In addition to the map of Clare from Hiberniae Delineatio there is also presented with this volume a reproduction of a photostat from the series of superimposed Down Survey maps now available in the National Library; particular reference to this is made in the course of the introduction to this volume, p. xxxvii.

INTRODUCTION

BOOKS OF SURVEY AND DISTRIBUTION

THE following text of the Book of Survey and Distribution for each Irish County is taken from the set of Books of Survey and Distribution, also called Distribution Books, formerly in official use in the Quit Rent Office, and now lodged in the Public Record Office, Dublin. All the counties of Ireland are included in the series which consists of twenty strongly bound large folio volumes (17½" x 13"), covered in green vellum; the county name or names and the Quit Rent Office serial number are printed in gold lettering on the spine of each volume; the further endorsement "Down Survey" is printed between the name of the county and the serial number. Since a common character and history applies to all volumes of the set the series as a whole may first, perhaps, be considered, special features of the actual county being noticed at a later stage (p. xxxiii). From the further circumstances that other series of Books of Survey and Distribution are extant, it is necessary to refer primarily to the particular identity of the Quit Rent Office set as described in the 56th Report (pp. 305-6) of the Deputy Keeper (Mr. J. F. Morrissey) of the Public Record Office (Ireland):

"This set is apparently the series of Distribution Books, Record Commissioners' Reports, Vol. II, p. 627. They are duplicates or copies of the set from the Auditor-General's Office which was preserved in the Record Office . . ."

The series described at the page of the Reports, above mentioned, forms the first item of a list signed by James Hardiman, a sub-commissioner of the Record Commission captioned "Classified Schedule of the contents of the Quit Rent Office, Custom House, Dublin."[1] In columns headed "Number of Books" and "Number of each Species" twenty volumes of "Distribution Books" are listed county by county for the whole of Ireland, two, and sometimes three counties usually adjoining being shown to form a single volume. The list is prefaced by a brief description of the nature of the volumes:

"Distribution Books containing the names of the proprietors and forfeiting persons in 1641, the names of the lands, number of acres profitable and unprofitable, and to whom they were distributed under the Act of Settlement." The "commencing date" is stated to be "Charles II."

The summary now here given indicates the arrangement of the twenty volumes as shown by the Record Commissioners' Reports, an arrangement which has since prevailed. The figures within square brackets represent the Quit Rent Office numeration printed as already mentioned, on the spine of each volume:

3 volumes each containing three counties, viz. Armagh Down and Antrim [No. 1], Fermanagh, Monaghan and Cavan [No. 3], Derry, Donegal and Tyrone [No. 7]

7 volumes each containing two counties, viz. Kildare and Carlow [No. 2], Dublin and Wicklow [No. 8], Kerry and Waterford [No. 11], Wexford and Kilkenny [No. 12], King's and Queen's counties [No. 13], Westmeath and Longford [No. 16], Meath and Louth [No. 17].

5 volumes each containing one county, viz, Cork [No. 6], Limerick [No. 15], Mayo [No. 18], Tipperary [No. 19], Roscommon [No. 20]

4 volumes of which two contain the county of Clare [Nos. 4 and 5] and two the county of Galway [Nos. 9 and 10] and

1 volume containing the counties of Leitrim, Sligo and the barony of Tyrawley, Co. Mayo [No. 14]

The Auditor-General's series, of which the foregoing volumes are copies, is listed in the same Report of the Record Commissioners (page 304) and there described as "Books of Survey and Distribution." The number and arrangement of the volumes are identical with the number and arrangement of the copies described above. Of their character, however, a fuller and more precise description is given and as this equally applies to the Quit Rent Office set it is here reproduced:

"These books are complete references to the maps in the Surveyor-General's Office, except the books of Galway, Mayo and Roscommon of which there are no corresponding maps of the Down Survey[2] and appear to be references

[1] This Schedule was the outcome of a visit to the Quit Rent Office by two of the Commission's sub-commissioners, Mr. Hardiman and Mr. Fowler, who had considered that a more precise account of the documents than that given in the first vol. of the Reports (p. 144) (A.D. 1810-15) was necessary; see p. 74, second vol. (A.D. 1816-1820).

[2] The Down Survey included the barony of Tyrawley, Mayo: see Hardinge's list in Mapped and Townland Surveys, Trans. R.I.A., vol. XXIV, p. 97; also, according to the same source, some maps for Galway pp. 95 and 96.

to Strafford's Survey; most of the books also contain references to the Civil Survey of both of which last named Surveys, the maps are lost or were probably burned in the fire of 1711.[3] These books must have been made after the Down Survey in 1655 but refer to the forfeitures in 1641, and to the distribution under the Act of Settlement; also to the forfeitures in 1688 and sale thereof in 1701."[4] A further note states, under the heading of " Arrangement," that there is an index to each county.

The Auditor-General's set perished in 1922.

That the Quit Rent Office Books of Survey and Distribution are copies of the Auditor-General's series is evidenced by a communication or order, dated 18th December, 1759, directed to the Clerk of the Quit Rent Office by the Commissioners of H.M. Revenue who were then charged with the management of the Land Revenues of the Crown in Ireland and of which Quit etc. Rents formed a part. From this communication which is here printed as entered in the Quit Rent Office letter-book for the period A.D. 1734-63 it appears (1) that Books of Survey and Distribution were in December, 1759, lodged in the Quit Rent Office (2) that " the said Books properly belonged " to the Auditor-General's Office and (3) that " a copy of the said Distribution Books " was in the Forfeiture Office where it was not required.[5] It was accordingly directed that the Books belonging to the Auditor-General should be returned to his Office, the " copy " thereof in the Forfeiture Office " to be removed " to the Quit Rent Office. A receipt dated 22nd December, 1759, entered in the Quit Rent Office letter-book, already cited, and signed " Henry Meredyth, Deputy Auditor-General " evidences the immediate return to the office indicated of " Twenty Books of Distribution " by the hands of " Richard Vernon Esq., Clerk of the Quit Rents."

Though the precise date of the removal of the volumes from the Forfeiture Office to the Quit Rent Office has not, so far, been determined it is probable that the requirements of the latter Office were such as to demand their immediate transfer. A list, however, of books and documents contained in the Quit Rent Office, dated 28th February, 1813, furnished to the Record Commissioners by the Clerk of the Quit Rents, Mr. William Bower, includes " Twenty Books of Survey and Distribution under the Act of Settlement "; these are described as " copies."[6] No such item appears in a return, of a similar nature, made by the Forfeiture Office, a further circumstance corroborative of the removal as directed by the Commissioners of Revenue. It may be added that a list, without date, of documents mostly Ms. volumes contained in the Quit Rent Office found amongst a miscellaneous collection of Quit Rent Office papers, now lodged in the Public Record Office, refers to " 20 Books of Survey and Distribution perfect and authenticated transcripts of all the originals in the Auditor-General's Office."[7]

At a later stage the former close association of the Auditor-General's Office with the Quit Rent Office, and the circumstances governing the origin of the copies, and the succession of their custody will be noticed. For the present it is sufficient to state that every page of the twenty volumes is initialed at foot and at the end of each volume, noted as examined either by " Wm. Hawkins, Clerk in the Qt. Rts " or by " ff. Guybon, Dep. Clk. Qt. Rts." Similarly the " Alphabet " or index of denominations of land, preceding the text of each county, is noted as examined by either of these officials. The approximate period of copying may be inferred from a note in one of the two volumes for Clare [No. 4]: " Finished Ye Exmn. of this 18th August, 1739, ff. G."

Throughout the twenty volumes the framework of the text, to which there is no title page, is the same save in one important connection presently to be mentioned. Large folio sheets, containing as many as ten columns, constitute the tabular arrangement within which the various particulars indicated by the excerpts from the Record Commissioners' Reports noted above, are entered. These are assembled on a territorial basis, the baronies within the respective counties constituting the distinguishing geographical units; further useful localisation is provided in the specification of parochial sub-divisions. Across the top of each folio page, the names of the county, barony and parish are written in large script; where a second parish appears on a folio, it is likewise prominently indicated. Clarity and uniformity characterise the handwriting of the copyist whose bold caligraphy throughout may be said to be almost as legible now as when first written.

The exception to the consistency of the format is in the apparently casual provision of headings or captions explanatory of the particulars recorded in the various columns. These headings are furnished for nine counties only, particulars of which are given here;[8] they appear on the opening page of the first barony but are not repeated except in the case of two counties comprising the one volume. It may be said that these headings, more comprehensive in some instances than in others, provide, substantially, so far as internal evidence is concerned, the clue to the significance of the major part of the whole compilation since they indicate most of the sources from which the particulars returned have been derived. While those appearing in the present text for this county might be cited, with qualification, by way of illustration, the headings appearing in the Cork volume are of a more representative nature and are here accordingly reproduced from page 1 of the volume for that county; the figures appearing within parentheses are provided to facilitate further reference:

(1) " Number of reference in the Alphabet
(2) Number of Plot in the Downe Survey
(3) Proprietors in Anno 1640 and their Qualifications
(4) Denominacons
(5) Number of Unprofitable Acres by the Downe Survey
(6) No. of Acres profitable by the Downe Survey

[Right hand side]

(7) No. of Profitable Acres disposed of on ye Acts
(8) To whome soe disposed with their Tytle whether by Decree, Certificate or Patent Reference to ye Record thereof
(9) No. of the Book or Roll and No. of ye Page or Skin
(10) No. of Prof. acres remaining undisposed"

Observations are called for in respect of a number of these headings and as to the manner in which certain columns are utilised throughout the series as a whole to record transactions quite distinct from those indicated by their captions.

As regards (1) " Number of Reference in the Alphabet " the relative column is blank for every county except Clare and Roscommon; this item was again referred to when the text for the latter county was discussed (Vol. 1, p.xxxvii).

With reference to (3) " Names of Proprietors in 1640 and their Qualifications," the year 1641 appears correctly in the headings of other volumes where 1640 is given in this instance. The " Qualifications " viz. " Irish Papist " " English Protestant " or simply " Protestant " when stated are expressed respectively in contracted forms: " I.P." " Engl Prot." or " Prot." The source from which such particulars were taken is shown by the appropriate heading in the Leitrim volume [No. 14] to have been the " Civil Survey "; that this was the source is confirmed by other series of Books of Survey and Distribution.[9] For parts of Connacht in respect of which neither the Civil Survey nor the Down Survey was made, the Survey of circa A.D. 1636, known as Strafford's Survey, was adopted. The extent to which this was utilised will be noticed later. It may here be stated, however, that Strafford's Survey is not referred to specifically in any headings as a source from which particulars were drawn.

The heading at (8) indicates that in conjunction with the names of persons, to whom lands had been disposed, particulars are furnished of the instruments of their titles. While the names of such persons are given, the other details are not provided in the manner intimated, that is, by explicit reference to documents and dates thereof; but various distinctive marks or signs appearing immediately after the names of such persons are utilised to express merely the nature of the different instruments of title. This disappointing and, at first sight, mystifying feature characterises the entire series; it is, however, somewhat mitigated by the existence of a " Key " compiled in explanation of the Auditor-General's set and is available at the Public Record Office. Through the courtesy of the former Deputy Keeper, Mr. James F. Morrissey, this has been availed of for the purposes of the present text, the relative markings with their explanations being printed at p. liii.

For the series as a whole the headings (7) to (9) indicate the titles concerned to have been derived under " the [8] The Books containing headings are those for Clare (vol. 4), Cork (vol. 6), Kerry and Waterford (vol. 11), Mayo (vol. 18), Leitrim (vol. 14), Limerick (vol. 15), Roscommon (vol. 20) and Tipperary (vol. 19).

[9] In the " First set " of the Headfort series, and in that of the R.I.A.; also in the Annesley set; these will be more extensively noticed later.

Acts," that is to say, by virtue of instruments issued in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation; corresponding markings[10] signify Letters Patent of A.D. 1662-1684, Decrees of Innocence A.D. 1662-63, Certificates to Adventurers and Soldiers issued by the Courts of Claims A.D. 1666-69 and "Connaught Certificates" A.D. 1676-7. Titles derived under letters patent issued by way of concluding estates in land, left undetermined by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, viz. Commission of Grace Grants A.D. 1684-88, are also indicated by distinctive markings. To these various instruments of title further reference will be made.

As a consequence of the innovation of markings at (8) in substitution for descriptions of instruments of titles no details appear in the adjoining column (9) with reference to the entry or enrolment of the instruments of title concerned.

With reference to (10) "Profitable Acres undisposed," the entries under this head are infrequent and the space available was utilised in conjunction with that of the previous column (9) to set out the details of another transaction presently to be indicated.

Subject to the modifications and adaptations intimated, and to the adoption of the Strafford Survey for certain counties, the particulars given under the remainder of the headings (2) to (8) are furnished in respect of forfeitures (A.D. 1641) throughout the series of Books of Survey and Distribution.

