Clanrickarde, whose father had been created baron of Imany by Charles I, had acted as lord lieutenant of Ireland since 1650; like Ormond he, too, left the country, receiving a pass for this purpose in 1652.

Arrangements for the transplantation project occupied the next few years. Order followed upon order appointing commissioners and setting up courts for the hearing of claims and deciding qualifications. Those having right to favour and mercy were to transport themselves into Connacht and Clare before the 1st May, 1654. It was provided that proprietors of lands within that province and county should have due recompense in other lands, within these parts, for the value of lands assigned out of their estates to transplanter.²⁵ Interrogatories for the examination of witnesses regarding the conduct of land-owners during the war were provided.²⁶ Sir Charles Coote's offer to prove delinquency against "most of the persons" who had any considerable estates in Connacht was accepted.²⁷ To guide the commissioners at Loughrea an abstract of surveys was delivered to them.²⁸ The Lord President of Connacht, Sir Charles Coote, demanded in 1657 that the original Strafford survey should be sent to enable him to "pass a patent" of lands which he had bought from transplanter;²⁹ he was no doubt among the first of the "Connaught Purchasers."

The accommodation of transplanter from other provinces and counties was on a baronial basis. With the exception of Aran, all the Galway baronies were assigned in 1656 for the reception of "inhabitants" from other places. For "inhabitants" of Ulster, exclusive of those from Down and Antrim, the baronies of Tiaquin, Moycullen, Ross and Ballynahinch were provided, exclusive of what was reserved by the line of the sea; to the "inhabitants" of Cork and Wexford fell the baronies of Clare, Dunkellin and Kiltartan, the line of the sea being again reserved; to those of Kilkenny, Westmeath, Longford, King's county and Tipperary was allotted the barony of Ballymoe; for the "inhabitants" of Carlow, Waterford and Limerick was provided the baronies of Loughrea, Leitrim, Dunmore, Kilconnell and Athenry; finally those of Louth and Wicklow were assigned the baronies of Killian, Clonmacnwen and Longford, excepting and reserving what was "in the line."³⁰

Hence in our present text, on the distribution side, will be found such names as Geoghegan, Wall, Bellew, Power, Netterville and so on.

The importance of the creation of baronies and the uses to which they could be applied, is thus exemplified; this is an outstanding item in their history.

It was to the "Council for the Affairs of Ireland" that the foregoing division was addressed, 12 February 1656, by its authors: Hardress Waller, Charles Coote, Robert King, William Jephson and Hierome Sankey who may be described, for the sake of brevity, as the "Concentration commissioners."²¹ They also then announced that the county of Sligo, part of the county of Mayo, the county of Leitrim and all lands within three miles of the sea and the Shannon had been reserved for disposal otherwise. The immediate distinguished prospective recipients of lands adjoining the two latter were Lord Henry Cromwell, Sir Charles Coote and "Doctor Seele for Dublin College."

To the reservations should be added so far as persons from beyond the Shannon were concerned, the considerable acreages decreed to the Galway landowners who had also become "transplanters," as likewise those of other counties within the ringed region. A well-known summary of their decrees is published in H. M. C. Reports, Ormonde MSS. vol. II, pp. 114-76 (1899) under the title "An Accompt of Lands set out to the Transplanted Irish in Connaught." It is a certified document at the hands of Thomas Eliot, Deputy-Surveyor-General, and includes the statement that upon search of the "Books of final settlements" it had been found that the lands set to the transplanted Irish in Connacht contained 717,000 Irish acres of 1,161,544 English acres. The acres decreed to transplanters within Connacht and Clare are included in this, a circumstance which historical statisticians should note. In this "Account" the county of origin, if not a fuller address, usually follows the name of the planter; three other items are furnished: "Date of decree: date of Final Settlement and the number of Acres decreed"; the years are 1656 and 1657.

The alphabetical arrangement of this return permits convenient perception as to how the Galway land-owners fared. Taking "B," some 366 decrees were issued to persons whose names began with this letter; of these 155 were in favour of Galway persons, and of this number 107 were in the names of Bourke and Burke. Thus, under this one letter alone, over 42% of the decrees were in favour of Galway claimants.

Furthermore, it was something more than cartrons or half-cartrons some of them obtained, thus Sir Ulick Bourke of Glinsk was decreed 3,630 acres, Sir Richard Blake 8,919 acres, Sir Thomas Blake 5,967 acres, Dominick Bodkin, 2093 acres. Elsewhere in this document Sir Dermot O'Shaughnessy is shown to have received 2871 acres, Roger O'Flaherty 1038 and John Lynch FitzJeffrey 2,491 acres.

Numerous decrees to Darcys included one of 3,291 acres to James Darcy of Kiltullagh and another to Patrick Darcy of the same place. The latter was presumably the distinguished advocate and the seventh son of James [Riveagh] Darcy, a former chief magistrate of Galway who died in 1603; his son James, also a barrister-at-law, settled the family estate on his first cousin James Darcy of "Killtolla" (I.C. p. 11). Patrick Darcy was not only Ormond's family lawyer, but also adviser to Ormonde's secretary, afterwards Sir George Lane, later Secretary at War, Clerk to the Star Chamber and Keeper of the Records in Bermingham Tower. One of Patrick Darcy's last contributions to government, before the arrival of Cromwell, was his recommendation to Lane of persons to whom should be granted the exercise of martial law: Lord Clanrickarde, Sir Roger O'Shaughnessy, Sir Ulick Burke and Sir Richard Blake.²²

The name Darcy, it may be added, is also rendered in the present text Dorcy, Dorsey and Dorseys; it will be found under these forms in the barony of Clare (p. 133 and 144, Part I). In his Irish Families (p. 111) Dr. Edward McLysaght states: "It has been proved by O'Donovan that the Darcys who became one of the Tribes of Galway were of true Gaelic stock, being descended from the O'Dorceys of Partry, co. Mayo." MacLysaght adds that the name was a corruption of the Gaelic Ó Dorchaidhe, first anglicised O'Dorsey.

A denomination of Kiltullagh "called Garriduffe" appears at p. 234 (Part II) barony of Athenry; this place was in the possession of "Donnell McSwinnie" as at 1641, but James Darcy appears as the owner post 1660.

An interesting feature of the "Accompt" referred to, suggestive of the vicissitudes of wars and of mortgagors

²¹ Idem, Doc. 786.

²² Cal. MSS., Ormonde, N.S. vol. I, p. 127.

and mortgagees, is the number of Galway persons described as "merchants", to whom lands were decreed, connoting, of course, that all of them were already estated people. In this category Alderman Bodkin had two decrees for nearly 3,000 acres; likewise John French Fitz Stephen obtained 2,209 acres. Alderman and burgesses of the Corporation likewise obtained considerable acreages—Alderman Edmond Kirwan 3,544, and Alderman James Reagh Darcy, 2157.

It would seem indeed that representatives of most Galway families had assembled in Loughrea and Athlone in those far-off days—O'Heynes, McEgans, O'Kellys, O'Lees and MacSweeneyes, but for the most part the areas decreed to them were small and in one instance as low as 4 acres.

The names of the lands so decreed were not specified in the "Accompt" nor indeed the baronies in which they were located. These particulars are, however, available from another source, namely a set of Distribution books, bearing the endorsement "Strafford Survey" in the Headfort collection, now in the P.R.O., Dublin. These books, which also relate to the counties Clare, Roscommon and Mayo, have already been extensively noticed in the first two volumes of this series; in format they are similar to the present text, except in respect of one feature of much interest. This is headed "To whom set out by final settlement." Collation of the names returned in this column with those of the "Accompt" prominently, if not originally, established that such names were those of the transplinters to whom lands had been set out, in "final settlement" by the Loughrea commissioners on the basis of the decrees of the Court of Athlone.

In some respects these Headfort books are incomplete and, in other, represent a mere abstract; the comprehensive descriptions, for example, given by the present text in regard to each denomination of land are wanting, the mere names of the townlands being specified. This uncertified compilation it is believed was at the hands of Thomas Taylor, ancestor of the Lords Headfort, who, it will be recalled, composed by the direction of the Earl of Essex the set now in the R.I.A. for the remaining twenty-eight counties. Authority for the compilation has not been found though it was comprehended by the Essex direction. We owe this set, it is thought, to the zeal of Thomas Taylor in the discovery of concealed lands, and it is not unlikely that his Transplinters' column was designed for the purpose of collation with the Restoration distribution.

Patient research should be illuminating as to what actually transpired in Galway county at the time. It will be recalled that in the baronial allotments no provision was made for the Connacht landowners. Were the landowners who had obtained decrees allowed to remain on their own estates or were they removed to other baronies or parishes? Instances we have examined show that some of them retained considerable portions of their estates, Sir Richard Blake, for example, and likewise James Darcy. Decrees in such instances revive the memory of the Elizabethan "Pardons" which did not necessarily imply that the recipient had been judged guilty of crime, but which had an indemnifying effect after a period of upheaval. But there are so many of these cases lending themselves to interesting investigation that we are apt to lose sight of the fate of the real transplanter who had to travel many miles to cross the Galway boundary.

By way of contrast the particulars given in the Headfort books in respect of transplinters from beyond the Shannon may briefly be noticed. Here, the names representative of one of the other provinces, or counties, is usually fairly obvious. For example, Edmond Fitzgerald is shown to have been decreed in 1656 lands of "Murtagh ne Mart O'Flahertie" and of "Dermot Mc Owen Mc Dermot O'Flaherty" in the parish of Moyrus, Ballynahinch. This was Edmond Fitzgerald of Ballymallow (Ballymaloe) of Imokilly, co. Cork, who had been given 1500 acres. His name does not appear in the present text by virtue of the fact that he was one of the persons whom a section of the Restoration Act of Settlement directed to be restored, without further proof, to his Cork estate. He was succeeded in his temporary Galway property by Sir Thomas Meredith and "Dublin College." But the framers of the section, in this instance, had not reckoned with discoverers who had provided a dramatic sequel while this transplanter was in Galway. They had found a flaw in Fitzgerald's title which achieved the distinction of receiving recognition in a section (133) of the Act of Explanation: "And whereas the right reverend father in God, Edward lord bishop of Cork, Cloyne and Ross, and Sir William Flower, knight, have been at great pains and charges in discovering of his Majestie's title to the premises, as well precedent to the forfeiture by the late rebellion as by reason and upon the account of the said rebellion. . . ." The clause then directed the issue to these gentlemen of a lease for 31 years "saving to Edmund Fitzgerald all such right and title as he had to his estate on the 21st October, 1641."

An item of outstanding interest must conclude our references to the historic entries in the Headfort book for Galway; it is the specification of the lands decreed to the Lieutenant and Governor-General of Ireland, Henry Cromwell. Though not mentioned in the "Accompt," as one would scarcely expect to find him, nevertheless Henry Cromwell's decree is set out in the column of "Final Settlements" for transplanters under the year 1656. The estate given to him was so far as Galway was concerned, located in Longford barony and comprehended numerous lands in the following parishes: Tiranascragh, Lickmolassy, Meelick and Clonfert. Excluding unprofitable land, the area granted amounted to 4,864 acres. The confiscated estates involved included properties of the O'Maddens, O'Horans, Coghlan and of the Earl of Clanrickarde. Henry Cromwell had likewise set out to him for his own and his father's arrears, 8,000 acres in Meath and a like quantity around Nenagh, Co. Tipperary. Elaborate arrangements were made at the Restoration for the protection of this estate and included a provision (sec. 224) in the Act of Settlement whereby all these lands were settled on several persons, namely Sir William Russell, Dr. Jonathan Goddard, a physician to the Cromwell family, and John Russell. Annexed to Cromwell's petition to the King, prefaced by his acquiescence in the Restoration, was a certificate that the lands he possessed in Ireland were in satisfaction of £12,000 in debentures.³² Henry Cromwell had not been treated as a regicide; he had close friends in Ormonde and, in, above all other supporters, Sir William Petty. Lord Lansdowne, whose books are models of frankness, relates in his Southwell Letters (p. 329) that Petty had been early connected with Henry Cromwell as his physician and "later on he was instrumental in preserving for Cromwell's family the lands which they had obtained in Ireland. There is amongst the manuscripts [at Bowood] a power of attorney given by Cromwell to Petty in 1661." Though offered Portumna house and park until his death, Henry Cromwell this declined "in deference to Lord Clanrickarde's better service."³⁴ His English estate was purchased, it has been stated, out of the proceeds of the sale of his Irish lands and in this connection it is observed that his successors in proprietorship over the parishes we have specified included the earls of Cork and Arran (pp. 31, 33 et seq. Part II, of the present text).³⁵

Apart, thus, from his personal association with Galway, Lord Henry Cromwell will always be remembered, notably by educationists, for the historic exemption, during his regime at Dublin Castle, of certain persons from transplantation to Connaught: "Order concerning Popish Schoolmasters to be transplanted into Connaught. The Council take into consideration that such persons corrupt the youth of this nation with popish principles. Such Schoolmasters are to be secured, and put on board of such ship as is bound for the islands of Barbadoes."³⁶

* * *

The sale of lands decreed to "Connaught Purchasers" is the subject of section 50 of the Act of Settlement. This directs that the lands so purchased by persons known as "Connaught Purchasers" whose names are specified should be confirmed unto them, their heirs and assigns. Many of these names appear frequently in the present text and are given here by way of explanation of their presence: Charles (Coote) earl of Mountrath—provost-marshal of Connaught and former chief commissioner for the transplantation proceedings, John, Lord Kingston, Richard, Lord Coote, baron of Coloony, Carey Dillon, Sir George Bingham, Sir Oliver St. George, Sir John Cole, Sir James Shaen, major Arthur Gore, Sir George St. George, Sir James Cuffe, John Eyres, Henry Waddington, Captain Robert Parks, Captain Robert Morgan and Captain Owen Lloyd.

But the Catalogue of Reports and Schedules addressed to the Restoration Court of Claims (Ir. Rec. Comm., vol. II) shows that more persons than those named in the Act claimed Galway lands as Connaught purchasers:

³⁴ Idem, p. 363.

³⁵ "To him (Lord Henry Cromwell) came the prince of all the land grabbers in Irish history, Boyle Earl of Cork and Orrery and proposed a deal . . . In 1659 Boyle bought Lord Henry Cromwell's interest . . . Nathaniel Hurd, Henry Ivers, William Knight, Thomas L'Estrange, Francis Matthews, Erasmus Spellman, Michael Stanley, Hector Vaughan, Henry and John Whaley. One of the new proprietors of Galway liberties (Part II, p. 133) bore this last name.

It will also help, by specifying them, to explain the presence of many more names in the present text; these come within the category of "Discoverers" and are drawn from the same Catalogue: Francis Foster, Samuel Foxon, Anthony French, George French, Carey Dillon—also a 'Purchaser'—Samuel Bull and Roger Jones. Bull was active in this capacity in other counties, but as regards Galway he worked in harness with Roger Jones as their patent indicates.

Thus was Connacht reserved for the Irish nation! It is little wonder that the Concentration Commissioners reported that the baronial arrangement for transplanners had broken down owing to the fact that the land available was exhausted.³⁷ Those who had been given Commonwealth decrees had to wait twenty long years in the wilderness of insecure titles and in the midst of ferreting Bulls and their species. No statement could be more explicit on the subject than that of Essex in 1676 when he appointed a Commission to examine the position in Connacht.³⁸ The Commissioners for executing the Acts of Settlement, he pointed out, had not by virtue of their commission, adjudicated on any of the claims of the transplanners, or to the settlement of their estates, excepting only the interests of such Protestants who before the 1st September, 1663, had purchased lands in Connacht or Clare; estates which were not so purchased remained subject to doubt and uncertainty whereby the improvements of the lands were hindered. Furthermore, continued the Lord Lieutenant, the transplanted persons who had been again dispossessed by virtue of the restoration of former owners had not been reprised as was intended by virtue of the King's declaration of November, 1660.

A classical example of this non-reprisal misfortune was the case of Patrick French of Monivea. This transplanter has already been noticed elsewhere,³⁹ but a word of clarification is here necessary. The denomination of "Monevahan," parish and barony of Athenry, appears at p. 251 (Part II) where Robert French is shown as proprietor in 1641, and Lord Trimleston, a transplanter from Meath, as his successor.

In July, 1656, Patrick French FitzRobert and Evelyn Browne "widow of the said Robert French" were removed from Monivea to the lands of Granard in the same parish of Athenry (p. 245); the decree was for 787 acres, but this may have included 'unprofitable' land. These lands were part of the Clanrickarde estate which, in due course, were restored to the earl, this involving the dispossession of Patrick French for the second time. In 1667, Matthias, the 8th Lord Trimleston was restored to his "capital house" in Dublin county, and to his lands in Meath, which were in possession of Captain Pepper, either as a soldier or an adventurer, but who could not be compelled to give up the estate until he was reprised in equally valuable property. In this connection, it is significant that in 1677 Robert, the ninth baron Trimleston was granted Monivea and other lands in Galway (I.R.C. vol. III, p. 242). The period, therefore, within which "Patrick French and his wife and daughters wandered about houseless until Lord Trimleston died at Monivea on 17th September, 1667" may have been of longer duration than that stated by Prendergast.

Attention may here be called to the fact that a parish of Monivea is not specified by the present text, but from investigations it has been found that lands at the time of the Strafford Survey, forming the parish of Athenry, later comprised those of Monivea; the first denomination at the beginning of the parish (p. 243, Part II) is "Abbot" a likely mistaken rendering of "Abbert" a former name of Monivea. The modern location of this parish is within the baronies of Clare, Kilconnell and Tiaquin.

As directed by Essex, a Commission was established and during the years 1676-7 issued to some 580 persons adjudications known as "Connaught Certificates." Except what may be contained in official papers or are the subject of reference in exceptional works such as MacLysaght's Short Study of a Transplanted Family,⁴⁰ the Irish Record Commissioners, indexes, confined to names of persons and lands, unfortunately unconsolidated, represent all that has survived of the "Connaught Certificates." But here the Galway names are easily detected, Gael and Norman, the latter easily preponderating; even so, and even if their allotments represented the crumbs exemplified by the present text, it is good historically and otherwise to see the names O'Heyne, O'Kelly, MacEgan, O'Madden, O'Mannin and others who had survived as landowners not only the sword, but the "Connaught Purchaser" and the "discoverer," as well the beneficiaries of the grace and favour of the Commonwealth and the Crown alike. These "Certificates," or what is left of them, are therefore an important guide to the present text, being, in most instances, the source of title as well for the many Bourkes and Burkes, Blakes and Bodkins, Lynchs and Kirwans, Martins and Skerretts who figure so prominently on the distribution side of the text.