The terms of the headings, as a whole, suggest that the Books of Survey and Distribution were designed originally to express solely the distribution of forfeited lands as authorised by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. When, in this connection, the compilation of the Auditor-General's series began cannot definitely be stated; for the reasons later to be advanced, it may, however, be suggested here that it coincided with the period when the Farm of the Crown Revenues ended, and when Revenue Commissioners were appointed for the management thereof in A.D. 1682.[11]

Within, however, the columns so reserved, two additional and distinct items of importance not indicated by any headings are furnished. One is concerned with particulars of unforfeited land; the other with those of sales of the Forfeited Estates, A.D. 1688. These items where they occur appear respectively on the left and right hand sides of a Ms. folio page. The particulars given of unforfeited lands consist of the names thereof, usually with their estimated acreages, as well as the names of the owners in AD. 1641. Column (2) reserved for the Down Survey number is utilised to indicate this feature by the insertion there of the letters C.S. these intimating the Civil Survey as the authority for the details appearing in the immediate succeeding columns.

The extent to which this information will be found, in the form indicated, throughout the series is governed by the geographical limitation of the Civil Survey;[12] the non-existence of forfeited lands in particular areas is a further governing circumstance.[13]

As regards the second feature, not indicated by any heading—the sales of the Forfeited Estates, 1688—advantage is shown to have been taken of the space afforded by columns (9) and (10) to which attention has been drawn. The distinctive sign employed here ⊗, in conjunction with the particulars furnished—names of purchasers and acreages—indicates Deeds of Sale A.D. 1702-3 made by the Trustees appointed for the sale of these estates.[14]

The order of presentation of this wide range of particulars lends a distinctive significance to each side of a folio page. In the sequence of the columns (1) to (6) there is provided the textual arrangement whereby (a) the details relative to forfeited lands derived from the Down Survey (b) the particulars of the proprietors of such lands in 1641, drawn from the Civil Survey, and (c) those, likewise, derived from the same source, relative to unforfeited lands, constitute the survey or left hand side; similarly the columns (7) to (10) containing the details of the disposition of such lands under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, and Commission of Grace (and (d) the further information of the sales of the Forfeited Estates of A.D. 1688), form the Distribution or right-hand side. Hence the origin of the title Books of Survey and Distribution.

Legislation and Sources

From what has been stated it will have been manifest that the Books of Survey and Distribution constitute abstracts of numerous documents arising out of the administration of three governments, those of the Commonwealth, Restoration and Revolution. It is necessary therefore, to recall as briefly as may be the originating legislation of such documents, their character, the extent to which they were abstracted and how far confirmation is still possible from what has survived in authenticated copies, printed abstracts or otherwise.

The fountain-head of much of the confiscatory legislation enacted by the Commonwealth and Restoration Parliaments is the Act 16 Car. I, c. 33[15] passed shortly after the beginning of the war of 1641, an event usually referred to in contemporary and subsequent legislative proceedings as the " Rebellion " or " Unnatural insurrection which broke out on the 23rd October " of that year.[16] A well-known feature of this Act was the assignment of two and a half million acres, English measure, and their allotment to persons who had advanced or adventured money for the suppression of the rebellion. In this connection the Act 17 Car. I c. 34 distinguished profitable from unprofitable land, defining the former as meadow, arable and profitable pasture, and the latter as bogs, woods, barren mountains and loughs which were to be " cast in over and above " the confiscated acreage specified[17]; each person who had " adventured " money was to be satisfied on this basis. Thus, it would appear, originated the distinction subsequently drawn in the allocation of the forfeited lands, classified as profitable or unprofitable in the various surveys and grants.

A later Act (17 Chas. I cap. 36) contains an important revisory provision, relative to the land measure to be employed, which likewise remained a permanent feature of the ultimate distribution of the confiscated estates. The number of acres to be assigned to each person was to be computed " according to plantation measure " the acre of which is defined by the Act as consisting of inter alia " 21 feet to the pole or perch " as contrasted with the English content of 16½ feet :[18]

" Therefore be it enacted that every Acre of the said two millions and a half of Acres shall consist of eight score perches or poles, and every perch or pole shall consist of one and twenty foot. And all the said Acres shall be measured forth out of the said Rebels Lands according to that measure."

Under the Act of 17 Car. 1, c. 34, already cited, the confiscation was to be effective " without any office or inquisition . . . found "[19] and it was to apply to the estates of all persons in rebellion on the " 23rd October, 1641." Again, the basis of the ultimate procedure is foreshadowed by these provisions.

Out of the lands to be assigned and which were to be held in free and common soccage, and not by feudal tenure an acreable and perpetual rent, called, in a later Act,[20] a Quit rent, was to be reserved to the Crown according to a scale provided for the different provinces. In later times it may be observed the department charged with the collection of these rents was known as the Quit Rent Office.

Finally, it was directed that when conditions permitted, a survey was to be made of " all the lands of the rebels and all the lands forfeited by virtue of this Act."[21]

More than ten years, however, were to elapse before such conditions materialised as would permit of the determination of the confiscated estates in the manner prescribed.[22] In August, 1652, an Act of the Commonwealth Parliament[23] declared that, by virtue of the suppression of the "Rebellion" a position had then been reached when a settlement of the Irish nation might be effected. The preamble intimated that the settlement intended did not contemplate the "extirpation" of the whole Irish nation. A series of "Qualifications" distinguished various punitive circumstances—degrees of guilt in the "horrid rebellion—" under some eight heads, and defined the penalties and forfeitures attaching to the respective persons comprehended thereby. Those falling within the first five were "excepted from pardon for life and estate," the third designating particular persons so excepted. Other penalties were banishment, proportionate forfeiture of estates and removal to such places in Ireland as the Commonwealth might appoint. In this last connection, the seventh and eighth qualifications foreshadowed the subsequent Connacht transplantation project. These refer to persons, not otherwise comprehended, who were to forfeit respectively two-thirds and one-third of their estates. The eighth qualification, being of the widest application may here be cited:[24]

"That all and every person and persons of the Popish Religion who have resided in Ireland at any time from the 10th day of October, 1641, to the 1st day of March, 1650 and have not manifested their constant good affection to the interest of the Commonwealth of England (the said persons not being comprehended in any of the former qualifications) shall forfeit one-third part of their estates in Ireland to the said Commonwealth, to be disposed of for the use of the said Commonwealth, and the other two-third parts of their respective estates to the proportion or value thereof, to be assigned in such place in Ireland as the Parliament ..... shall think fit to appoint ..... And that all other persons who have resided in Ireland within the time aforesaid, and have not been in actual service for the Parliament, or otherwise manifested their good affections to the interest of the Parliament of England, having opportunity to do the same, shall forfeit one-fifth of their estates to the use of the said Commonwealth."

Throughout most of the Books of Survey and Distribution the qualifications of proprietors of land in 1641 are frequently specified, as already indicated, by the contractions I.P. ("Irish Papist") and "Prot" (Protestant), this latter class being comprehended in the second part of the eighth qualification quoted above, though not stated to be subject to removal.

The Gross, Civil, and Down Surveys

While the proscription of the nation was thus announced the terms of its settlement were not communicated until the following year when a further Act of the 26th September, 1653, declared that forfeited lands within the province of Connacht and Clare, save as excepted, were reserved for the habitation of "all the Irish nation."[25] Forfeited lands in the remaining provinces and counties, save those reserved for particular disposition by the Commonwealth were charged with the satisfaction of the claims of the adventurers and soldiers and of other public debts. Ten whole counties were assigned in the first instance for the satisfaction of the claimants in the two former classifications.

An Order in Council (1st June, 1653) for the determination of Adventurers' claims and a Commission with Instructions dated 22nd June, 1653, authorising various surveys were confirmed by and annexed to this Act. In pursuance of the latter and by virtue of a subsequent Commission[26] dated 2nd June, 1654, three distinct surveys ultimately emerged: the Gross Survey, the Civil Survey, and, in further pursuance of Articles of Agreement dated 11th December, 1654, between the Surveyor-General and Dr. William Petty, the Down Survey.

The two last named Surveys constituted the main sources from which particulars appearing on the left-hand side of the folio pages of most of the Books of Survey and Distribution were compiled. In one instance only, presently to be specified, has the Gross Survey been found so far to have been utilised as a source for particulars returned in these Books.

It will have been obvious that by virtue of the eighth qualification alone in the Act of 1652, cited above, forfeiture of their estates to a greater or lesser extent as the case might be, was the fate of most of the proprietors of land in Ireland. Before such forfeitures could be applied towards the satisfaction of the various claimants, the lands involved had first to be ascertained and precisely defined before being mapped according to actual admeasurement.

The procedure to be followed in obtaining specified and preliminary particulars of these forfeited estates was also to apply according to the Instructions of June, 1653 to Church lands, to lands belonging to the Crown of England in the year 1630 or since, and to unforfeited lands. For the purposes of the Civil Survey, Courts of Survey were to be set up and the testimony of the oldest inhabitants of the country obtained regarding the following items: Names of the lands and their owners in 1641; the estimated quantities (acreages) qualities and the situation parish by parish of such lands together with their boundaries, rents valuations, letting value in 1640, and whether they were charged with charitable or pious uses; again where mines, quarries or timber trees existed, these were to be indicated.[27]

The recording of all these details, concerning individual denominations of land, amounted to a descriptive survey of the country, save for those parts of Connacht reserved for the Irish, and for which, when required, the earlier survey of Strafford was available.[28] A year, however, was to elapse before this unique account of the land of Ireland was begun. The cause of the delay or postponement is indicated by the final sections of the same Instructions of June, 1653, where it is stated that in order to expedite the plantation of adventurers and soldiers, other means, involving less time and expense than the Survey just indicated, might be found to ascertain the particulars required. Accordingly, a "Gross Survey" was directed to be made of what lands had been forfeited, and an estimate obtained of their quantity; thereby it was hoped allotments could more speedily be made between the adventurers and soldiers and "afterwards .... a more exact admeasurement."

In these circumstances originated the Gross Survey, on the history of which within recent years, new light has been thrown by Professor R. Dudley Edwards in the course of a review.[29]

Features and imperfections of the Gross Survey are indicated officially in a "Memorandum" quoted in a communication from the Lord Deputy and Council to the Committee of Adventurers: "That these surveys were taken upon oath and estimated by the acre at the rate of 21 feet to the perch, and that there is no distinction of profitable or unprofitable land, nor any mention made of proprietors or of what lands are forfeited and what not but is a gross survey of the whole contents of the ten counties."[30]

That Gross Surveys of other counties, subsequently made, contained some particulars as to names of proprietors is evidenced from the fragmentary specimens published in well-known works[31] and from the one instance of its citation in the Books of Survey and Distribution, namely in the volume for Monaghan county. There in the column reserved for the Down Survey Reference Numbers the "Gross Survey" is recorded as the authority for the details given in respect of the barony of Farney: Names of proprietors and names of denominations of land with the estimated acreages of each, these latter being distinctively set out in the "Profitable" column. The relative unprofitable proportions are nowhere distinguished, nor are the parochial locations given of the numerous lands specified. It is not surprising, therefore, to find an Order of April [28] The Commonwealth orders in this connection will be quoted at a later stage.

[29] "It was a gross estimate of the land of each barony prepared under orders issued about 11 July, 1653, to commissioners of the precincts. It has been vaguely accepted that it extended over as much of the country as did the subsequent Civil Survey which covered 27 counties. Most of the surviving evidence connects the Gross Survey with the counties first allotted to the soldiers and adventurers and some of the documents even suggest that it was confined to these . . . But so very confused and imperfect were the first returns for these counties that special persons were nominated to complete with the aid of all available records a 'gross estimate' distinguishing the circuit or largeness of one barony from another; which was completed on the 19th December, 1653. The division between the adventurers and soldiers could consequently be made on the following January 24. In the meantime the survey had been extended to the remaining counties of Leinster, Munster and Ulster and to Sligo in Connacht in order to ascertain the total amount of land at the disposal of the State . . . Hardinge's contention that the Gross Survey included the mapping of part of the country cannot be substantiated." Irish Times, October 2, 1943.

14th, 1654, directing the immediate taking of the Civil Survey, already authorised, by which might be "certainly and distinctively known" the names and situations, qualities, estimated quantities, "meets" and bounds of forfeited lands.[32] Shortly afterwards fresh Commissions and instructions, dating from 2 June, 1654, began to be issued for the undertaking of this great descriptive work which in more than one of these commissions was distinctly named the "Civil Survey." Though a Commission was issued as late as 1st September, 1656, two-thirds of this Survey had been completed within a year.

While the account of the boundaries of the various territorial units, for more than three-fourths of Ireland which the Civil Survey had provided, judging by what has survived, might well entitle it to be described as the Boundary Survey of the Gael, its importance to the State, by virtue of other details, transcended these and other valuable descriptive particulars. Forfeiting proprietors defined by the Commonwealth Act of 1652 are so indicated in the Civil Survey by the specification of their "qualifications." In this way the Civil Survey, in turn, distinguished the forfeited and other lands whose acreable contents had been directed to be estimated by the acre at the rate of 21 feet to the perch. As will presently be seen this Survey constituted the basis of the next Survey to be undertaken —the Down Survey.

The Books of Survey and Distribution contain abstracts of the Civil Survey to the following extent (1) names of proprietors, and usually their qualifications, of lands forfeited in 1641 and (2) names of proprietors of unforfeited lands and frequently, the names and estimated areas of such lands, in respect of the same year.

From the substantial remnant of the Civil Survey which has survived—it originally extended to twenty-seven counties—nine volumes have already been published by the Irish Mss. Commission. In this connection collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution can be made in respect of some ten counties by virtue of the published Civil Survey material.

The third and last of these surveys was the well-known Down Survey executed under the direction of Doctor, later Sir William Petty. Besides the well-known edition by Larcom of Petty's own history of the Survey this noted cartographical achievement has been the subject of learned exposition in Dr. Y. M. Goblet's "La transformation de la géographie politique de l'Irlande au xvii^e siècle (1930)"; it has also been the subject of many judicial decisions to which further reference will be made. Useful contributions on the subject of existing collections of barony maps include Lord Kerry's paper, "The Lansdowne maps of the Down Survey," Proc. R.I.A., vol. xxxv, sec. C., pp. 385-457 and Mr. S. Ó Domhnaill's "The Maps of the Down Survey," Irish Hist. Studies, vol. iii, No. 12, pp. 381-92.

Deriving its original sanction from the Commission and Instructions of 22 June, 1653, confirmed by the Act of September of that year, the Down Survey was perfected and concluded in accordance with Petty's Articles of Agreement[33] with the Surveyor-General of 11th Dec., 1654, and by virtue of an Order of 3rd Sept. 1656. This last directed the survey of such lands as had not then been admeasured including those allotted to the Adventurers.[34]

The Down Survey was founded on the Civil Survey[35] from which abstracts of the forfeited lands, Church lands[36] and Crown lands were furnished to the surveyors for the purpose of ascertaining, by actual admeasurement, the contents of such lands as divided into the "lowest denominations" and as held by former proprietors. The lowest denominations are defined in Petty's agreement as "townlands, plowlands, cartrons or any other usual denominations of lands proper to the respective counties." By the Order of 3rd September, 1656, the sub-division of forfeited lands into denominations for admeasurement was also to be "according to the number of proprietors who have forfeited their estates and have lands contained in any of the said denominations," the "metes" and bounds of such respective estates to be distinguished.[37] Forfeited estates as so defined on the Down Survey maps are frequently found to correspond with civil divisions, or [36] By "Additional Instructions" given by the Protector to the Lord Deputy and Council, dated 27th March, 1656, it was directed "that the Crown lands, bishops, deans and chapters' lands, the cities, corporate towns, and the lands common of pasture . . . be reserved for the State's use and carefully distinguished from the forfeited lands in each county set apart for the satisfaction of the adventurers and soldiers." denominations, notably those described as ploughlands, and which in turn have been found to correspond with the boundaries of modern townlands; denominations, furthermore, are found to include several modern townlands or parts thereof. The expression "denomination" may therefore be said to have the added significance of the tract or parcel of land comprised within any one surround delineated by the Down Survey.

From admeasurements made of the forfeited lands were composed parish and barony maps, the former expressing distinctively the place-names and boundaries of the forfeited denominations as well as the distinguishing reference number given to each surround; these reference numbers correspond with those entered in the Books of Survey and Distribution within the column reserved for the purpose. Other particulars inscribed were the respective acreable contents and qualities, arable, pasture, etc., of such denominations, the unprofitable portions being similarly defined. Bounds of unforfeited lands were also indicated, these being described either as "Land unforfeited" or "Protestant Land." Such particulars were supplemented by representations of natural features, of the location of buildings and existing woods. The scale to which each map was made was likewise specified.[38]

The barony maps were designed in the first instance merely to express the civil bounds of the baronies in order that the meares thereof "might be better known and preserved."[39] In their final form they described, in addition to the boundaries of parishes, those of the forfeited denominations, including the reference numbers, and, so far as space permitted, the place-names. The reference numbers in the barony and parish maps are the same and correspond with the Books of Survey and Distribution.

Explanatory of the parish and barony maps were the "Books of Reference" more generally known as "Abstracts or Reference Sheets." These, together with the maps, all duly certified, constituted the Down Survey. Assembled in volumes, the folio pages which faced each parish and barony map represented the "Books of Reference" or "Abstracts." Guided by the Civil Survey, the particulars furnished by the "Books of Reference" in respect of the parish maps were: (1) description of parish boundaries and notable features, (2) number of each denomination in the "Platt" or map, (3) names of proprietors with usually their qualifications, (4) place-names of denominations of lands, (5) their number of acres as admeasured, (6) the profitable and unprofitable quantities and (7) their respective qualities—arable, meadow, and bog.

At the conclusion of the returns for each parish appeared the total of its forfeited land and the proportion represented by Church land. Facing the barony maps which follow each of the respective parochial series, the "Books of Reference" describe the barony boundaries, and furnish a summary of the forfeitures in each parish; these details were supplemented by numerous indexes.

Before the acceptance by the State the Down Survey was subject to examination[40] and revision by the Surveyor-General and eventually became the basis of the distributions of the forfeited lands amongst the adventurers and soldiers in accordance with the Commonwealth legislation; it was again adopted as the basis of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation in respect of new provisions governing the distributions under these enactments.[41]

The Books of Survey and Distribution record, parish by parish, the following particulars abstracted from the Down Survey: (1) the reference numbers in the parish maps to each forfeited, admeasured denomination, including those comprising Church and Crown lands, (2) denominations—place-names thereof, (3) the admeasured acreable contents in respect of both the profitable and unprofitable parts of such denominations and (4) acreages of bogs, commons, and frequently mountains.

What had survived of the Down Survey subsequent to the fire of 1711 perished in 1922. Substitutes now available for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution consist of the "exact copies" made in 1786-7 of the sections which had escaped the fire of 1711. These comprise parish and barony maps as well as Books of Reference. This collection assembled in 17 volumes was formerly in the private keeping of Messrs. Reeves, Solicitors, but is now, as to 15 volumes, lodged in the National Library, Dublin; the remaining two volumes are deposited in the Public Record Office of Northern Ireland but of these it is understood photostats have been obtained by the Director of the former Institution. There are also available the tracings from the parish maps made by officials of the Quit Rent Office, in connection with the duties of that Office in regard to Land Purchase proceedings and which include the superimposition of the Down Survey on the six-inch maps ; these tracings and maps are now lodged in the Public Record Office, Dublin ; and finally there are the well-known published barony maps, reproduced by the permission of the French Government, which constitute in miniature an alternative source to the Down Survey as a whole.

There remain to be noticed the documentary sources for the particulars appearing on the right-hand or distribution side of the folio pages of the Books of Survey and Distribution. Most of these derive their authority from the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, whereby not only royal confirmation was afforded of the titles gained by the Adventurers and Soldiers, under the Commonwealth legislation, but provision made for the restoration of former owners and the satisfaction of numerous additional claimants and interests.

Restoration Instruments of Title

Primarily, the restoration of Charles II in June, 1660, necessitated new legislation, the Acts of the usurped powers being void at law.[42] Though the Declaration at Breda, in April of that year,[43] had intimated the King's willingness to abide by whatever Parliament might decide in respect of those who had received grants or had made purchases of estates, the scope of the new settlement was not revealed until the issue of the later Declaration of 30 November.[44] One of its outstanding provisions was the restoration to their estates of " Protestants " and of " Irish proprietors . . who had been dispossessed merely for being papists. " Some five months later, under Commission of 30 April, 1661, Commissioners were appointed to carry out the provisions of the Declaration but subject to Instructions containing some seventy-two clauses, comprehending enquiries into various matters.[45] Notorious clauses of these Instructions defined, under eleven heads, the punitive circumstances constituting disqualifications for the restoration of the old proprietors.

The judiciary, however, having considered the King's Declaration insufficient authority for warranting the disposition of men's possessions[46] it was embodied, together with the Instructions, into a Bill which passing the Irish Parliament 27 September, 1662, formed the Act of Settlement 14 and 15 Chas. 2nd cap. 2. By this all lands which from the 23rd October, 1641, had been seized or sequestered or disposed of to any persons and which were in the possession of such persons on the 7th May, 1659, were inter alia vested in the King except (1) Church lands which were to be restored forthwith, (2) lands belonging to the University of Dublin and (3) estates of innocent " papists " and protestants. Commissioners, constituting the Court of Claims A.D. 1662-3, were appointed to carry out the provisions of the Act, the periods within which the various claims were to be made being specified.[47] In [44] This, briefly, provided (1) that the lands possessed by the adventurers and soldiers 7th May, 1659, should be confirmed to them (2) that all commissioned officers who were in regiments raised in Ireland or transported out of England in the service of the King or his father before the 5th June, 1649, should be satisfied their arrears in the counties and areas specified, (3) that all commissioned officers who had received no satisfaction for their service since 1649 should also be satisfied out of the same security, (4) that Protestants should be forthwith restored to their estates and reprisals of equal value assigned to the adventurers and soldiers who should be removed therefrom, (5) that Irish proprietors who had been dispossessed merely for being " Papists " and had sued out decrees, and were possessed of lands in Connacht and Clare should also be restored, and (6) that those who had served under the King's ensigns abroad and numerous noblemen and gentlemen, mentioned by name, were all, likewise, to be restored. Finally, a parliament was to be called and an enquiry instituted into the decrees and judgments given for forfeited lands in Connacht and Clare in which it was understood " much injustice and fraud " had been used.

[45] Clause 50 directed that special care should be taken to confirm to the purchasers of lands, which had been decreed to transplanted persons in Connacht and Clare, the possessions so obtained. Further directions provided for the determination of the position with regard to the extent to which the adventurers had been satisfied, the compilation of books in connection therewith, the ascertaining of arrears due to the '49 officers, the discovery of the lands possessed by regicides and the determination of other matters constituting a stocktaking of the general position.

[46] Howard's Treatise of the Exchequer and Revenue of Ireland, vol. 1, p. 201 : The commissioners for executing the declaration sat at Dublin and published proclamations requiring adventurers to bring in the particulars of their estates. But very little was done . . the judges having declared their opinion that the declaration being only an act of state . . very few or none of the Irish entered their claims.

[47] " The time for restoring all Innocents and making reprisals was limited to 22nd August, 1663 and they (the Commissioners) spent their time, they say, in restoring Innocents who took out no decrees in Connaught, but those who took out decrees had as yet no opportunity of being heard, and many of them, as the Commissioners suggest, might prove innocent, some having been, as appears by the King's Declaration of 30 November, 1660, transplanted into Connaught merely for their religion. In order to account for the short time actually given . . . to the hearing of claims of Innocence, which was only seven months, from 13 January to 21 August, 1663, the Commissioners say they were delayed after their arrival in Ireland two months before the Act of Settlement was printed "—App. 19th Report D.K.P.R.(I.), p. 39.

About 7,000 claims were made but " six-sevenths were still unheard " when the time had expired ; appeals for a further extension were silenced by the " insurrection of the Cromwellians." 32nd Report, D.K.P.R. (E.) App. 1. (Russell and Prendergast), p. 153.

the King's Declaration (clause 25) thirty-eight persons, noblemen and gentlemen, representing former proprietors who for particular reasons had merited grace and favour were to be restored forthwith without further proof; of these, twenty were restored under the Act;[48] many who served under the King's ensigns beyond the seas were similarly recommended by name but they would appear to have received nothing more than this distinction.[49] As the time appointed for hearing the claims of Innocence was limited to one year—actually seven months—and since the Commissioners were to restore in the first place such Innocents as had taken out no decrees in Connacht or Clare, under the Commonwealth Transplantation scheme, their labours were mainly confined to such proceedings. It may be explained that "Innocent Papists" and Protestants were required to claim because they were obliged to make out the qualification of innocence; when they made that appear, they were not obliged to take out any new patents because they were not to begin any new title from the King, but were remitted to their old title to such lands as they claimed; the lands came out of the Crown, not by any patent or grant, but by the divesting clause in the Act.[50]

The Decrees of Innocence issued by the Court of Claims between January and August 1663 numbered over five hundred.[51] These contained particulars of the claims made—the names of the lands, etc., of which the claimants were possessed in October, 1641, and their title thereto; after reciting that the necessary evidences had been produced, the decrees declared the "innocency" of the particular claimants.[52]

These decrees are abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution, the names of the persons by whom they were obtained being specified with the particulars of the lands and the acreages thereof to which they were restored.

What is now available of such decrees for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution is contained, for the most part, in the third volume of the Record Commissioners Reports; since, however, this volume preserves particulars of other documents yet to be noticed here, it will be more convenient to indicate at a later stage its particular contents.