Reserved from the jurisdiction of the Essex Connacht Commission of 1676 were such lands as had already been disposed of by the commissioners for executing the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. Regard will be had to what has already been stated at p. xiv et seq under the caption of "Restoration Instruments of Title." Here we will refer to the "Decrees of Innocence" and to some particular grants issued under the Acts.

First, however, it is desirable to refer to the figures given by Hardinge in his well-known paper on Surveys in Ireland as to the acreages profitable and unprofitable "admeasured as forfeited" in each of the Galway baronies.⁴¹ The basis of his calculations for the counties of other provinces was no doubt the Down Survey maps and terriers which clearly distinguished the forfeited lands and their acreages. But not so the Strafford maps which made no such distinction, comprehending all lands within each barony and parish. When preparing for publication the Roscommon volume in this series, I totalled the acreages in these categories and found almost complete agreement with the figures given by Hardinge for each barony. This indicated that his source was the same as mine, and that in reality his calculation represented the total of the land content in each of the various baronies. He felt warranted, no doubt, in the assumption that the whole of each of the Connaught and Clare counties had been forfeited by virtue of the allocation of the province and county for the future habitation of the Irish nation.

In the circumstances this was perhaps a pardonable assumption. But, as we have seen, it did not work out that way, Galway proprietors having compromised or complicated the project by obtaining decrees, and in some instances, for their own lands. In the sense we have indicated, Hardinge's figures may be correct for some baronies, but certainly not for all. Take Ross, for example, where he gives 3,010 acres as representing the profitable acres and 14,565 as unprofitable, the correct figures here are respectively 9,336 and 41,199. As we have already stated Ross barony is returned in two sections, the omission of one of which most likely led to this error. Ballynahinch is another example of probable confusion following on the division of the text; here the correct acreage in regard to profitable lands would appear to be 10,777, not 20,937 acres, and for unprofitable 94,807 and not 121,959 acres. There is, however, complete agreement with regard to the small barony of Arran.

The usual sources consulted for particulars of Decrees of Innocence issued by the commissioners appointed to execute the Act of Settlement are the 15th Report of the Irish Record Commission (p. 523), the Abstract of the Decrees printed in the 19th Report of Dep. Keeper P.R.O.I. (App. p. 41), and the Ferguson collection in the P.R.O.I. When introducing his 19th Report, the Keeper of the State Papers, Sir J. Bernard Burke, stated: "The time for restoring all Innocents, and making reprisals was limited to the 22nd August, 1663 and they spent the time they say in restoring Innocents who took out no decrees in Connaught, but those who took out decrees had as yet no opportunity of being heard, and many of them, as the Commissioners suggest, might prove innocent, some having been, as appears by the King's Declaration of 30 November, 1660, transplanted into Connaught merely for their religion . . ." Sir Bernard was quoting mainly from a source at present not available, namely "Lib. M" in the series of volumes containing Act of Settlement documents of which there is an account in Analecta Hibernica No. 16. It was from the same volume "Lib. M" that the Abstract of Decrees was printed. But for Galway there is a further, if less well-known source for these decrees in the P.R.O. Dublin. It will be found in the Headfort collection bearing the endorsement "Countie Galway—Innocents" and consisting, though unnumbered of 44 large folio pages. At the end there is an unsigned certificate in these words: "Upon comparing the particulars in the before-mentioned Booke contained with the Roll of Innocents and other records in the office of His Majesty's Auditor-General, it appears that the respective persons before named stand charged for the several lands before expressed differing in some few particulars which are supplied with alias names pursuant to order of the Lords Justices and Council." A similar return for county Clare, bearing the same certificate is signed "Ri: Chappell, Deputy-Auditor"; from internal evidence the period of origin of these unbound books is likely 1670-80.

Within baronies, heavily annotated, the "Galway Book of Innocents" is the most comprehensive source we have on the subject. The pages are ruled in five columns, the first three being headed: Denominations: No. of Irish acres plantation: Sums to be paid; the remaining columns are utilized for observations. Above the lands in the first column are written, in a large hand, the names of the Innocents to whom they respectively were restored.

The observations are of much help; thus, in determining the approximate date of this document there is a note in explaining a deletion: "This (denomination) confirmed also to Richard Dillon by certificate of the late commissioners for settling transplanted persons and charged there." (This would be 1676-7). A total of twenty-one persons are shown to have received decrees; they are given here in the order of their appearance:

Richard Dillon	Dennis Madden
Thomas Lynch	Redmond Bourke
Oliver Martin and his mother	Myles Bourke Henry Bourke
Peter, John, Patrick and Magdalen Martin	Jeffrey Browne Robert Blake
Hugh King	Sir Thomas Blake
Henry Bourke	Earl and Marchioness
Francis Coghlan	Clanrickarde
John Daly	Garrett Moore
M. L. Donnellan	Col. John Kelly
Francis Browne	Sir Dermot O'Shaughnessy

The titles of the foregoing were obviously closely scrutinised, the rulings showing that some of the lands claimed had already been granted to other persons. In respect of the immensity of estate, Richard, earl of Clanrickard, who had succeeded his cousin Ulick, the 5th earl, was the greatest, as might well be expected, of the claimants.

His claims extended into 16 of the 17 baronies of the county—Arran being the only exception—comprehending an area in the region of well over 100,000 acres plantation measure, profitable land. His list is introduced by this foreword: "Earl of Clanrickard: The whole denominations and superiorities of the territories of Clanrickard and all knight services and tenures in the said territories excepting the Church land." The actual acreage in respect of which he received a decree of innocence would not be easy to determine without a prolonged investigation; lands, or parts of lands, which were claimed are shown to have been "past" to other persons, their names and acreages being specified; on the other hand some lands claimed by several "Innocents" are shown to have been decreed to the earl. It is such particulars render this document of value.

With regard to the revisions thus shown, there is this to be said. The King's Declaration restoring Clanrickard was made on the 30 November, 1660; Clanrickarde's patent is dated 8 April, 1662; the Act of Settlement was passed on the 27th September, 1662; Clanrickarde's Decree of Innocence was given on the 1st August, 1663! There is the further fact that the patent of 1662 was in a substantial measure similar to the patent of 2 July 1611 given by James I to an earlier Richard, the 4th Earl, "surnamed of Kinsale"⁴² and who had been advanced to the earldom of St. Albans. Though in the instances examined the present text agrees with the rulings of the Book of Innocents, both texts should always be collated in cases of difficulty as well with the patent of 1662, of which happily there is a certified translation in the P.R.O. Dublin. This occupies over 90 pages of brief-size paper, though it should be mentioned that the same names are recorded in both patents of persons who were killed in rebellion, attainted of high treason or hanged by virtue of which Clanrickarde derived additions to his possessions. It may be noted that Richard of Kinsale, and baron of Imany, who received the grant from James I, died in 1635; his successor, Ulick, the 5th earl, dying without issue in 1657, the earldom was conferred on his first cousin Richard to whom the patent of 1662 was granted. In the ⁴²So in Burke's Peerage and Baronage (1850); he followed presumably the Memoirs and Letters of the 5th earl, pubd. in 1757, whose editor, the 12th earl, provided the following explanation: "Richard of Kinsale . . . made a Knight banneret in the field of battle . . . his lordship killing no less than twenty Irish rebels with his own hand and crying out to spare no rebel."

State Papers 1669-70 under date "About 1661" will be found an interesting document entitled "Reasons for restoring the Earl of Clanrickarde." One passage may here be quoted: "The late Marquis was so firm in his loyalty and kept those around him so loyal that the King's distressed subjects came to him from all parts of Ireland whom he protected and maintained, the law having its course and effect as peaceably in the said county (Galway) all the time of the rebellion as it hath at the present day..." Hence the terms of the veritable palatine patent of 1662 constituting, it may be said, the Clanrickardes a local royal family.⁴³

A further Clanrickarde grant was made in 1679 and will be found in I.R.C. vol. III, p. 263.

There are, however, features of the Clanrickarde patents which though relevant to the parishes of our text were not within the scope of the Book of S. & D.—impropriations and tithes. Strafford's zeal in the former connection is well known and there is evidence that he had intimate knowledge of the Clanrickarde acquisitions: "I am informed," he wrote to Laud, archbishop of Canterbury, "that my lord of Clanrickarde hath engrossed as many parsonages and vicarages as he hath mortgaged for £4,080 rent; but in Faith have at him, . . . and all the rest of the Ravens; if I spare a man among them, let no man ever spare me." ⁴⁴ Laud replied that he had read his letter to the King "who bids you be sure your ground be good and then spare none." ⁴⁵

Had Strafford lived, he would have seen his ambition realized with regard to Galway and expressed in a letter to Secretary Coke sometime before he imprisoned the famous jury. This excerpt is from his letter dated 14 July, 1635: ". . . howbeit there is much muttering that we shall meet with opposition in the county Galway and as if the earl of Clanrickard, or at least his servants, were very averse from the Plantation. Indeed whether it be so or no, I know not, but I could wish that county would stand out; for I am well assured that it shall turn to his Majesty's advantage if they do. For certain it is a country which lies out at a corner by itself, and all the inhabitants wholly natives and papists, hardly an Englishman amongst them, whom they kept out with all the industry in the world; and therefore it would be of great security that they were thoroughly lined with English indeed . . ." How prophetic that word "lined"! What Strafford desired materialized, as we have seen, some twenty years later.