Dissatisfaction with the Act of Settlement led to its suspension, the Commissioners reporting to the Lord Lieutenant in November, 1663, that a new Act was necessary to remove obstructions to their proceedings.[53] After much negotiation between the interests to be satisfied it was ultimately decided that the adventurers and soliders should be confirmed in two-thirds of the lands of which they stood possessed on May 7th, 1659, likewise the Connacht purchasers as to two-thirds of what was in their possession in September, 1663, the '49 Officers to be entirely established in their present possessions.[54] These resolutions were subsequently formed into a Bill which, passing the Irish Parliament 23rd December, 1665, became the Act of Explanation 17 and 18 Ch. 2nd. cap. 2. Once more the lands forfeited by virtue of the rebellion of 1641 were declared vested in the King, "without any office or inquisition thereof found," but with an important distinction. Among the estates excepted from the lands so vested in the King by the Act of Settlement were those of all innocent persons; under the Act of Explanation estates so excepted in this classification were limited to those only in respect of which Decrees of Innocence had already been obtained under the Act of Settlement. Furthermore, all remaining claims to innocency were barred,[55] while those who had been decreed innocent and had not been restored, were left to law. By such means, and by the retrenchment of one-third of the lands possessed by adventurers and soldiers it was expected to provide a fund of land to meet existing

See, also, Howard, vol 1, p. 211: "The Act of Settlement was far from giving satisfaction to all parties; it was much complained of by the Irish and by . . . the '49 officers. They were many of them ancient inhabitants of the Kingdom . . . had lost great estates by the rebellion, and had distinguished themselves by their loyalty. Notwithstanding which several grants and provisoes had been obtained from the King, and inserted in the Act, which had intrenched upon the security allotted for the payment of their arrears."

[54] It was also agreed that what any person wanted of his two-thirds should be supplied, and whatever he had more should be taken from him; that the adventurers and soldiers should make their election where the overplus should be retrenched: Howard, op. cit., vol. 1, p. 217.

deficiencies and further claims. Provision was made for retrenchment in another connection. The King's Declaration had directed, as already noted, the immediate restoration to their estates " without further proof " of a number of persons representing former proprietors, who had merited special grace and favour. Of these, as stated above, only twenty had been restored at the time of the passing of the Bill of Explanation which contained new provisions in respect of this class of nominees. Fifty-four persons, thirty-four of whom had already been named in the King's Declaration, were to be restored to their principal seats with 2,000 acres adjoining ; whatever was possessed above this acreage, in 1641, was to be retrenched and vested in the King to the uses of the Acts.[56] In order to divest the lands, which by the vesting clauses were in the King, the various interested persons were obliged to make their claims before the Commissioners appointed to carry out the provisions of the Act and who constituted the Court of Claims A.D. 1666-69.[57] Upon its certificates, reciting the claimants' names and specifying particulars of the lands allotted, their location, number of acres, rents reservable and tenure, the Lord Lieutenant was authorised and required, upon request, to cause letters patent, under the great seal of Ireland to be passed of such lands.[58] Certificates so issued to the adventurers and soldiers, etc., numbered 1,767 ; those issued under the name of " Adjudications " to the '49 Officers numbered 100, this corresponding with the number of lots into which their security had been divided.[59] In the preparation of letters patent " new and proper names more suitable to the English tongue " than the " barbarous and uncouth names " by which most places were called, were to be inserted with an alias for the lands granted by such patents.[60] Except where the Strafford survey was utilised, the acreages of lands contained in these certificates and letters patent were in general those of the Down Survey. Finally such certificates were to be enrolled and letters patent obtained within six months of the issue thereof ; where letters patent were not issued through official delay, the grantees were to hold under their certificates as fully as if letters patent had been issued ; letters patent were likewise to be enrolled " within the space of two years next after the royal assent to this bill actually given." All letters patent were to contain a clause compelling the patentees to cause their letters patent to be enrolled within a time therein limited ; without such clause the patents were to be void and of no effect.[61]

The names of the persons to whom such grants were issued, or if grants had not been taken out to whom certificates were given, are likewise abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution with the acreages of the lands disposed. It may be added that it is not easy to determine from the Books of Survey and Distribution the retrenchment directed by the Act of Explanation.

Further documents abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution were the " Connaught Certificates " and the letters patent founded thereon. Their origin resided in the King's Declaration of November, 1660, with Instructions, confirmed by the Act of Settlement. The governing provisions of the King's Declaration and Instructions in favour of the transplanters were (1) that persons who had received decrees for lands from the former " pretended " commissioners, and were not possessed of such lands by 1 November, 1661, were to be immediately satisfied[62] (2) those who should be dispossessed by virtue of the King's Declaration—which had provided for the immediate restoration by name of certain former proprietors—were to be reprised out of lands of equal value before such dispossession,[63] and (3) those who had actually been removed from lands to which they had been transplanted, without any reprise, were to be satisfied forthwith.[64] On the grounds that in obtaining decrees for lands in Connacht and Clare, during the usurpation, there had been much fraud and injustice, a Commission issued 24th October, 1662, to review and rectify the position.[65]

Save, however, to confirm the protestant purchasers before September, 1663, of transplanters' lands, nothing had been done towards carrying out the foregoing provisions for some fourteen years. Then in accordance with the King's directions of September 22, 1675,[66] and in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation commissioners were appointed for hearing and determining claims of transplanted persons. Some 580 certificates were issued in the course of two years, the first being dated 20th March, 1676.[67] These certificates, according to the specimen which has been preserved, recited the lands set out to the claimants or their predecessors by the former Commonwealth Commissioners at Loughrea, and to the end that letters patent might issue for a final settlement declared, on the production of the necessary evidence, the claimants entitled to such lands in fee simple subject to the rents reserved.

Commission of Grace, A.D. 1684-88

While the foregoing documents find their authority in clauses and sections of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, another series, also abstracted in the Books of Survey and Distribution, intimately connected with the Acts, and forming a sequence thereto, call for notice. These are the grants made A.D. 1684-1688 in pursuance of the Commission of Grace 36-37 Chas. II and 1-4 Jas. II.

When the Court of Claims (A.D. 1666-69) had been in session for over two years the Commissioners reported (February 14, 1668) to the Lord Lieutenant the result of their proceedings.[68] The claims of the main interests, for whom the Act was intended, had been heard and settled, viz., the adventurers and soldiers, the "protestant purchasers" in Connacht and Clare, and the '49 Officers. Much, however, remained to be done in giving out reprisals to such as were deficient. The general stock of undisposed land had been twice gone through in open court, the debt and deficiencies of all persons stated and though care had been taken to enlarge the stock, yet there was not enough land to go round: "And upon the whole matter it appearing that the stocks of reprisals will not hold to satisfy all the ends of the Acts so that not only the (54) persons commonly called the Nominees and others of the Roman Catholic religion which are by special provisoes to be restored after reprisals of such as are possessed of their estates and transplanted persons who have been removed by special provisions, but also many of his Majesty's Protestant subjects are likely to be in a great manner deprived of the benefit of settlement."

Instructions given in reply directed how the Commissioners were to adjudicate the remaining unsatisfied claims; deficient adventurers and soldiers, the Duke of York, the '49 officers and protestants were to be preferred before all others.[69]

With the closing of the Court of Claims in January, 1669, the only channel of relief for those aggrieved by the settlement was by way of appeal to the King or the Lord Lieutenant. In response to a petition[70] to the former on behalf of Irish proprietors who were still unrestored a Committee of Enquiry was appointed in 1671 to examine all documents arising out of the proceedings.[71] Though the relevant documents were copied for the purposes of this Enquiry, it was recalled under circumstances to which reference will be made at a later stage. Other petitions indicated that all that had been obtained by some of the Nominees—persons named in the Acts as meriting favour—were custodians of mountainous lands which had been retrenched.[72]

Land-satisfactions and secure titles were also sought in different connections by the discovery of concealed or forfeited land or by the acquisition of unsatisfied debentures of adventurers and soldiers. " But of late it had been held for law that all the periods of those Acts (Settlement and Explanation) were expired and consequently that all concealed or forfeited land to be found was no longer in his Majesty as a royal trustee to the use of the Acts, but in his own right and therefore he hath lately issued a commission styled the Commission of Grace to free the subject from such former vexatious inquiries and to encourage those possessed under a doubtful title to purchase a confirmation at a moderate fine."[73]

Thus originated the Commission of Grace, directed to the Duke of Ormond then Lord Lieutenant and others, under which numerous grants were made at the close of the reign of Charles II and during that of James II. The Commission recites that several lands to which the King was entitled still remained undisposed of, the possessors of which were disquieted for various reasons : Discoverers had endeavoured to establish defective titles, or commissions of inquiry, concealed lands, and patentees or other proprietors had been subject to much question respecting their titles, " either because they have no Letters Patent for them . . . . or because the patents granted found void. . . . or obscure." To remedy these inconveniences commissioners, as mentioned, were appointed with power to correspond with persons holding lands under such circumstances, and to grant new tenures direct from the Crown for such fines and rents, or increase of rents, and such tenures as they thought fit.[74]

Under this Commission close on 500 grants were made between 1684 and 1688 the names of the grantees, with the acreages passed, appearing in the Books of Survey and Distribution with the appropriate marking indicating the instrument of title.

What has survived as a whole of all the foregoing grants, decrees and certificates issued in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, and of the Commission of Grace, is contained in the 15th Report, or third volume of the Record Commission[75] and of the Supplement thereto.[76] The material contained in these publications is confined, however, to abstracts, indexes and specimens of the various documents concerned, prefaced as regards the grants under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation with an introduction and notes by Mr. James Hardiman. The abstracts are those made from the enrolments of the grants passed under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, and under the Commission of Grace, and are stated to contain everything material in the original documents :—names of grantees, the lands and acreages granted, profitable and unprofitable, rents reserved to the Crown, dates of grants and of enrolment thereof. The abstracts of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation grants are supplemented by an Index of persons and of the several baronies and counties mentioned in the grants ; there is also printed an " Account of the Savings contained in the Patents." Indexes of persons and lands accompany the abstracts of the Commission of Grace.

Particular indexes provided in the Report are those of the names of persons and places occurring in the enrolments of (1) the certificates of the Court of Claims for adventurers and soldiers (2) Decrees of Innocence (3) " Connaught certificates " and (4) Adjudications in favour of the (1649) officers. Each index is introduced by a transcript of the first certificate or decree appearing on the respective rolls. There is also printed an alphabetical list of persons on whose behalf the original certificates, or decrees of the Court of Claims were made.

In addition to this substantial corpus of Acts of Settlement material, there is also available for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution, the extensive collection of official copies of grants, and extracts therefrom, and of extracts of decrees and certificates, and other documents, assembled by the Quit Rent Office and now in the Public Record Office,[77]

Forfeited Estates of A.D. 1688

The final entries appearing in the Books of Survey and Distribution originated in the sales of the estates forfeited in 1688; of these conveyances were authorised to be made by the English Act of Parliament, 11 and 12 Wm. III, cap. 2, which bears the title: "An Act for granting an Aid to his Majesty by Sale of the forfeited and other Estates and Interests in Ireland, and by a Land Tax in England for the several purposes therein mentioned." The preamble to the Act recites that soon after the accession of King William and his late Consort "a desperate and bloody war and rebellion" was levied in Ireland against them by many of their Majesties subjects who had since been reduced to their due obedience to the Crown of England. It was, therefore, "highly reasonable" that the estates of "such rebels and traitors should be applied in ease of his Majesty's faithful subjects of this Kingdom to the use of the public." It was enacted, accordingly, that all the lands and possessions, within the realm of Ireland, whereof any persons who stood convicted or attainted of treason since the 13th February, 1688, or who should be convicted before the last day of Trinity term 1701, or whereof the late King James was possessed, be vested in the thirteen persons named as Trustees, to the end that the same might be sold and disposed of, with a saving for the persons comprised within the "Articles of Limerick or Galloway."[78] Declaring null and void all grants made by King William since 13th February, 1688, save those allowed, and empowering the Trustees to reward discoverers of forfeited estates concealed, the Act directed all persons having claims on the lands vested in the Trustees to proceed therewith before the 10th August, 1700, subsequently enlarged to 25th March, 1702.[79] The Act constituted the Trustees a Court of Record and directed the sale of the estates and interests vested in them before the 25th March, 1702, a period likewise extended to the 24th June, 1703.[80] Lands vested in the Trustees and not sold by this date were by the Act 1 Anne, stat. 2, cap. 21, vested in the Queen. This Act also ordained that the sales directed to be made should be only to such persons as were protestants. It was provided by the Act 11 and 12 Wm. III, cap. 2, section 41, that all the monies arising by virtue of the sales were to be appropriated and applied to the discharge of the arrears of pay due (1) to the officers of his Majesty's army who had served in the reduction of Ireland and in the late war against France and (2) of the debts owing for the transport service and the clothing of the army.

Reporting to the House of Commons on December 15, 1699, the Parliamentary Commission on the Forfeitures notified the outlawry of 3,921 persons and the forfeiture of 1,060,792 acres gross besides other forfeited lands of which no survey existed; the proportion of these lands restored to the old proprietors by virtue of the Articles of Limerick and Galway represented "233,106 acres" and those restored by the King's favour "74,733 acres"—all plantation measure.[81] There was yet to be computed, the report continued, the value of between five and six hundred houses in Dublin, Cork and elsewhere, likewise of 61 mills, of fairs and markets, ferries and fisheries, the value of woods standing on forfeited estates being estimated at £60,000. Accompanying this Report was a number of books containing lists of outlawed and forfeiting persons, of claims adjudicated, of pardons and of reversal of outlawries, and of grants and custodiams then in being, which are available in Trinity College, Dublin (Mss. No. 744).[82] A description of these books is given by Dr. J. G. Simms in Irish Historical Studies, vol. III, no. 27, under the caption "Historical Revision—Land owned by catholics in 1688" and where the estimates of Butler and others are discussed. It is there suggested that the proportion of land which escaped forfeiture was greater than that allowed for by Butler.

On the expiry of the time allowed for the making and hearing of claims the Trustees were directed to proceed by way of auction to sell the residue of the forfeited estates which had not been restored or already granted; upon payment of the purchase monies they were to execute deeds of bargain and sale which were to be enrolled within [78] "Under the provisions of the articles of Galway and Limerick as finally ratified by the Irish Parliament, 1,283 Catholic proprietors retained their estates estimated to amount to 233,106 Irish acres . . Much confusion exists in our printed sources owing to the two Acts of the Irish Parliament of 1697, and the English Resumption Act of 1700. This last did not interfere with those persons who had been adjudged to be within the Articles of Limerick and Galway. But it led to a more stringent inquiry into concealed forfeitures." six months from the date thereof; after such sales the estates were to be held of the King as of his Castle of Dublin by free and common socage tenure.[83]

Of the 666 deeds of conveyance so made and enrolled abstracts have also been printed in the 15th Report of the Record Commission to which reference has already been made. These abstracts provide the following particulars; names of purchasers or persons to whom conveyances were made, the names of the lands, with their acreages, the consideration monies, the names of the former owners or persons attainted, and the dates of the conveyances and their enrolements. The area (plantation measure) of the lands thus sold has been estimated to have been 716,374 acres.[84] In conjunction with these abstracts, and in addition to the Ms. volumes, above indicated, in Trinity College, Dublin, there is also available for collation with the Books of Survey and Distribution, tracings made by the Quit Rent Office staff from the original maps of the Trustees. These maps of which a detailed catalogue, parish by parish, is printed in the Supplement to the 8th Report of the Record Commissioners (pp. 334-50) were formerly in the Auditor-General's collection; on the covers of the volumes the endorsement was inscribed: "Maps of the lands forfeited in 1688, and sold in the year 1702, according to the several Surveys taken by the order of the Commissioners appointed under the 11th and 12th William III, for ascertaining and selling the same." Contained in the same series were three volumes of copies of Down Survey maps. It is not unlikely that in some cases, particularly those of double forfeiture of the same lands, that is in 1641 and 1688, certified copies of Down Survey maps were obtained for collation or other use. Where identical areas were the subject of both surveys the acreable content was shown by that of the Trustees to be greater than that recorded by the Down Survey; this is also evidenced by the Books of Survey and Distribution. The Quit Rent Office tracings now probably constitute the main surviving remnant of the Trustees Surveys; with the six-inch maps on which they were superimposed, they have been deposited in the Public Record Office. A collection in the British Museum relating to Mayo will be noticed in the second introduction.

Attention may also be drawn to the numerous valuable documents relative to the proceedings of the Trustees, forming the Annesley collection, received for photographing by the National Library and of which there is an account in Analecta Hibernica, No. 16 (pp. 341-73).

The abstracts of the Trustees conveyances appearing in the Books of Survey and Distribution contain the names of the purchasers and frequently the acreages of the lands purchased, both items being entered exactly opposite or in juxtaposition to the names of persons in column (8) who, apparently, had become the forfeiting proprietors on this occasion. It has been found in a few instances, however, that the names of the purchasers were not entered.[85]

By virtue of the parallel arrangement or specification of the particulars, within the respective columns, the one entry of denominations of land abstracted from the Down Survey and returned in column (4) sufficed for the dual purpose of showing the transactions arising out of both the proceedings relative to the years 1641 and 1688. Thus across a single line and at a glance there comes into view the proprietorship of lands in Ireland at three periods of Irish history.

Frequent collation of all the foregoing various documents as abstracted in the Record Commissioners' Reports, with the Books of Survey and Distribution, has testified to the great care and accuracy with which, in general, the latter were compiled. The essential features of the Down Survey so far as these could be expressed in a descriptive manner regarding individual denominations of forfeited land have likewise been found, so far as comparison is now possible, to have been abstracted with the utmost precision; similarly in respect of details derived from the Civil Survey. Of the particulars furnished by the Down Survey as a whole, and as it existed prior to the fire of 1711, there has thus survived this complete and considerable compendium without the aid of which all the related published barony maps are unintelligible. What the Books of Survey and Distribution preserve of the Stafford Survey has been particularly noticed in the separate section of vol. I, dealing with the Roscommon text (p. xxxiii).

"Alphabet" of Place-Names

Beyond the formal lists of names of persons and of lands and acreages the text as a whole otherwise provides little material by way of guidance. Occasional references will be found indicating that particular lands were not seized or sequestered by virtue of the Civil Survey having returned the proprietors as " Protestants," or that lands were left " out of the stock of reprisals " by virtue of sales to " protestants " before a specific year ;[86] more frequent references are to bogs or mountains noted as held in common or belonging to a particular parish. There are, also, occasional references to " regicides " lands which had been granted to the Duke of York ;[87] to lands mortgaged to the Earl of Cork and others, or leased by a Protestant proprietor to a Catholic tenant.[88]

It may be emphasised that the Books of Survey and Distribution were mainly concerned with exhibiting the distribution of forfeited lands and where, over wide areas, there had been no forfeitures, as in the instance of certain baronies in Fermanagh county, no returns whatever will be found.[89]

Each volume opens with an " Alphabet " or index of the place-names of the lands set out in the text. The baronies forming a county would appear to have been in the first instance indexed separately on a broad alphabetical basis, the arrangement being founded on the order of appearance of place-names in the text rather than on their strict alphabetical sequence. In the final form of the Alphabet all the place-names beginning, for example, with the letter A occurring in each barony of a particular county are grouped together, in paginated sequence, under the names of the respective baronies, and so on until the final letter has been reached. As the same place-name may occur on different pages caution must be exercised in the use of these alphabets. In some instances where these Alphabets had suffered from frequent use fresh copies were made by the Quit Rent Office and inserted after the originals when the volumes were rebound in modern times. There are no indexes of persons.

To some extent the Books of Survey and Distribution of this series are annotated in connection with investigations, rendered necessary by Land Purchase proceedings. These pencil notes also include guidance to the pages at which the respective parishes appear, one of the blank folios usually that preceding the distinct baronial returns being availed of for this purpose.

Origin and Purpose

The origin and purpose of the Books of Survey and Distribution may now be noticed.

As originally designed it would appear that, according to the various headings of the columns set out above, the Books of Survey and Distribution were intended to comprehend merely the details of the distribution of the forfeited lands under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. It has been seen, however, that additional particulars, beyond the periods of these Acts, and consequent upon legislation some forty years later in date, were also included. That a common purpose was to be served by the inscription of such supplementary details is therefore to be inferred. It will be recalled, in this connection, that the set of Books of Survey and Distribution belonging to the Auditor-General had found its way to the Quit Rent Office and that it was duly returned to its proper habitat.

Since the Auditor-General's department contained transcripts of enrolments of various documents and of other material assembled over a long period for the purpose of ascertaining the King's rents,[90] the presence in his office of the Books of Survey and Distribution would prima facie suggest a relationship in this connection.

Lands granted or decreed in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation were subject to a constant, yearly and acreable rent called as already stated the Quit Rent. In the second volume of his Treatise of the Exchequer and Revenue of Ireland, Howard states :[91] " From these Books (of Distribution) the Auditor-General at times hath in a great measure formed his constats of charges[92] of rents which issue from his office ; and hath thereon also founded his reports on references from the Court of Exchequer." A footnote briefly reviewing the contents of the Auditor's office—" the sure foundations for his constats " adds : " The distribution books may be auxiliary."

[90] Hardiman, 15th Rep. Rec. Com., p. 37.
[91] p. 113.
[92] A constat was simply a certificate from the Auditor that certain particulars were contained in a patent or other instrument in his charge.

From the authoritative nature of the Books of Survey and Distribution, thus implied, it would be reasonable to assume that they were compiled by virtue of a legislative direction.

In this connection it is, perhaps, desirable to quote in the first instance what has already been advanced by way of explanation of the origin and purpose of the Auditor's Books of Survey and Distribution and, also, what has been stated judicially as to the legislative authorisation for their compilation. Mr. W. H. Hardinge, first keeper of the Landed Estates Record Office (1861) in the course of his well-known paper on Surveys in Ireland, already quoted, cites certain evidence which on the face of it would appear to be decisive in one respect. Having referred to the grants made by King William III of the private estates of King James, subsequently revoked, Mr. Hardinge states: "It is worthy of observation that these grants of the estates of King James testify to and explain the origin and compilation of the well-known Books of Survey and Distribution of the lands forfeited in the year 1641, concerning which there was much argument and legal ingenuity exercised in the case of Knox v. The Earl of Mayo, heard before Lord High Chancellor Napier on the 10th, 11th and 14th June, 1858; each of these grants contains a statement that all the lands granted were returned in a particular under the hands of the Auditor and Surveyor-General to have been the estate of the late King James, as appeared by the Books of Survey and Distribution compiled by the Commissioners appointed to carry into execution the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. The fact of this compilation by the commissioners was denied in argument in the case adverted to, and this point appears to be set at rest by these grants of William. The Commissioners for executing the Acts of Settlement and Explanation commenced their labours in 1662, and did not conclude them and deliver over their records of proceedings, as directed in the Act of Settlement, to the Auditor-General until 1680, or thereabouts. The Books of Survey and Distribution were not therefore, twenty years out of the Commissioners custody when the grants of William describing the mode of their compilation passed the great seal. The Attorney and Solicitor-General, as well as the Auditor and Surveyor-General were concurring parties to the statement . . . It is clear that as evidence of the fact stated, these authorities gave precedence to the Books of Survey and Distribution over the decrees and certificates of the Court of Claims and the after letters patent founded thereon and the reason why they did so is also clear; the decrees, certificates and letters patent seldom particularise unprofitable lands . . . and thus left the quality, quantity and situation as well as the particular profitable townlands to which they respectively belonged to be determined by the surveys; and as the Down Survey Maps do not connect the profitable lands expressed upon them with the adventurers and soldiers, or others to whom they were distributed under the Acts, the Books of Survey and Distribution were compiled for this very purpose."

It will be observed that Mr. Hardinge does not provide any authority, beyond the quotation cited, for the compilation of the Books of Survey and Distribution by the Commissioners of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. In the light of the high legal standing which he assigns to the Books, it is thought that if any corroborative legislative or other direction for their compilation had been within his knowledge he would gladly have made it known.[93] It may be presumed to some extent, therefore, that the only certain evidence the Record Keeper could adduce was the reference in King William's grants.

The case of Knox v. The Earl of Mayo in which Mr. Hardinge asserts much "legal ingenuity" was exercised, will be found reported in Irish Chancery Reports, 1858, Vol. VII., pp. 563-75. It is sufficient to state here that the admissibility of the Auditor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution as evidence was a pivotal issue in the proceedings. In support of the contention that they were not admissible on the grounds of being "mere abstracts two decisions, to this effect, one by the Court of Exchequer in 1747, and the other by a prior Lord Chancellor, were quoted.[94] Lord Chancellor Napier, however, in Knox v. The Earl of Mayo held to the contrary and in giving judgment acknowledged the help he had received from Mr. Hardinge in the following terms: "I have ascertained from the experienced and intelligent officer of the Record office, Mr. Hardinge, that in his own time, and the time of his father to whom he succeeded, covering a period from 1787 to the present time, the records of the Auditor-General's Office, including the Book of Distributions have been always considered admissible and, on many occasions, admitted in evidence in trials relating to property of this class."

[93] Nor indeed does Howard in his well-known Treatise already cited.

[94] The King v. Daly reported in Howard, cited, vol. II, p. 115 and the case of The Archbishop of Dublin v. Trimleston, 12 Ir. Eq. Rep. 267.

Having stressed the importance of the question raised in the light of the security of titles and the enjoyment of a large class of property, the Lord Chancellor proceeded to explain the origin of the Books of Survey and Distribution under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation :

" By the 6th section of the Act (14 and 15 Car. 2, c. 2) the Commissioners are directed from various sources therein mentioned, and amongst others the ' Civil Survey ' and by such other lawful ways and means as they should think fit, to make up books as therein directed, which, in the 46th section are called the ' Books of Distribution.' By the 60th section the Commissioners are directed, upon the completion of their labours, to hand over their books to the Auditor-General, and duplicate copies to the Surveyor-General, to remain as of record in their offices. By the 17 and 18 Car. 2, c. 2, sec. 23, rule 5, the Books of Distribution are mentioned in precedence of the Down Survey and in rule 11 it is stated that ' no defendant whose lots are not to be found within the Book of Distributions shall be liable to any new survey, his evidence being lost ' . . . . About 1680 all these records including the Books of Survey and Distribution were . . . handed over to the Auditor-General." Quoting the statement made by Howard, given above, the Lord Chancellor concluded : " These books therefore are invested with the character of the public official documents of the country compiled by competent authority and used for the purposes of the Crown revenue and which upon established principles, by which faith is reposed in the conduct of public functionaries and credit given to public records should be held to be admissible and at least prima facie correct in describing what they profess to record as true."