The Ferguson collection relating to Decrees of Innocence will be found useful on the genealogical side and in respect of the Clanrickarde impropriations of which a list is given drawn from the patent of 1662. What purport to be extracts from the decrees are sometimes given in conjunction with the name of the claimant. Thus at the names of Oliver Martin of Dungory, Co. Galway, and his mother Maggin (Maggine) French, there is this brief pedigree: "That his grandfather Oliver Martin, senior of Kinvarra, had certain lands in Co. Galway. That claimant is his grandson and heir viz., son and heir of Richard Martin, only son of said Oliver. That said Richard Martin had a lease of half the rectories of Killrenane, Co. Mayo." There is another Martin entry in this collection in respect of "Peter Martin and his son Patrick" and the further note "Richard Martin of Dublin and his daughter Magdalen. That Richard Martin had lands in Co. Galway, Mayo and Sligo." In the "Abstract" of the 19th Report (p. 59) this decree is entered thus: "Peter, John and Patrick Martin and Magdeline, children of Richard."

The very first name on the distribution side of the present text is "Richard Martin" a name which, the index to this volume will show, appears on many pages. But first we have to recall what has been stated at p. xv that persons who had obtained decrees of innocence were not obliged to take out new patents because they were not to begin any new title from the Crown, but were remitted to their old title to such lands as they had been decreed. Nevertheless new patents in some instances were taken out as, for example, in the case of the earl of Clanrickard; another instance is that of the Martin family which calls for some observations.

⁴⁵ Idem, p. 329.

In the Headfort "Book of Innocents" the Martins are shown to have claimed lands in Kiltartan, Dunkellin and Kilconnell baronies; at certain lands in the latter barony, claimed by the children of Richard Martin, there is the note "Past to Richard Martin." This is confirmed by the Act of Settlement grant given to Richard Martin in August 1677 (vol. III, p. 245). Other lands claimed by Richard's father, Oliver, were decreed to the earl of Clanrickarde as evidenced by the present text (Funchinbeg, p. 49, Part I). While, however, Richard Martin does not appear to have sought a decree of innocence in his own name, he nevertheless succeeded in obtaining and retaining lands in no less than nine Galway baronies! Happily he is identified by the text, in so far as his profession is concerned, and where on p. 177 (Part II) he is described as a "Lawyer," and where likewise it is shown that he suffered a forfeiture. But what he lost on the roundabouts he certainly gained on the swings, having obtained four patents under the Acts of Settlement!

Hardiman tells us that he was commonly called "Nimble Dick," and that he was one of the most remarkable men of his day. We may take it that he was the author of the claims of the other "Innocent" members of his family, the hand of a lawyer being obvious in their specification.

The first glimpse we get of Richard Martin is in The Memoirs and Letters of Ulick, Marquis of Clanrickarde, where he appears as a reporter of the proceedings at Kilkenny in 1642. In a letter to the marquis of the 2nd December he emphasises his "obstinate refusal" to take the oath of association, to accept a place on the Supreme Council, or to concur in any act that might decline his Majesty's service, but had, at the same time, taken care to make copies of all documents that came his way and which he transmitted to his lordship whose own neutrality, incidentally, was one of bewilderment to his aristocratic co-religionists of the day. Again, Richard Martin makes a brief appearance on the stage of Professor Donovan O'Sullivan's delightful book, Old Galway, successfully planning with Patrick Darcy, twin lawyers, the capture of arms and ammunition for the defence of Galway town from a ship in the bay.⁴⁶ We shall meet him later in his final and superb act of adroitness. More solemn matters claim attention first.

Church lands in the Books of S. & D. are usually distinguished by a cross over the letters "AB" or "B" signifying archbishop or bishop as the case may be. During the Commonwealth regime, particular instructions were issued that such lands were only to be leased, these with Crown lands being reserved for the State's use.⁴⁷ On the Restoration, by section 102 of the Act of Settlement, ecclesiastical persons who had been dispossessed "through the fury and violence of the late times" were forthwith to be restored.

The present text falls within five dioceses: Tuam, Clonfert, Elphin, Kilmacduagh and Killaloe. Tuam, excepting Clonmacnowen, is represented in seven of the eight baronies of Part I, and, excepting Longford, in eight of the nine baronies of Part II. The diocesan division of the baronies may perhaps be most conveniently referred to thus: Tuam shares Kiltartan and Clare baronies with Kilmacduagh diocese: Kilconnell barony with the dioceses of Clonfert and Elphin: Ballymoe barony with Elphin: Tiaquin barony with Clonfert and Elphin; Dunkellin with Kilmacduagh and Clonfert dioceses: Leitrim barony with Clonfert, Killaloe and Kilmacduagh: Killian barony with Elphin: Athenry with Clonfert diocese and finally Loughrea with Kilmacduagh and Clonfert dioceses. The five baronies of Ballynahinch Ross, Arran, Moycullen and Dunmore were wholly within Tuam diocese, likewise Longford barony was wholly within Clonfert; Clonmacnowen fell within Clonfert, and Elphin dioceses.

A distinguishing feature of the text is that lands, described as "Abbey Lands" are indicated much more frequently than "Church" lands and one is apt to infer that in earlier times the hierarchy had been poorly endowed. In the Calendar of Patent Rolls, James I, there is an undated petition from William (Daniel), the protestant archbishop, to the King (p. 25) praying to be put into possession of lands belonging to the See which it had been deprived of during times of war, and which were withheld from him by the present occupiers. This was returned on the 25 May 1613, to the Irish Privy Council, with a direction to restore to the archbishop the lands which rightfully belonged to him. In his petition the archbishop stated that his predecessors had been seized in right of his see of two hundred quarters of land lying within Galway and other counties; "that these lands had been, and at the time were the whole possessions allotted to that see for the maintenance of the archbishop."

This is the language of the proceedings of 1585 and recalls Hardiman's statement (I.C. p. 309) that almost all the ecclesiastical lands of Connacht were held under the Indentures of Composition. No immediate result followed but when the plantation of Connacht (Chas. I) was later projected, the archbishop and suffragen bishops again petitioned the King.⁴⁸ They submitted that the greater part of their lands was in the hands of "the natives" who challenged the inheritance to themselves and allowed the church only a small chiefry; they appealed for the restoration of such lands as had got into the hands of their farmers partly under colour of abbey-lands and partly as the escheats of rebels, who were found by inquest to have died seized of them although they were only tenants of the bishop. They asked for a commission calling to account all their tenants, who had lands at very low rents, under long leases, granted by their predecessors, and to constrain them to take out new leases in order that the bishops might maintain themselves with their own lands, without their quarter episcopals, or commendams; likewise that all impropiators should be called on to produce their patents. According to Ware, quoted by Erck,⁴⁹ commissions were accordingly issued and inquiries taken from which it appeared that many fee farms formerly made by the bishops had been forfeited by rebellion, or the proprietors' titles found defective in law; that such lands were seized and restored to the respective bishops on the condition that they resigned the quarta pars to the inferior clergy. While the bishops of Elphin and Killala agreed to this condition, the bishop of Clonfert and Kilmacduagh did not. The archbishop of Tuam agreed to it, but his resignation, forwarded to Dublin, miscarried coinciding with the outbreak of the wars begun in 1641.

In his modestly entitled book "The Parish of Ballinasloe"—it is largely a diocesan history—the Rev. Patrick K. Egan has given enlightening examples of the conditions referred to in the foregoing petitions:⁵⁰ "Long before the Reformation, local magnates had been moving in on church land, perhaps first as tenants, but later retaining by prescription the rents due to the Church. The situation existed all over the diocese of Clonfert and Sean na Maighe O'Kelly was one of those involved. . . . Whatever the Catholic bishops might have succeeded in obtaining from the Irish occupiers, the Reform bishops could hope to receive nothing."⁵¹ In this strikingly objective study, Father Egan illustrates how the intricacies of the law were defeated by alienation. By this "process" all the lands of the bishopric were alienated "as the best way of preventing any Englishman from taking the See"; considerable abstractions by Sir Richard Blake and Sir Henry Lynch are indicated.⁵²

Confusion as to Church lands proper must also be considered in the light of the ignorance of surveyors and lawyers as to what these really were and which prevailed for many years after the vesting in the Crown of the lands of religious houses. It was subsequently found that when large grants were made by the Crown to various lay proprietors, in many cases the ancient patrimony of the bishoprics themselves had been unintentionally granted away, the Church being left almost totally unendowed. A close examination of the grants to impropiators is therefore always desirable in the first instance as to the origin of possessions. The position, however, was remedied by royal grants in the reigns of James I and Charles I to the extent that Bramhall, in 1638, was able to send an account to Laud of the prosperous state of the Church of Ireland and of the lands, rents and revenues as had been gained "out of the hands of unjust usurpers."⁵³

Collation of the present text with the Indenture of Iar-Connacht is confirmative of the absence of any Church lands in the baronies of Ballynahinch, Ross, Moycullen and Aran. There are, however, small exceptions as at p. 7 (Part I) where two small islands—one of them far in the sea, with a chapel, all rocks and stones—are returned in the possession of the See of Tuam in 1641, but as the property of Richard Martin after the Restoration; again at p. 29 where the confiscation of a glebe is illustrated and where stood the ruinous parish church of "Bally-inekille"; finally, on p. 39, the Archbishop of Tuam is returned as the proprietor of two townlands in 1641, one of which he lost to a John Browne.