The Act of Settlement Books

If the Auditor's Books of Survey and Distribution, to which the Lord Chancellor referred, had been the only set compiled its origin might, perhaps, be left entirely to judicial interpretation. As, however, other series existed earlier in date, it is necessary, in the interests of historical research, to indicate, in relation to the relevant sections of the Act of Settlement, the sources from which compilation of Books was directed to be made. Under section 6 of the Act of Settlement, quoted by the Lord Chancellor, the Commissioners were directed " to make up books of what is due to each adventurer and to ascertain the possession of such to whom lands are assigned therein expressing" the names of the former proprietors, the denominations of land, parish, barony and county. These books were to be compiled from certificates or particulars furnished by the adventurer and from the existing surveys of the late pretended powers. The certificates were to be given under the hands and seals of the adventurers and were to specify the lands of which they were then, or on the 7th May, 1659, possessed.[95]

Section 46 of the same Act, also quoted by the Lord Chancellor, declared that where no " certain record of the lands assigned or set out to the soldiers " existed " so that the rent payable to us cannot be ascertained," certificates were to be obtained from them as to their possessions, in the same manner as from the adventurers. " You (the Commissioners) are out of the said certificates and out of the surveys and books of debentures, or books of distributions, or subdivisions of lands . . . . forthwith to cause fair books to be made up of all the houses, lands, tenements and hereditaments set out to the adventurers, soldiers and other persons whose estates are confirmed by our said declaration, together with the rents and profits payable unto us . . . and you are carefully to reduce the measure of such lands " from plantation to English measure, " and accordingly to ascertain the rent payable to us."[96]

The " books of distributions or sub-divisions " referred to in the foregoing sections were of Commonwealth origin,[97] and it would thus appear that save for the certificates of

[95] Sec. 6 will be read in conjunction with sec. 3 which states : " In order to the more particular apportioning or dividing the said lands amongst the adventurers and satisfying their deficiencies . . . you are to cause public proclamation to be made . . . directing each adventurer . . . within forty days to deliver under his hand and seal a particular of the houses, lands . . possessed by him ... as the same were admeasured to him " ; and with sec. IV. " And if any adventurer . . shall neglect to return a certificate as abovesaid or shall deliver a false certificate . . . such adventurer shall forfeit for three years the rents and profits that such houses, lands . . shall yield."

[96] The " books of distribution or sub-divisions " referred to in the 46th section were probably those described at p. 144 of Wood's Guide to the P.R.O. : " Books of Survey and Distribution c. 1656-7 " (Auditor-General's Office). " These contain, besides names of townlands, acreage and forfeiting proprietors, columns for ' decreed incumbrances, suspensions by orders, disposed by private grant, ' doubtful by the return of the Civil Survey or of the admeasurer,' ' sett out to the disbanded in 1653 and 1655,' and to ' what troops, company, or single person ' ' lands net and clear to be disposed with the rates ' and ' to what troop, company or single person '." For the directions as to the compilation of these books, see Dunlop, work cited, vol. II. p. 479.

The Lord Chancellor in the judgment, quoted above, indicates that the Books to be made up were called in the 46th section the " Books of Distribution " ! The Books of S. and D. c. 1656-7 would also appear to be the Books referred to in the Act of Explanation, sec. 23, rule 5 : " Where the books of distribution and the Down Survey agree in the satisfactions which have been allotted to any regiments, troops, societies or persons, or do not differ more than in one-tenth, there no re-survey shall be ordered, notwithstanding such information."

the adventurers and soldiers, which were to be furnished within forty days of proclamation, all the sources for the authorised compilation were already in existence. It will have been observed that the sources specified for the compilation do not include the decrees and certificates of the Courts of Claims, A.D. 1663-1665, nor the grants founded thereon. The suggestion may, therefore, be advanced that the Books compiled in pursuance of sections 6 and 46 of the Acts of Settlement were those described at p. 151 of Wood's Guide to the Public Record Office under the caption "Books of Survey and Distribution, 1661": "These contain names of proprietors in both, Civil and Down Surveys, with notes as to distribution, etc., viz. (1) incumbrances, (2) lands undisposed in May, 1659, or set by lease, (3) private grants, (4) lands not set by lease, or estates of King's Judges, (5) possessors in May, 1659." This account appears in the section of Mr. Wood's Guide devoted to the Surveyor-General's Office.

In specifying the position as to the distribution of lands at the date of the King's Declaration of November, 1660, and in providing a basis for the determination of revenue, this series would appear to have furnished the requirements expressed in the above sections of the Act of Settlement. What survived the fire of 1711, perished in 1922, and no more can now be said than to express the opinion, based on the evidence alone of the above description, that these were the Books of Survey and Distribution compiled by the Commissioners of the Act of Settlement.[98]

The question then arises, in connection with the quotation furnished by Mr. Hardinge, whether these Books of the Surveyor-General, cited in Wood's Guide, could contain particulars of the estates of King James subsequently granted away by King William.[99] Excepted from confirmation by the King's Declaration of November, 1660 (Sec. 35), were the estates of persons "who sat as judges" upon the life of King Charles I, or "who were of the guard of halbertiers, assisting to put the bloody sentence of death in execution." By section 194 of the Act of Settlement the estates of numerous persons specified, beginning with "Oliver Cromwell, deceased," were thereby settled and vested in his Royal Highness, James Duke of York. Since, apparently, the Surveyor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution returned the possessors of estates in 1659 the lands enjoyed by the regicides would be there recorded; but these Books also contained, as already stated, notes of the distribution of the estates of the "King's Judges" and accordingly it is to be inferred that the new proprietorship of James, Duke of York was duly indicated. If this be correct, the excerpt from King William's grants furnished by Mr. Hardinge would seem to establish the origin of the Books of Survey and Distribution in the Surveyor's Office—"1661"—quoted above, rather than of those of the Auditor-General. It may be added that the lands the subject of the suit Knox v. The Earl of Mayo were located in the county Mayo. A Book of Survey and Distribution for this county is not included in the list of "Books of Distribution" saved from the fire of 1711 in the Surveyor-General' Office, printed at page 542 of the first volume of the Record Commission's Reports; see, also, p. 502 of the same volume and pp. 705-6 of the "Custom House Index" in the P.R.O. In parenthesis, the unsigned "Preface" to a "Book of Survey and Distribution of Westmeath," published in 1852, intimates that the text was derived from one of the Surveyor-General's Books which had survived the fire. The title-page of the printed volume reads: "The Book of Surveys and Distribution of the Estates in the County of Westmeath forfeited in the year MDCXLI"; this is supplemented by the motto: "No country in Europe has suffered like Ireland, and were not the Accounts authentic beyond question, the facts would be incredible" (Ladiston: Printed by J. C. Lyons). A copy is available in the National Library, Dublin. In the text the instruments of title mostly specified—decrees and certificates of the Courts of Claims—relate to the period 1663-70; it would thus appear that series of Books of Survey and Distribution in the Survey-General's Office had contained different particulars.

Committees of Enquiry A.D. 1670 and 1671

Since, unhappily, the Surveyor and Auditor-General's sets of these unique and valuable Books have perished, no more, perhaps, might be said, but in the fortunate event of the survival of the Quit Rent Office duplicate or copy of the latter it is necessary to examine further the [98] In the connection of the fire of 1711, a letter dated 21 June, 1711, sent by the then Clerk of the Quit Rents, Mr. Richard Thompson, to a local collector, with reference to a complaint regarding a demand for Quit Rent greater than that contained in the patent, may be quoted: "I can make no report thereon till I have made up the Books of Distribution of that county they being burnt in the Surveyor's Office which will be done before next term." question of the origin of the Auditor's series and to endeavour to establish an approximate date for its compilation. This now, can only be achieved by referring to circumstances associated with, or to be deducted from, the compilation of other sets of Books of Survey and Distribution. By way of preface it is necessary to recall, briefly, certain relevant matters.

The Commissioners of the Court of Claims to whom Mr. Hardinge attributed the compilation of the Books of Survey and Distribution were Sir Edward Smith, Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, Sir Edward Deering, Sir Allen Broderick, Sir Winston Churchill and Edward Cooke, Esq.[100] The powers of these gentlemen had come to an end with the conclusion of their work in the very early days of January, 1669, when, it is presumed, they returned to England. Under these Commissioners were sub-commissioners: Mr. Thomas Taylor, Mr. Thomas Syms, Mr. John Burniston and Mr. John Pettie.[101] The last-named gentleman was Surveyor-General from the Restoration until February, 1667, his deputy being the first-named Mr. Thomas Taylor, ancestor of the Lords Headfort.[102] Registrars to the Court were also appointed, their duties including the custody of all the documents used in carrying out the requirements of the Acts. For a period this custody was relinquished in respect of surveys, certificates and numerous other records, in favour of the sub-commissioners.[103] All the documents remaining in the office of the Registrars were according to Mr. Hardinge handed over in 1680 or thereabouts to the Auditor-General in pursuance of the 60th section of the Instructions annexed to the Act of Settlement.

A new body of Commissioners (with sub-commissioners) was appointed in October, 1670, to ascertain all debts and sums due to the King and to enquire "into all forfeited and concealed lands." To the sub-commissioners was reserved, exclusively, up to the 26th March, 1671, the discovery of concealed lands from the records. The Archbishop of Dublin was one of the Commissioners, and it is not unlikely that some or all of the sub-commissioners were those who acted in this capacity in the former Court of Claims.[104]

Some months later, in January, 1671, by Order in Council, the King being present, a Committee of Enquiry, including the Dukes of Buckingham and Ormonde, was appointed to enquire into the proceedings under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, having particular regard to those who had lost their estates as represented by the petition of Colonel Richard Talbot.[105] It was alleged that various unauthorised differences were to be found between the King's Declaration of 30th November, 1660, and the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. By a further Order in Council[106] a new committee was appointed including Lord Anglesey and other noblemen, but not the Duke of Ormonde, to peruse all papers concerning the Settlement of Ireland from first to last with power to obtain copies of all documents relating to the proceedings, an abstract of which was to be laid before the King. An address of the English House of Commons to the King, dated March 26th, 1673, asked for the recall of the Commission stating that if pursued it "would shake the peace and security of the whole Kingdom." By virtue of this, and the intervention of powerful interests, the Commission was superseded, the documents copied for its inspection being assembled in twelve large volumes these passing, it has been suggested, to the custody in the first instance of Lord Anglesey.[107]

Concealed Lands—The Taylor Books

For some years, therefore, after the closing of the Court of Claims, considerable activity prevailed as to the proceedings of the various and respective commissioners appointed to carry out the King's Declaration, the Act of Settlement and the Act of Explanation. In 1672, Arthur Capel, Earl of Essex, was appointed Lord Lieutenant. In his published correspondence there are various letters regarding the compilation of certain books, under conditions of the greatest secrecy, which cannot but be associated with the enquiries then astir and concerning which the King, apparently, was much interested.[108] Writing to [108] Letters of Arthur Capel, Earl of Essex, Ld-Lt. of Ireland, in 1675; second edn.; Dublin, T. Walker.

Mr. Secretary Coventry from Dublin Castle, in May, 1675, on the subject of his proposed visit to England the Lord Lieutenant thus refers to one of the matters to be discussed : " By his Majesty's command all the records of the Act of Settlement, have been searched and extracts made out of them, in order to the discovery of concealed lands. This work is contained in 12 or 14 volumes now ready to be sent over and much matter will arise upon this subject to propose to his Majesty in order to the finding out such lands as are fraudulently concealed and concerning the distribution of them pursuant to the Acts of Settlement."[109]

In an earlier letter of March 28th, 1674, to his confidential secretary, Mr. Harbord, Lord Essex described the qualifications of the person to whom he had entrusted the compilation ; " Mr. Thomas Taylor, formerly a sub-commissioner in the Court of Claims, had the curiositie (and no other as I know of besides himself) to keep books of entrys of the disposition of all lands made by that commission. This is the man whom I have employed by comparing his books with the other records to see what can by this means be discovered to belong to the Crown. For what relates to the Records, this person Mr. Taylor is a very able man, and indeed, the only man in the Kingdom that can do a work of this nature." A further letter from the Lord Lieutenant to his secretary indicating conditions under which these Books were compiled may be given ; it is dated January 23rd, 1674-5 : " Upon this occasion I must remind you of a passage . . . that happened between my Lord of Arlington and me ; it was concerning the preparing of books for the discovery of concealed lands in Ireland, and you cannot but call to mind how ill his lordship took it, that such a work had been so long in hand, and he knew nothing thereof, and yet when he saw what orders I had received and in what manner I was directed to proceed his lordship rested fully satisfied with what I had done."

Some six months later the Books were ready for transmission to the King, the Lord Lieutenant notifying Mr. Harbord on June 20th, 1675, that " the bearer Mr. Taylor " was then proceeding to England with the volumes adding that Mr. Taylor " had engaged " that no person would be allowed to view them until he, Lord Essex, had arrived. Their safe delivery may be inferred from the Warrant of March 17th, 1676, addressed by the King to the Lord Lieutenant :[110]

" Warrant for paying £500 as a free gift to Thomas Taylor who had by the Lord Lieutenant's direction drawn out several large books containing a complete account of the disposition of all such lands as were returned forfeited in Ireland according to the Down Admeasurement as the same were disposed of by the Commissioners of the late Court of Claims which work will be of great use in discovering such concealed forfeited lands there as are unjustly detained, which, when discovered, may be applied to the satisfaction of the interests there yet remaining unsatisfied, and will likewise promote the final settlement of that Kingdom."

In course of time these Books, forming 16 large folio volumes and expressing the particulars above indicated in respect of 28 counties of Ireland, were acquired by the Marquis of Buckingham and later by Lord Ashburnham ; eventually they were purchased by Government and deposited in the Royal Irish Academy. The series is described in the 56th Report (pp. 406-7) of the D.K. of the Public Records.

The title-pages of these volumes may here first be noted :

> " The Distribution of Forfeited Land in Ireland pursuant to the Acts of Settlement and Explanation composed by Thomas Taylor, Esq., by command of his Excellency Arthur Earl of Essex, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in the year 1677."

While the foregoing appears only in the volume for Dublin, Wicklow and Carlow the following title-page, suitably adapted appears in all the Books :

> " A Distribution of Forfeited Land in the counties of Dublin, Wicklow . . . Returned by the Downe Survey showing whose they were in Anno, 1641.

[109] Quoted in H.M.C. 8th Rep. (Ashburnham collection) App. (pt. II.) p. 2. On the subject of " concealed lands " Lord Essex wrote to Lord Ranelagh on Jan, 12, 1674-5 : " Upon death of Lord Dillon who left no sons, that honour and estate going to a cousin of his I find many people offering at discoveries of several lands which he possessed and did not of right belong to him . . . however the proprietors in his time were glad to shelter themselves under his name and these now fearing an enquiry are, as I hear, labouring to get some other great man to patronize their estates . . . most tho' not all of these lands are in the province of Connaught . . . and I do rather tell your lordship of this particular estate because I know it to be one of the greatest covers of concealed lands in this kingdom." —Letters, cited, p. 12. See, also, 14 and 15 Chas, 2. c. 2, sec. 10 : " And whereas many being conscious of their own guilt or evil intentions with respect to rebellion begun 23 Octr. 1641 have made private settlements of their estates, and many of our protestant subjects having formerly mortgaged their lands, etc., unto such as have forfeited the same have notwithstanding entered upon and kept possession of our right . . you are to make discovery of all such."

and to whom they are now sett out by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation Tome, 1st Vol. 1st."

That there is here a set of Books having features in common with those characteristic of the Auditor-General's series will already have been obvious. Before intimating the bearing of this Taylor compilation on the origin of the latter, the relationship in matters of detail may, briefly, be more closely examined.

At the beginning of every barony in the Taylor volumes there are headings announcing the particulars contained in the various columns. These headings are of the same character and appear in the same order as those furnished in the Auditor-General's Books as evidenced by the Quit Rent Office duplicate or copy. There is also agreement in the sequence of the specification, parish by parish, of the same details explicitly stated in the Taylor set to have been derived from the Civil and Down Surveys; on the distribution side, however, the instruments of title, dates of decrees and certificates of the Court of Claims, are furnished, these being indicated merely by markings, as already stated in the Auditor-General's and Quit Rent Office series.

The absence of Books for certain counties—Roscommon, Mayo, Galway and Clare is explained by the fact that at the date of compilation the claims of transplanted persons had not been determined.

Save, therefore, as regards precise details of instruments of title, difference in arrangement of volumes and particulars governed by the date of compilation, it can be said that, basically, these Books are of the same nature as the Books formerly belonging to the Auditor-General and known as Books of Survey and Distribution.

The origin and purpose of the Taylor Books could scarcely have been more explicitly stated than in the documents quoted above. If Books expressing similar particulars had been prepared, or were in course of preparation, by the commissioners of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, what necessity, it may be enquired, existed for the King's command. The necessity, indeed, for that command strongly induces the opinion that authority for such a compilation or, for that matter, of subsequent compilations on similar lines, did not reside in the Acts of Settlement and Explanation.

Origin of The Auditor's Series

In the statement of Mr. Hardinge, cited above, it is very definitely intimated that the records of the proceedings of the Court of Claims handed over, as he states, in 1680, included the Books of Survey and Distribution whose origin was in question. Elsewhere he gives the year 1678 as the approximate date of transfer. Whichever be the correct year, it may here be pointed out and recalled that the Books of the Auditor-General expressed the distribution of lands under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation subsequent to 1680. Numerous patents were taken out between this year and 1684 as indicated by the Abstracts printed in the third volume of the Record Commission's Reports; and, likewise, grants between 1684-88 issued under the Commission of Grace.

The opinion may again be expressed that the Books handed over were those directed to be compiled by the commissioners under sections 6 and 46 of the Act of Settlement which, ultimately reaching the Surveyor-General's office, were later known as the "Books of Survey and Distribution, 1661."

It would seem then more likely that the Auditor-General's set was of relative departmental composition or origin, an assumption warranted, apart from other considerations, by contemporaneous textual observations such as "discharged on plea of Disclaimer by Order of Exchequer Michaelmas Term 1681." [111] While Howard in his Treatise on the Revenue is silent as to the authority under which the Auditor's set was compiled, he indicates, as already pointed out, its utility, if not purpose, in forming a basis for the issuing of the Auditor's constats and for founding his reports on references from the Court of Exchequer. The certitude and exactness demanded in the specification of the Quit Rent payable, as well as of the lands out of which they issued, with their locations, could only be assured, it is thought, by such a compilation as that represented by the Books of Survey and Distribution. It may be suggested, therefore, that the necessity for such a series, in this particular connection, would have arisen independently of the composition of similar Books for other purposes. Finally, it is considered that the markings, leading to the various titles of the persons to whom the lands were distributed were designed to facilitate easy reference to the numerous and distinct volumes in the Auditor's office containing transcripts of the decrees, certificates and grants made under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. This feature, on the face of it, indicates a system of reference the significance of which could only be understood by those charged with particular duties, a circumstance which may be thought conclusive as to the departmental origin and purpose of the Auditor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution.

The exact date when the compilation of the main body of the particulars contained in these Books began it is not easy to determine, but some guidance may be afforded by reference to yet another set and to circumstances connected with the history of the Revenue.

The Annesley Books

Documents representing the Annesley collection, received for photographing in recent years by the National Library, Dublin, described in Analecta Hibernica No. 16, included another notable set of Books of Survey and Distribution similar in character to those already described but distinguished by a particular feature. This is the specification of the amount of the Quit Rent payable to the Crown in respect of each denomination of the distributed forfeited lands; in addition the instruments of title are indicated in an adjoining column reserved for "Observations." Where lands were not liable to rent the fact is intimated as in the following instance relating to an estate of the Duke of York: "Certe. and Patent—liable to no rent" or again where some particular condition prevailed: "Provisoe pa. 77 Act of Expl. Quit Rent remitted by Letters Patent from his late Majesty." The particulars thus furnished in respect of the lands disposed of under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation—the sales are not included of the 1688 forfeitures—are of such a nature, amounting to the identification of the liability or otherwise of every denomination of land to Quit Rent, as to suggest an effort to meet the possible inadequacy or uncertainty of the existing Crown Rental; whatever the purpose, the source of this particular information is to be related to the Auditor-General's office. The heading "Rent payable to his Majesty," in conjunction with the observation, indicated above, as to a remission by "his late Majesty," suggests that the compilation of this set was begun in the reign of Charles II. When and under what circumstances, this particular series reached the Annesley collection, research has yet to disclose. In addition to the foregoing Books, the Annesley collection also contains valuable documents relative to the proceedings during the years 1700-1703 of the Trustees appointed in 1699, and of whom Mr. Francis Annesley was one, to dispose by sale of the estates and interests forfeited in 1688. These estates, under the Act 11 and 12 Wm. III, c. 2, were after their sale, to continue liable to the same rents as were payable on the 13th February, 1688. The conveyances made specify such rents. By a later Act (1 Ann. c. 2) the Trustees, with the consent of the Revenue Commissioners, were empowered to apportion these rents. It may well have been, therefore, that this particular set of Books of Survey and Distribution was made available for the use of the Trustees in the connection stated.

The Collection of Crown Revenues

Bearing further on the date of the Auditor-General's set is the resumption by the Crown in 1683 of the management of all its revenues and when "Commissioners and Governors" thereof were appointed.[112] From 1669, to that year, these revenues had been in the hands of "Farmers" who for the purposes of collection—and "slighting the course of the Exchequer,"—divided the country into districts without regard to the division by counties, appointed collectors of their own, a Clerk of Quit Rents and an Accountant-General.[113] The revenue from Quit Rents during this period was affected either by commissions for the reducement of such rents where they were too high, or by their discharge under orders from the Court of Exchequer, of which alterations the Auditor-General had no record. Consequently, at the conclusion of the Farms he "was not able to make out any charge for the Collection [112] Liber mun. pub. Hiberniae, vol. I, pt. II, p. 123.

[113] Howard, op. cit., vol. I, p. 58. The same author states that under the old method, that is before 1669, the Auditor-General made abstracts of the patents which were reduced under the heads of the several counties and where the several rents lay. A rent roll was transmitted by him to the second Remembrancer's Office or to the Clerk of the Pipe which last office "made out process to the respective sheriffs of the counties" for the collection of the rents. The sheriffs, when they passed their accounts, accounted with the court of Exchequer for these rents "and the whole rent roll for each county being in open court read over to the sheriff, he upon his oath gave his answer to each particular." This method of collection was inconvenient for several reasons, notably "arrears" in payment, and neglect to levy rents due, which led to a change in the method of collecting by sheriffs. "And there is one more which was thought to be of greater force . . In the year 1669 the whole revenue of this kingdom was set to farm to John Forth, of the city of London, alderman, and ten others for seven years . . . at several sums amounting in the whole to £219,500."

of the quit rents, nor was there any certain rent roll or record for that part of the revenue, but it lay wholly in the breast of the clerk of the quit rents to the farmers, and his private books . . ." [114] To remedy this position the new Commissioners of Revenue took into the Public Service the Clerk of the Quit Rents and the Accountant-General who had been employed by the Farmers ; " and a few years afterwards the Court of Exchequer ordered a new Rent Roll to be compiled according to the collection by districts from the Auditor's Books, and the original grants decrees and other records." [115] Thus, incidentally, originated the office of Clerk of the Quit rents which afterwards remained a public department.

With this period of re-organisation of the management of the Crown revenues, that is to say, the closing years of the reign of Charles II, the Auditor-General's Books of Survey and Distribution, in their main content, it is thought, began to be compiled ; their completion must be assigned to a date subsequent to the sales in 1703, by the Trustees of the Forfeited Estates of 1688. The letter, however, of the Clerk of the Quit Rents, cited above (p. xxiv), is open to the interpretation that the Surveyor-General's set was then, A.D. 1711, the only official one in existence ; but a letter written by the same gentleman some years previously, on the 22nd November, 1698, creates the impression that two sets were at this time available for inspection :

" I have . . . examined the Survey Books of Distribution and Decree and Letters Patent of Sir Valentine Browne for remitting the Quit Rent and find he claimed and was decreed . . . but I find by the Downe Survey and Books of Distribution the lands to contain . . ." [116] The documents referred to, in conjunction with the Books examined, may be said to localise the places of examination as those of the respective offices of the Auditor and Surveyor-General.

The Auditor-General and Clerk of Quit Rents

Before considering the origin of the duplicate set of the Auditor-General's Books, formerly lodged in the Quit Rent Office, the mutual interests and concerns of both departments should first be made clear. These are indicated in a report[117] written by the Clerk of the Quit Rent Office, Mr. G. S. Smythe in 1869 when the question of a new custody for the former Auditor-General's collections—this office having been abolished, 1822, under Act 3 Geo. IV, cap. 56—was under renewed discussion.[118]

" From the creation in 1669 of the Office of Clerk of the Quit Rents the most intimate relations have always existed between the Quit Rent Office and that of the Auditor-General, the records in the custody of the latter officer being indispensable to the management and collection of revenue. All patents . . . all orders of Court of Exchequer for putting rents in or striking them out of charge in fact all instruments affecting the Revenue were entered in the Auditor's Office and the requisite addition or alteration or discharge noted on his Rental and thereupon a Constat containing a brief abstract of the new charge, discharge or other alteration with date of patent or instrument on which it was founded was sent by him to the Clerk of the Quit Rents that he might make his rental correspond. . . . Efficiency of the Quit Rent department was dependent on the facility of obtaining information from Records in charge of the Auditor-General. If a rent was found omitted or entered erroneously he corrected the record and caused a similar correction to be made in the Rental in the Quit Rent Office. He has also furnished General Report on lists of arrears of Quit etc. Rents . . . to assist the Collectors . . . and he exercised what might be termed a supervision over the duties of the Quit Rent Office which since 1669 was under a distinct control, but always considered and treated as a detached member of the Auditor's Office." From either circa A.D. 1683 or 1693, it may be commented, would have been the more correct year for the close connection indicated.[119] Mr. Smythe throws further light on the relationship of the two offices by an instance of the dual positions held by one individual : " For many years up to his death in 1815 Mr. William Bower held the position in the Auditor's Office (First Clerk) . . . . and during the same time he was Clerk in the Quit Rent Office, and performed the duties of the latter situation in the Auditor's Office with the cognizance of the Commissioners of the Revenue, and subsequently of the Commissioners of Excise, in whom was vested the control of the Quit Rent department [120] . . . On consideration of the several facts stated [119] Howard, op. cit., p. 54, states that " the establishment of the kingdom " was settled in 1693. In this connection it may be noted that the available Q.R.O. letters to the Board of Revenue would appear to begin in the letter book 1689–1696, 1A-41-88, P.R.O.

it will appear that up to the year 1669, the Auditor-General performed all the duties since discharged by the Clerk of the Quit Rents so far as they related to the charge and receipt of those rents; that solely to enable him to perform those duties all grants and other instruments on which rents were reserved were entered in his office."