Attention may also be called to the importance of consulting the inquisitions, as these may be found to specify lands which are not included in the accompanying Indentures of Composition. For example, in the Office of Clanrickard (p. 50) it is stated that the following lands "bore rent" to the bishop of Kilmacduagh—Ballibrana-gane, Clonnaswoy and Moa. These lands are not specified in the Indenture; they will be found, however, on pages 48 and 49 of the present text, barony of Kiltartan, where it will be noted the existence of a glebe is recorded.

In the present text evidence of difficulty in determining ecclesiastical proprietorship or interest is present in some instances. At "Killcluny" (Part I, p. 216) appears merely the letter B with a cross above it, in the second column. The area of 142 acres is shown to have experienced a double distribution, that is to say 132 acres were disposed to a transplanter, the Countess of Fingal, 10 acres to Frederick Trench and the whole 142 acres to William Brabazon. Trench's grant contained two savings, one in favour of the Bishop of Clonfert and the other in favour of William Brabazon; likewise the Fingal patent in favour of the bishop's right. There was no saving in Brabazon's grant (vol. III, p. 278).

This is an interesting case. While an inquisition of June, 29, 1626, had found that the bishop of Clonfert was entitled to a fourth part of the great tithes of numerous vicarages and to an annual rent from the tithes of "Killclowny," the lands thereof are not specified as being in his possession. An explanation is forthcoming. By a demise in 1585, Stephen, bishop of Clonfert, leased to Martin Lynch FitzPeter of Galway, merchant, all his manors, lands, tithes, spiritual and temporal, including the lands of Killcloony for 61 years at a rent of £4 : 5 : 1. A memorandum on the deed was to the effect that on the 20th June, 1598, Alderman James Dorsie of Galway required the original deed to be enrolled. By inquisition of 7th November 1604 Anthony Brabazon was found to hold of the Bishop of Clonfert Killcloony and other lands "by what right the jurors knew not".⁵⁴

The Brabazon title thus begun was established in respect of the entire denomination by a grant from the Crown in 1684 (vol. III, p. 278). Brabazon, O'Kelly and other inquisitions constitute a useful Appendix to Father Egan's erudite book on Ballinasloe parish.

It is little wonder therefore that at the time of the Strafford Survey uncertainty prevailed in respect of certain lands. A similar instance is present on p. 18 (Part II), but the explanation may have a different origin. Here, it is the barony of Tiaquin, and again, simply the letter B, with a cross, appearing on the distribution side, in respect of the lands of "Killkerrin"; it is an added hiatus that the names of the proprietors in 1641 are wanting at this section of the barony. But the difficulty here may have arisen from the fact that three dioceses entered into the barony of Tiaquin—Tuam, Clonfert and Elphin; since Killkerrin was one of the eight parishes of the first, it is thought that this should have been the unspecified name.

While within the barony of Killian Church lands are not found returned, the lands of the Archbishop of Tuam, and the Bishops of Clonfert and Elphin are specified in most of the baronies of Part II where also will be noted textual observations of ecclesiastical interest at different items. The sign \angle after the name of a bishop has been found to indicate augmentation lands granted after the Restoration for his better maintenance. It may be added that the Ecclesiastical Revenue and Patronage Report of 1835 will be found helpful in cases where the identification of lands proves difficult.

The legislation authorizing the confiscation and sales of the estates of the adherents of James II has been noticed at p. xix. Some further observations are called for here in regard to the recording by the text of the sales by the Trustees of the Forfeited Estates (1703). In all there were some 14 purchasers of the small area of 13,000 acres or thereabouts, excluding unprofitable land. Dr. J. G. Simms in his penetrating book⁵⁵ explains that 78 claims were admitted under the articles of Galway. The claimants included Blakes, Bodkins, Kirwans and others. "Between them the successful claimants owned a large part of the county, and the articles were of great importance in maintaining the influence of the old-established Galway families." In most instances the names of the Protestant purchasers are given in the present text, the sign or marking ⊗ indicating the title to be that of a Trustees conveyance. By way of guidance, they may be given here :

Frequently the acreages purchased are not specified and indeed in at least two instances, the names of the purchasers have not been given. It should be recalled that the Books of S. & D. were compiled to register an earlier landed settlement, but that their format provided the opportunity, which was availed of more fully in some instances, of recording for official purposes subsequent confiscations.

The largest of the Galway estates sold was that of the Duke of York—James II. Under two grants from his brother Charles II, he obtained in 1669 numerous lands in Galway containing in all, and excluding unprofitable land, 6,552 acres. The baronies named in the patents are Athenry, Kilconnell, Loughrea, Dunkellin, Leitrim and Kiltartan. Of this acreage, Sir William Scawen, a London merchant, purchased with the debentures he had received for clothing Colonel Churchill's regiment, 4729 acres profitable land. Dr. Simms also tells us in this connection (p. 155) that the Annesley manuscripts contain particulars of the cancelled debentures. Scawen's conveyance reserved a chiefry to the Bishop of Clonfert and to the earl of Clanrickard and included in addition close on 2,000 acres in mountain and bog. Other parts of the Duke of York's estate were purchased as to 508 acres, profitable, by Robert Shaw, Town Clerk of Galway and as to 592 acres by Henry Persse of Roxborough, co. Galway.

The conveyance to Shaw specifies that the premises were "in Brittingate—liberties of Athenry." The liberties are briefly specified in the present text (p. 261—Part II) under the name "Athenree and Townplace," but as in the instance of Galway the lands comprising the liberties are not set out. Hence Shaw's purchase is not recorded. It has already been stated that a Down Survey tracing of the map of the liberties of Athenry showing "Brittingate " is in the P.R.O.I., which has been superimposed on the six-inch O.S. map. With its terrier, it may be recalled, photostats may now be obtained in the National Library. Shaw at this time also purchased "in trust for the Queen" an old castle in Lombard Street (I.R.C. vol. III, p. 396).

Again, at p. 135 (Part I) a purchaser's name is wanting in respect of the Duke of York's lands in the parish of Kilmoylan, Clare barony; Sir William Scawen's name should have appeared here (I.R.C. vol. III, p. 358); at pages 119 and 240 (Part II) estates of the Duke of York are also returned, but the purchaser's name believed to be Scawen is not given.

At pages 8, 10 and 13 of Part II (Ballymoe barony) the name of Richard Fenner, also rendered Tenner, appears as the purchaser; according to the conveyance, however, Bryan Kelly of Ballyforman, co. Roscommon, was the purchaser (I.R.C. vol. III, p. 382). The lands are stated to have been the estate of Lawrence Kelly, attainted. Richard Fenner purchased some houses in Galway, one called the "Globe," the estate of Francis Plowden, attainted (I.R.C. vol. III, p. 393).

It has also to be pointed out that the name of the purchaser of lands on pp. 2 and 212-15 (Part II) should be John and not James Bourke; it has to be enquired, indeed, whether this name should not also appear at the denomination of Leaghually (? Levally), p. 199, Part II. John Bourke should also appear where the name James Power is given on p. 213, Part II (I.R.C. vol. III, p. 382).

Attention is also called to a wrong location in the Trustees Conveyance to James Lewis of lands which are stated to be in the barony of Ballymoe, co. Galway (vol. III, p. 370). Reference to p. 54 of the Roscommon Book of S. & D. in this series, will show that the lands belonged to that county; the barony name being common to both counties is no doubt the explanation of the error which misled Simms in his lists forming Appendix B of his book. Again in this connection there is an exceptional omission in the Conveyance to John Drury of Dublin (vol. III, p. 388) in so far as the name of the person attainted is not stated. The lands in question are returned in the barony of Leitrim (p. 72-74, Part II) where the name of the purchaser is incorrectly rendered "Dury." The purchaser's name appears in each instance opposite to that of Walter Dalton. Drury also purchased lands in Meath (I.R.C. vol. III, p. 357) which Simms returns.

Reference has already been made (p. xx) to the mapped surveys of these forfeited estates and which, prior to 1922, were located in the P.R.O. Dublin. Happily, for Galway, an extensive collection has survived and is preserved in the British Museum. They are described in the Catalogue of Maps relating to Ireland, thus: "Plans of estates and lands in the county of Galway, forfeited in the year 1688, being apparently part of the surveys formed in 1701, pursuant to an Act 11 and 12 Wm. III to prevent the further growth of Popery. They are known by the name of the "Trustees Survey" and are formed on a scale of 40 perches to an inch and divided into square inches by lines engraved on copper plates. The lands were sold in the year 1702. The greater portion of these surveys are preserved in the Auditor-General's office at Dublin. An oblong folio volume containing the following plans each 1f. 9in. x 1f. 5in."

The volume includes 27 maps of Lord Bophin's estate, identified in a footnote to the above description as John Bourke, or de Burgh, created by James II, 2 April 1689 (after his abdication) Baron de Burgh of Bophin or Boffin an island adjacent to the Co. Galway, and who afterwards succeeded his brother as ninth earl of Clanrickarde. In his efforts to recover the Clanrickarde estates, Bophin found his greatest obstacle in the fact that they had been granted to the Earl of Albermarle.⁵⁷ Hardinge suggests this to have been under date of May 31, 1696. The ultimate result is well-known. A private Act (1 Anne c. 39) reversing Bophin's outlawry was secured, the price being £25,000 and the bringing up of his children as Protestants. The maps indicating the preparations being made in connection with the confiscation of the estate, are therefore of much historic interest. Rectories, tithes and glebes forfeited by the attainder of Lord Bophin are the subject of two Trustees Conveyances (I.R.C. vol. III, pp. 368 and 372).

Here also are maps of the Duke of York's estate in Galway, called "the private estate"; likewise of James Lally's estate in the parish of Tuam, Dunmore barony; of James Martin's and William Tuite's estates; of numerous lands, estate not specified in Dunkellin barony; of "Brittounge quarter" to which reference has already been made; of William Talbot's and Thomas Arthur's estates in Tiaquin, Dunkellin and Loughrea baronies.

⁵⁷ Simms, op. cit. p. 70.

This valuable volume also includes a coloured plan, on vellum, of part of the barony of Dunmore, drawn in 1659 by Thomas Taylor, showing the estate of Edward Roberts; also a coloured plan of parts of the baronies of Longford and Leitrim, likewise drawn by Thomas Taylor.

Since all these maps have been photostated by the Director of the National Library, Dublin, it is hoped that in due course they will be superimposed on the O.S. sheets and made available to students.

Within the series of documents of this period containing remarkable conditions was the grant to Richard Martin of July 5, 1698. After the abdication of James II, he joined, or as it has been said, was obliged to join the Irish army of that prince in which he was appointed a captain. On the defeat of James II Martin submitted to William's government and obtained a pardon. He then petitioned for confirmation of the thousands of acres which "with great care, pains and industry" he had obtained under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation and to which we have already referred (I.C. pp. 418-19). Notwithstanding the strong protest of the Irish Commons that a dangerous proceeding was involved, by virtue of the great extent of the estate, and of its situation on the sea-coast, "Nimble Dick" received his patent.⁵⁸ The conditions of the grant were very far removed, indeed, from those imposed on Bophin—they were the building of a town at Clare, near Oughterard, fourteen miles north of Galway, which would be a hive of trade and a thriving source of employment. The town, it is scarcely necessary to add, was never built, but the explanation may be that Richard Martin had not been recouped for the "hatfull of guineas" which he had been obliged to pay for his expenses in England.

* * *

The County of the town of Galway came into existence in 1610. By two King's letters, under sign manual and privy seal dated June 1661, "Galway ancient natives" and "Galway gentlemen" were to be restored.⁵⁹ For the final arbitrament of these royal directions the Crown Rental of 1706, in the P.R.O. Dublin, should be consulted. This rental, which was completed in 1707, includes besides the city and liberties of Galway, many baronial units of the county ; it was compiled on a new basis differing from previous rentals by the substitution of districts for counties. There are 33 stoutly-bound volumes in the series, that for Galway being numbered 17, this representing the Q.R.O. arrangement. Here are specified in tabular form, first the names of the Crown tenants, then the denominations of land and their acreages and finally the rents payable to the Crown in both Irish and British currencies, the conversion being certified in 1827. The rents are in three categories : Quit, Crown and Composition. The first arose under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation having been reserved under the grants made of the forfeited lands ; the Crown rents, for the most part, are linked with the religious revolution being the reservations to the crown in the grants made of the lands belonging to the various houses, and representing the rents formerly paid to the abbots and priors, a sequence of much historical interest ; finally, the Composition rents, being the reservations under the Indentures of 1585. Thus, three outstanding periods in the history of the country are united and represented, constituting these rentals as very likely the most remarkable ever to have been compiled ; in origin, the King's rentals they are documents of the greatest importance. They also include returns of " Plus acres " or " Plus lands " these signifying that the whole of a denomination had not been granted, the undistributed portions being so designated. Numerous instances of these will be found in the present text. Waste or unprofitable lands which were not distributed under the Acts were called " Undisposed lands " and are so distinguished in these Rentals. At p. 102 (Part I) in the present text, sums described as " Old Pennyrent " are recorded ; these may represent the early compositions of Malby's time.

⁵⁸ Simms, op. cit., p. 78.

A feature of the Galway Rent Roll to which particular attention may be called is in the section specifying the rents payable in respect of the numerous properties of the town itself. In regard to this, and of course to other sections, it may be recalled that the Court of Exchequer when directing the formation of a new rental, stated that it should be compiled from the original patents, decrees and from other material in the books of the Auditor-General's office. Since abstracts of most patents given under the Act of Settlement are printed in the 15th Report of the Irish Record Commission, and therefore easily determinable, and since the grants of Galway town fall within these, the retrospective dating of the text is to the dates of such patents—broadly between 1666 and 1676 ; patents of earlier and later dates may there also be indicated.

It has been stated that walled towns and corporations were reserved for the satisfaction of the arrears of pay of officers who had served the King before 1649. By section 31 of the Act of Settlement it was directed that a valuation of such houses should be made at eight years purchase. Re-surveys were also to be made where previous surveys were found to be defective. Instead, however, of selling the houses, as originally designed, another scheme was adopted, that of turning the " Securities " into lots for which certificates and patents were subsequently issued to trustees. Patents to these have been abstracted in the Galway Rent Roll.

The reference to " previous surveys " will be noted, as one for Galway certainly existed. It has been printed by Hardiman in his History of Galway, App. VII, p. xxxvi. This survey is dated 1657 and was made for the purpose of a scheme by virtue of which the inhabitants of Gloucester were to be compensated for the losses they had sustained during a siege by the royal forces. These were estimated at £10,000 and a valuation at six years purchase was directed to be made of lands and premises including the forfeited houses of Galway and liberties as would amount to that sum.

I think it unlikely that this valuation was adopted at the Restoration since the new rate, as we have seen, was to be at eight years purchase. But we may first glance at the particulars given in the Rent Roll ; Tenants Names ; Denominations ; No. of Acres ; Yearly Rent. The first entry records the names of four persons described as " Trustees " obviously of the ' 49 officers. What they were granted comes next : ' Tenant of a part of a house, a backside, and thatcht house backward in the north side of High street, William Shaw possessor, John Lynch FitzRichard proprietor. Value £18 : 19 : 0.' Numerous premises in similar terms follow. Collation with the abstract of the patent, in this instance, shows exact agreement, except for the names of the possessor and the proprietor which are not specified.

The survey of 1637 in Hardiman is returned under four headings : Houses etc. ; Proprietors in 1640 Irish Papists ; Proprietors in 1657, English Protestants ; Yearly value, if to be let for years. Collation here is not easy and in the instances examined the names of persons given in the Rent Roll as "possessors" were not found in the 1657 survey. The main obstacle to satisfactory identification here is the fact that the latter does not specify the names of streets or lanes which are given in all the Rent Roll entries."

* * *

The existence alone of the photo-lithographic map of 17th century Galway reproduced in 1905 by the Galway Archaeological and Historical Society,⁵⁹ with which indeed should be coupled the Notes by the Rev. J. McErlean S.J., should arouse interest in the publication of the immediate particulars contained in the Rent Roll concerning the houses of the city of the Tribes. Hardiman associated with the proposals of 1651 to offer Galway and Limerick cities to the Duke of Lorraine, as security for a loan of £20,000 for the King's service, the preparation of a map of the town of Galway "which after the Restoration (when the ancient inhabitants were restored) was blazoned and described by the Rev. Henry Joyce then warden." The historian of Galway adds that the map was later elegantly engraved, at the expense of the Corporation, a circumstance which the editor of the Galway Journal (vol. IV, p. 42) characterizes as "absolutely incredible" in the circumstances.

I venture to suggest that this very beautiful pictorial map of Galway town, with its three striking effigies of the King, was in reality the reply made by the inhabitants to the two Royal letters of Charles II which we have indicated above, and whose gratitude, and indeed history, were expressed on the map in the warmest verse of which a flowing translation was provided by Hardiman. I give one sample :

⁵⁹ Two other examples from the Rent Roll may be given: "John Burniston, Richard Barry and John Gay, Trustees: Part of a House, a yard, a garden, another garden, two houses backwards, a backside in little Gate Street East side, now or late in the possession of Edward Stubbers and returned the propriety of Dominick Browne" (p. 49).

"Oliver Lambert esq., Trustee: A house, a yard, a garden and another garden, two houses backwards and backside in Little Gate Street east side now or late in possession of Edward Stubbers and returned the propriety of Sir Dominick Browne" (p. 49 dorso).

See Valuation printed by Hardiman, pp. xxxvii, and xl for houses of which Ensign Edward Stubbers was proprietor, ⁶⁰ Vol. IV, pp. 5, 41, 133.

"Our city's thine, which pictured here you see,
Ourselves and ours, we consecrate to thee
To thy forefathers, mighty prince and you
We've given our city, 'selves and children too
Our flower of youth encreasing fast as thine
And true to thee their rights and wealth resign."

Though Hardiman did not give his authority for the statement that this map was paid for by the Galway corporation, one may suggest that in the light of this and other seductive protestations of loyalty, and of the atmosphere of intrigue and political somersaulting of the time, it is not inconceivable that the ex-Puritan and pro-Restoration Corporation considered it a good investment—a coat-of-arms-edged security—to pay under the counter, putting it crudely, for this attractive map. Whatever its origin may have been, the Lorraine affair culminated with the Earl of Clanrickarde calling the treaty envoys—Lord Taaffe, Sir Nicholas Plunkett and the distinguished lawyer, Geoffrey Browne—traitors, and the Duke of Lorraine applying the same epithet to Clanrickarde.⁶¹

It is remarkable, however, that the name of the architect or draughtsman who made this map is not forthcoming and it should be recorded somewhere. In design it is akin to Continental cartography of the period. In earlier and later periods Galway did not lack map-makers, and those for the Elizabethan period, by John Browne of the Neale, have been listed by Dunlop in the English Historical Review, vol. 20, and by Hardiman in vol. xiv of the Transactions of the Royal Irish Academy. It is inconceivable that the division of Connacht and Clare into counties and baronies, and for that matter the Composition of 1585, were not given cartographical expression and we suggest that the large undated map in T.C.D. (39×30) is connected with either of these events. It shows the counties and baronies, the principal towns, rivers, woods, mountains and noted places. If it was made by John Browne, as we believe it to have been, it must have been before 1589, the year of his death.

In the British Museum there are several plans for Galway by Anthony Blake and numerous coloured plans of the city by a French artist; these, however, belong to a period thirty years later in date to the pictorial representation.

⁶¹ Cf. Cal. MSS. Ormonde New Series, vol. I, and Memoirs and Letters of Ulick, Marquis of Clanrickarde (1757).

Somewhere in the Decline and Fall Gibbon observes that we wish to discover our ancestors, but to discover them possessed of ample fortunes, adorned with honourable titles and holding an eminent rank in the class of hereditary nobles. The expression of such sentiments is surely to be found in this remarkable pictorial map of Galway. But to the people of Ireland in general, Gibbon's sentiments can scarcely be said to apply. They wish to discover their namesakes as missionaries, as eminent practitioners in law and medicine, as poets and men of learning and culture, thus giving evidence of the innate imprimatur of a truly professional race.

The Book of Survey and Distribution suggests a long-range telescope revealing in the crevices or on the face of its structure, the names of persons or places which in their turn recall a rich heritage of distinction;⁶² it is also a window for the historian who may have the inclination to discover the hidden relationship of the possession of broad Irish acres to the advancement of the interests of the head landlord in those far-off days.

As indicated, in the course of this note, much material is available to students including the extensive Ordnance Survey collections relating to Galway, notably the fine series of bound volumes in the R. I. A. In conjunction with the collection of Antiquarian Letters it will be recalled that extensive and valuable notes on these by M. Redington have been printed in the Journal of the Galway Archaeological and Historical Society, running from vol. VI through subsequent issues; some excerpts from the Galway Book of S. & D. were also published, including the Parish of Oranmore, Dunkellin barony (vol. viii, p. 14). Father Egan in his History of Ballinasloe has also drawn on the Book of S. & D. for relevant material. In vol. xi of the Journal, Galway Corporation's manuscripts are the subject of a communication by Rev. J. Rabbitte, S.J.; the Eyre manuscripts have also been examined by Dr. Marguerite Hayes McCoy whose scholarly and painstaking report is printed in vol. xx (1942-43).

Indeed the volumes of the Journal must be consulted for knowledge of the brilliant assemblage of material, ⁶²As for example at pages 78 and 79 "Hugh O'Flaherty's heirs" and at p. 82 "Roger Flaherty" recall respectively the last chief of his race and his son Roderick O'Flaherty, author of Ogygia, etc. As a transplanter Roderick received a decree from Government and later a "Connaught Certificate" under the name "Flahertie." "I live," he wrote, a banished man within the bounds of my native soil, a spectator of others enriched by my birthright"; thus feelingly he describes the loss of his patrimony "through a long line of ancestors" (I.C. p. 70 and Ogygia, p. 180). Again under very many heads relative to the history of Galway town and county at the hands of distinguished scholars.

The latest addition to sources of unusual interest for the period 1666-90 is Collectanea Hibernica No. 3.

I am indebted to the Rev. Patrick K. Egan for the following equations of the old Irish territorial divisions with the modern baronies:

"THE ANCIENT DIVISIONS OF THE COUNTY GALWAY.

I. IAR CONNACHT: that part of County Galway west of Loughs Corrib and Mask, comprising the whole of Conmaicne Mara (co-extensive with the baronies of Ballynahinch and Moycullen) and that part of Part-raighe an tSléibhe which later became the half-barony of Ross.

It included:

- A. Conmaicne Mara—the territory west of Lough Corrib, originally inhabited by the Conmaicne and co-extensive with the baronies of Ballynahinch and Moycullen:
 1. The western portion, co-extensive with the barony of Ballynahinch, remained with the Conmaicne, whose chief was O'Caidhla, until occupied by the O'Flahertys after the eleventh century.
 2. South Connemara, from Galway to Lettermore, lying between Lough Corrib (Loch Oirbsen) and Galway Bay (Loch Lurgan), called Tír Dá Loch and co-extensive with the barony of Moycullen was wrested from the Conmaicne at an early date by the Dalcassian Dealbhna and became known as Dealbhna Feadha Thíre dá Loch. The Dealbhna Feadha divided into two groups:

the medical family of O'Lee of Moyaskragh—rendered O'Lyne and O'Leine—pages 58 and 62, chiefs in their own right and hereditary physicians; the territorial name survived in the village of Moyascragh in the townland of Pollagh, par. Killanin. The R.I.A. Catalogue of Medical Treatises includes the "Book of the O'Lees" or "of Hy Brasil"—attributed to year 1434—and O'Longan's translation of its section on diseases of the eyes. It may be observed that this has been quoted in a recent lecture on "Ophthalmology in Ireland," by Dr. Somerville-Large.

(a). Gnó Mór, whose chief was Mac Conraoi, comprising the half-barony of Moycullen (v. Onomasticon Goedelicum), i.e. the parishes of Kilcummin and Killannin.

(b). Gnó Beag, comprising the remainder of the barony, i.e. the parishes of Moycullen and Rahoon.

The whole of Dealbhna Deadha Thíre dá Loch was also later occupied by the O'Flahertys.

B. Partraighe an tSléibhe, which extended from Croaghpatrick to Lough Corrib; was bounded on the east by Loughs Corrib and Mask, on the south by Conmaicne Mara and on the north by Umhall, the O'Malley country. That part of it in County Galway, between Loughs Corrib and Mask and extending westward to Killary harbour, was later occupied by the O'Flahertys and under them in the thirteenth century by the Joyces, from whom it became known as Duthaidh Seoigheach—Joyce's Country. It comprised the half-barony of Ross.

Iar Connacht also contained Ára—the Isles of Arran—the half-barony of the Isles of Arran (The Compassion Booke of Conought).

II. MUINTIR MURCHADHA: O'Flaherty's country before the eleventh century. It extended from the southern boundary of the barony of Kilmaine in County Mayo southwards to Clarenbridge, and from Lough Corrib and the river of Galway eastwards to Cnoc Muaidhe (Knockmoy) and Athenry. It was bounded on the north by Conmaicne Cuile Toladh and Conmaicne Cinéil Dubháin, on the east by Hy Many (Cnoc Muaidhe and the ford of Athenry) and on the south by Aidhne. It comprised:

(a). the barony of Clare.

(b). in the barony of Dunkellin the parishes of Oranmore and Ballynacourty and parts of the parishes of Claregalway and Athenry.

(c). In the barony of Athenry part of the parish of Athenry.

Principal cantreds therein:

1. Magh Seola: Ui Briúin Seola als. Ui Briúin als. Muintir Murchadha. The north-western half of the barony of Clare.

2. Ui Briúin Ratha: The south-eastern half of the barony of Clare.

3. Machaire Riabhach: Between Knockdoe (parish of Claregalway) and Lough Corrib.

4. Clann Feargaile: The parishes of St. Nicholas's, Claregalway and Roscam.

III. UI FIACHRACH AIDHNE: From Clarenbridge southward to the borders of County Clare, and from Slieve Aughty and the borders of Hy Many westward to the Burren mountains and Galway Bay. It was bounded on the north by Muintir Murchadha, on the north-east by Hy Many, on the east by Echtge, on the south by Thomond and on the west by the Burren mountains and Galway Bay.

It contained the barony of Kiltartan and the barony of Dunkellin south of the parishes of Ballynacourty and Athenry, except the parishes of Kilconieran and Lickerrig which were in Hy Many.

Sub-territories of Aidhne were:

1. Coill Ua bhFiachrach—O'Heyne's country. The north-western part of Kiltartan barony.

2. Cinel Aodha na hEchtghe—O'Shaughnessy's country. The south-eastern part of Kiltartan barony.

IV. ECHTGHE: The parishes of Kilthomas, Killenan, Killinadeema and part of Iserkelly, which with Loughrea and Kilconickny, formed the barony of Loughrea.

V. CONMAICNE CINÉIL DUBHÁIN, als. CONMAICNE DÚNA MÓIR: The barony of Dunmore, less the eastern part of Clonbern parish which was in Corca Mogha. Later de Bermingham's country.

VI. CLANN CONMHAIGH: The half-barony of Ballymoe.

VII. CORCA MOGHA: The parish of Kilkerrin in Tiaquin barony and the eastern part of Clonbern in Dunmore barony. Clann Conmhaigh and Corca Mogha were later Mac David's country.

VIII. SODHAIN: The barony of Tiaquin (less the parish of Kilkerrin) and possibly that portion of the barony of Athenry (the parish of Monivea and part of the parish of Athenry) which was outside Maonmagh.

IX. CRUMTHAN : extended from Mount Talbot to Mount Bellew and from Creggs to Castleblakeney. It contained the barony of Killian (less that part of the parish of Taghboy in County Galway) and the parish of Killasolan in Kilconnell barony.

X. CALADH : The half-barony of Clanmacnowen and the barony of Kilconnell, but not the parishes of Grange and Killimordaly, which were in Maonmagh. The territory of Clann maicne Eoghain, which extended also east of the river Suck, became first the barony of Moycarn and later the half-barony of Clanmacnowen in County Galway and the half-barony of Moycarn in County Roscommon.

XI. SFOL ANMCHADHA : O'Madden's country, the barony of Longford, bordering the rivers Suck and Shannon from Clontuskert Abbey southwards to Lough Derg. but with one parish, Lusmagh, east of the Shannon.

XII. MAONMAGH : extended from Sodhain to Cinél Fheichín, i.e. from the southern boundary of the barony of Tiaquin to the Owenaganny river (the northern boundary of the parish of Ballynakill), and from Cather Cinn Mhaonmhuidhe to Ceann Mhaonmhuidhe, i.e. from the western border of Lickerrig parish to the eastern border of Duniry parish. It included parts of the baronies of Leitrim, Loughrea, Dunkellin, Athenry and Kilconnell.

XIII. CINÉL FHEICHÍN : The parish of Ballynakill, which with Muintir Maelfhinnáin and the parishes of Clonrush and Inishcaltra formed the southern part of Leitrim barony.

XIV. MUINTIR MAELFHINNÁIN appears to have included parts of the parishes of Tynagh and Duniry.

UI MAINE (HY MANY) varied in extent at different periods. At the period of its greatest expansion the river

Shannon formed its eastern boundary from Clúain Tuaiscirt na Sinna above Lough Ree to Túaim Gréine in County Clare, but it also included the parish of Lusmagh east of the Shannon. The southern boundary was the river Gríán to Lough Graney, the western boundary Hy Fiachrach Aidhne northward to Seefin. The boundary ran northward still and to the east of Athenry, taking in Sodhain; then north-eastward to include Corca Mogha and part of Clann Connmaighe with all the territories in the east of County Galway. It reached the Suck at Ballymoe and ran eastward across County Roscommon to reach Clúain Tuaiscirt na Sinna again."

The text was transcribed by the late Mr. O. H. Richardson of the Q. R. O., formerly of the Ordnance Survey; his copy formed part of a series presented to the National Library and was kindly made available by the Director for the purpose of the present volume.

Mr. Breandán Mac Giolla Choille, Keeper of State Papers, has collated the proofs of the text with the P.R.O.I. manuscript and has also prepared the index of persons.

To the characteristic vigilance of the Chairman, Dr. Edward MacLysaght, I am indebted for pointing out stylistic infelicities and inconsistencies throughout this long introduction which he was kind enough to read in typescript. My thanks are also due to the Director and personnel of the National Library, to the Deputy-Keeper, Miss Margaret Griffith, and the staff of the P.R.O. for many courtesies and facilities; likewise to the Secretary of the Commission, Miss Eileen Brereton, for her unfailing response to many enquiries incidental to the production of this volume from the initial to the final stages.

NOTE ON ORDNANCE SURVEY MAPS

The Map of Galway from Hiberniae Delinatio, commonly called Petty's Atlas, 1683, showing the boundaries of baronies with parish and place-names at the period of the text, Charles II, accompanying this volume is provided for the use of the historical student interested in the contemporaneous geographical expressions of these historic divisions and the topography of the county as a whole.

Down Survey maps (1655/58) of the Liberties of Galway and Athenry and of Loughrea Town have been superimposed on O.S. Sheets, of which photostats may be obtained at the National Library, Dublin.

The map of the county has been reproduced by the Ordnance Survey. The following Ordnance Survey maps and plans will, in varying ways, be also of use:—

County Index Maps to the 6-inch Sheets—showing Barony and Parish boundaries (scales ranging from $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles to 3 miles to 1 inch)—Price 10/-.

1: 253440—4 miles to 1 inch (In sheets 18" x 12")—
 (a) In five colours—paper flat 2/6, folded and covered 3/-; linen backed flat, 3/-, folded and covered 3/6.
 (b) In two colours—paper flat 2/6.

1: 126720— $\frac{1}{2}$ inch to 1 mile (In sheets 27" x 18")—
 Published in coloured, layered form.
 Prices—paper flat 3/-, paper folded and covered 3/6; linen backed folded and covered 8/3, linen backed flat 7/9.

1: 63360—1 inch to 1 mile (In sheets 18" x 12")—
 In 5 colours—paper flat 1/6, paper folded and covered 2/6; linen backed flat, 2/6, linen backed folded and covered 3/-.
 In outline (with contours)—paper flat 3/-.

Combined sheets of the coloured Edition in sheet sizes greater than 18" x 12" are available at prices ranging from 2/- paper flat to 3/6 linen back folded and covered.

Published by Counties

1: 2500—25.344 inches to 1 mile (In sheets 36" x 24")—popularly known as 25 inch plans.

These plans show all classes of detail and the area of each enclosure is given in statute acres and decimals of an acre. Price 10/- per full plan, and 6/- per part plan.

1: 10560—6 inches to 1 mile (In sheets 36" x 24").

These sheets show all detail as in the case of the 1: 2500 (25.344 inch) plans, except that the area of townlands only are given in statute acres, roods and perches. Price 10/- per sheet and 6/- per part sheet.

All Ordnance Survey Publications may be purchased from the Ordnance Survey Office, Phoenix Park, Dublin, or from their Agents in the principal cities and towns in Ireland, or through any Bookseller or Stationer.

NOTE.—Numerous alterations in the baronial locations of parishes and townlands were made in pursuance of legislation from 1831 to the Local Government (Ireland) Act of 1898. The whole parish of Kilreekill for example was transferred from Athenry to Leitrim barony. Particulars of these may be obtained from the Director, Ordnance Survey, Phoenix Park, Dublin. Likewise, whole or part parishes were transferred to other counties for example, Dunamon, formerly in Ballymoe, was annexed to the barony of the same name in Roscommon. A more striking instance is the transfer of the whole parish of Clonrush, Leitrim barony, containing close on 12,000 acres, to the county Clare; Inishcaltra parish was also annexed to this county with islands in Lough Derg formerly belonging to Kilbarron parish. Transfer of lands to county Mayo was also made; on the other hand, additions to county Galway would appear to be included in that part of the Urban District of Ballinasloe, east of the river Suck, in the parish of Creagh, with the exception of a very small townland called Clarary.

INDEX OF PERSONS

INDEX OF PERSONS

INTRODUCTORY NOTE

Names of persons occurring in this volume are to be found :

- (a) in the second column which shows the proprietors.
- (b) in the seventh column which shows the grantees under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation and other proceedings.
- (c) in the final columns which show the names of purchasers in 1703 of lands forfeited in 1688.
- (d) in the third column where the tenure of land denominations is sometimes described.

All names of persons in these columns in the text have been indexed. References are to pages of the volume and the whole of the relevant page should be examined as names frequently occur more than once. For the purpose of identifying titled persons and ecclesiastical dignitaries in columns 2 and 7 of the text, the years 1636 and 1665 were chosen.

The surnames and christian names are arranged in dictionary order but the attention of the students must be drawn to a certain difficulty in the text which had to be overcome in the preparation of this index. In many cases the prefix O (e.g. Flaherty and O Flaherty) was arbitrarily dropped and to a lesser extent the prefix M(a)c (Gillekelly and Mc Gillekelly) was sometimes omitted. To meet this difficulty, references with and without the prefixes were united in a single entry and all such entries are arranged in dictionary order according to the letters succeeding the prefixes O or M(a)c. For example, Cooge and Mc Cooge references are grouped together in the Cooge entry, while O Flaherty references are to be found among the entries beginning with the letter F.

As the spelling of surnames was by no means consistent—even within the limits of the printed page—the most usual or frequent form was selected and all references are given thereunder. Variant forms are shown in round brackets after the selected form and adequate cross-references are included in the index.

Surnames are followed by the christian name, but in many cases the father or grandfather's name is given, e.g. :

Joyce, Edmund grana mc Edmund, 41.

— Rickard reagh mc Rickard oge Mc Rickard, 40.

Kelly, Teige mc Connor oge mc Connor more, 259.

In some cases the name of the great-grandfather is given, e.g.:

Bourke, Walter mc Moyler mc Hubbert fitz Moyler, 229.

Mc Cooge, Edmund (Redmund) roe mc Shaen mc Edmd. mc Shaen 355-7.

Mc Cavock, Jeffry mc Thibbott mc Sheron mc Edmund, 338.

Entries are further arranged by baronies but, where references are found to a particular person whose lands are found in more than one barony, it is for the student to determine whether the references are to a single person or to more.

Among the difficulties encountered in the preparation of this index was the occurrence of christian name or names without a surname (e.g. Davy boy, Mahoon Leah), or of a christian name followed by a further name preceded by Mc (e.g. Owen duffe Mc Shane, Moyler Mc Rory). These latter may, in some cases, include surnames with the prefix Mc. Where identification of these christian names unaccompanied by a surname was certain they were silently placed in the index: where the identification is doubtful, this is indicated by an asterisk (*) before the christian name or names.

The Headfort Book of survey and distribution provided a basis of identification in many cases, but there remained a hard residue of unidentified names which are given at the foot of the introductory note to this index under the caption Queries.

One further feature of this index of persons is the inclusion of a small number of entries which would normally occur in an index of subjects. Examples are: Abbey Land, Church Land, Glebe Land and Galway Corporation.

The following abbreviations are used for the baronies of County Galway :

Arran		Kilc. = Kilconnell
Athen.	= Athenry	Kill. = Killian
B'moe	= Ballymoe	Kilt. = Kiltartan
B'hinch	= Ballynahinch	Leit. = Leitrim