Origin of Quit Rent Office Set

If no other circumstances than those indicated were to be cited they might be considered as providing reasonable grounds for inferring the origin of the Quit Rent Office set of Books of Survey and Distribution. It will be recalled however that the Auditor's own Books were in the Quit Rent Office in 1759 and that a copy was in the Forfeiture Office. Apart from facilitating the making of a copy for official purposes, which may easily be imagined, it is thought that the circumstances of the Auditor's Books being away from their proper habitat was originally governed by other requirements. In this connection the Act 1 and 2 Anne, cap. 21, sec. 2 (English) directed that all the deeds, records and papers "whatsoever" belonging to the Trustees of Forfeited Estates, 1688, were to be transferred to the keeping of the Commissioners of Revenue. The documents so delivered, in 1703, are listed in the second volume of the Record Commissions Reports (pp. 614-17). In turn the Commissioners of Revenue appointed the "Clerk of the Forfeitures" whose particular business was the care of these records, making searches, and giving copies.[121]

Thus had come under the control of the Commissioners of Revenue the two departments of the "Clerk of the Quit Rents" and the "Clerk of the Forfeitures" both of which were most likely housed in the one building.

It may, therefore, be suggested that the Auditor-General for the purpose of completing his Books of Survey and Distribution in so far as the entering of the names of the purchasers of the Forfeited Estates of 1688 was concerned had recourse to the records of the Forfeiture Office. If so, then the absence of the Books from their proper habitat is explained.[122] It may also be conjectured that when the necessary entries were completed the Books were returned to the Auditor-General via the "Clerk of the Quit Rents" by whom they were detained pending their copying. That they were for a very considerable period in the care of the latter is indicated by the year inscribed in one of the duplicate volumes 1739, as that of its examination, or comparison, and from the date, 1759, of the return of the set. If anything this is indeed further evidence of the very close relationship of the two departments.

To conclude this section, it would appear from the report of the "Clerk of the Quit Rents," Mr. G. S. Smythe quoted above, that in 1829 on the abolition of the Office of "Clerk of the Forfeitures," its records were placed in charge of the Quit Rent department for some years, but that under an order of the Commissioners of Woods, Forests and Land Revenues, dated 31st October, 1840, they were handed over to the officer in charge of the Auditor's Records.[123] It should be added that the control and management of the office of the "Clerk of the Quit Rents" had passed in 1827 to the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, from the Revenue authorities.[124]

[122] In the 4th vol. (p. 25) of the Index to his Collection in the King's Inns Library, Dublin, Prendergast furnishes the following note under the date March 4, 1879: "Edward L'Estrange told me he found a correspondence in his office (Quit Rents) showing that the Trustees for Sale of Forfeited Estates in 1703 applied for the Books of Distribution and had the use of them and marked them (with the purchasers' names, etc.) as they are now found." It is thought that the correspondence referred to at p. vi is that cited at the opening section of this note. The powers of the Trustees came to an end 24 June, 1703, and their documents were handed over to the Commrs. of Revenue by deed dated 3 August of the same year. It is most unlikely that the Trustees themselves would have marked the Auditor's Books as indicated by Prendergast's note. Mr. L'Estrange was Senior Clerk in the Q.R.O. in 1863.

[123] Cf. Wood's Guide, p. 152: "This office (Forfeitures) continued in existence until 1823 when it was abolished, and in 1831 the records were placed in the temporary charge of the Clerk of the Quit Rents from whence they were transferred in 1840 to the Record branch of the office of the Paymaster of the Civil Services."

By the Board, W. Wardley"—Letter Book 2B, 44, 62 P.R.O. A similar order dated 18th Decr., 1827 directed the transfer of records. LB: 2B, 35, 37. It would appear, it may be added, that the control of the Auditor's records by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests was frequently recommended. Smythe in his report, cited above, states: "So convinced was the Vice-Treasurer of Ireland of the intimate relationship between the Auditor's Records and the duties of the Clerk of the Quit Rents and of those Records being what he termed an appurtenant to the office of the latter that on the 11th July, 1831, he recommended to the Lords of H.M. Treasury that their control and direction should be transferred to the Commissioners of Woods in order that both offices should be under the same management. The proposed transfer was also contemplated in 1860 and in a report made to you (Commrs. of Woods) from this office on 19 Jan., 1864, the objections made in 1831 were observed upon and it was stated that 'it would be for the public benefit that the Keeper's (of the Landed Estates Records) Office should be placed under your control'." The recommendations thus made were not approved.

Some Previous Publications

Besides the edition of a Book of Survey and Distribution for Westmeath, printed from a volume in the Surveyor-General's collection, there have been publications from other series. The appendix to vol. I of the History and Antiquities of Kilkenny by the Revd. Wm. Healy, P.P. (1893) purports to represent the Book of Survey and Distribution for that county as " copied from the original MS. preserved in the Record Office, Dublin, by the Author." While the names of the old and new proprietors are stated neither the Down Survey reference numbers nor any particulars of instruments of title are given in Father Healy's book. With the issue of the Cork Historical and Arch. Society Journal, July–December, 1932 (vol. xxxvii), was begun the publication of a Book of Survey and Distribution for that county " copied from the MS. volume in Library of R.I.A. by Anne Waters " ; this belongs to the set " composed by Thomas Taylor " described above.

Students may be reminded that since the Auditor-General's series had contained a more complete account of the final distribution of land under the Acts of Settlement, Commission of Grace, etc., than other sets, including the Headfort series in the P.R.O. (56th Report p. 307) the Quit Rent Office duplicate of the Auditor's books, described at the beginning of this introduction, should always be consulted.

In addition to the various series already mentioned, yet another set of Books of Survey and Distribution formerly existed amongst the muniments at Kilkenny Castle ; according to a letter from the Revd. J. Graves to Sir John Gilbert, printed at p. 295 of the latter's Life, by R. M. Gilbert, this set was abstracted between the years 1830 and 1848.

* * * * * *

For topographical and genealogical research the Books of Survey and Distribution are of the utmost importance. Representing, as already stated, abstracts made before the fire of 1711 of the Strafford Civil and Down Surveys they have preserved for every Irish county vital particulars of place-names, phonetically expressed, as recorded over the period 1636–60. The loss which otherwise would have been sustained through the destruction of the surveys mentioned has thus been considerably mitigated. It has been pointed out that the well-known Down Survey maps, available to investigators since 1908, are unintelligible without the corresponding Books of Survey and Distribution ; in this connection attention may be drawn to the fact that so far back as 1812 the publication of the latter was recommended in one of the Record Commission's Reports (Vol. I, p. 414). In conjunction with the Down Survey, as superimposed on the Ordnance Survey six-inch maps, the Books of Survey and Distribution provide exceptional material for toponymical studies.

In the specification, county by county, of the names of proprietors of land prior and subsequent to the Commonwealth settlement, the genealogist is provided with details of the losses no less than the gains of countless families. Here emerges the land of Ireland as it was held three centuries ago by Gaels and Gaelicised Normans, by Normans " The Old English," by " The New English " of the Elizabethan and of the later plantations and settlements. The Books of Survey and Distribution frequently provide the addresses of landholders and always the parishes in which their possessions were located, details which should prove of much help in genealogical research.

In another respect, that of statistical enquiry, these Books also provide material worthy of investigation. Hardinge, according to Prendergast, used them for the purpose of a section of the Appendix (E) to his paper on Surveys in Ireland. The relative section (pp. 100-4) is entitled " Table exhibiting the number of Irish Plantation Acres, Profitable and Unprofitable, Admeasured as Forfeited in each Barony." There is, however, a wide measure of disagreement between this " Table " and the " Particular of the Contents of the Baronys admeasured by Dr. Petty " printed at p. 137 of Larcom's edition of the History of the Down Survey. For example the latter shows for Dublin the total area admeasured as forfeited in that county to have been 73,894 acres plantation measures, whereas Hardinge states it to have been 64,931 acres of the same measure—a difference of close on 9,000 acres. The explanation in this, as in other instances, would appear to be that Hardinge deducted the acreages restored to former proprietors under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation from the total of the acreages originally admeasured as forfeited.

The Books of Survey and Distribution should also help to determine another statistical problem, that is as to the number of Catholic landowners in 1641. Petty's figure of 3,000 is challenged by Professor Butler in his " Confiscation in Irish History " (pp. 156-7) where he states that " we are warranted in assuming that for the whole island the number . . . . was at least 8,000 and may have been as many as 10,000 or even 12,000." It is thought that the careful examination, county by county, of the Books of Survey and Distribution should resolve this problem as likewise that of the total acreage forfeited (1641) and estimated by Hardinge at 1,973,769 plantation acres.

The foregoing is a reprint of the general introduction which appeared in the Roscommon, Mayo and Galway volumes. A reference it contains on p. vii, col. 1, par. 2 to the headings of the columns refers to the texts for these counties.

Likewise regarding a footnote (12) on p. viii, The Civil Survey, vol. x. Miscellanea, containing descriptions of barony boundaries, should be consulted.

The Strafford Survey, represented by the main particulars in the text of this volume, was made for the purpose of a projected plantation of Connacht and adjoining regions (1637-38), under the direction of the Lord Deputy whose name it commemorates. The evidence of the fact that the Strafford Survey was one of the outstanding sources of the present series has already been explained at length, particularly in the introduction to Vol. I. (Co. Roscommon) xxxiv and xxxix. It may however be recalled that the Strafford Survey consisted of maps and of books made up in baronies, bound in parchment, and somewhat similar in format to the Civil Survey of some twenty years later, which latter, perhaps, it may have inspired, considering the predilection of State departments for precedents.

As will be seen from the present text the Strafford Survey provided a microscopic description of the land, its denominational contents in quarters, cartrons, and other land-measures, to be later specified, all equated in Irish acres, and supplemented by a description of the soil and its extent under timber.

Barony by barony, and parish by parish, the proprietorship of each denomination over the whole county emerges, as at the year 1641, particular interest attaching to those instances of family settlements and partnerships in land-holding strongly suggestive of arrangements sanctioned under Brehon decrees. At a later stage, in the history of Connacht and Clare, when confiscation was the order of the day, and terror of transplantation that of the night, and when possessions in 1641 had to be proved, it was directed that no new commissions in this respect were necessary since the Strafford Survey was then available. This Survey, it should be added, also consisted of county, barony and parish maps. In the absence of these and of six of the Down Survey barony maps, the Manuscripts Commission authorized the reproduction of the map of Clare county from Petty's Hiberniae Delineatio commonly called Petty's Atlas; there is also included with this volume a specimen O.S. sheet from the superimposition series which will be explained at a later stage.

The present text is derived from the two volumes of Books of S. & D. numbered respectively 4 and 5 in the Q.R.O. collection. Of the series of which these two volumes are part there is a description in the opening pages of the first introduction—(v-ix). It may be recalled here that it was from the certificate of examination given at the end of the barony of Corcomroe (p. 259), that the approximate date 1739, of the transcription of the Auditor-General's set for the Q.R.O. was ascertained.

Territorial proximity is not a characteristic of the order of appearance of the baronies—nine in number; with the adjoining eastern baronies of Tulla (p. 1) and Bunratty (p. 96) is included the north-western barony of Corcomroe (p. 187) these three forming the first of the two volumes comprising the text; in the second, the arrangement is more satisfactory, the southern adjoining baronies of Islands (p. 265) and Clonderalaw (p. 325) being followed by the south-western regions of Moyarta (p. 372) and western Ibrickan (p. 413); after these come the adjoining baronies of Burren (p. 443) and Inchiquin (p. 497).

The pagination of the two volumes is continuous from p. 1 to p. 259 for the first part and from p. 265 to p. 581 inclusive for the second part.* Blank pages between the baronies were used for rough lists of the parishes making reference easier for official enquiries. A new list has been compiled for this publication and appears in the Table of Contents.

"An Alphabet of the County Clare", or index of lands, in each of the nine baronies precedes the text. Here the barony is the unit of the index, the lands of each being separately and alphabetically indexed on the basis of the sequence of the text; at each alphabetical letter the baronies are grouped in similar sequence so that the location of most of the denominations in the text beginning with the same letter may easily be perceived. For lands omitted from this Alphabet see p. 605. Towards the solution of difficulties which may arise in the process of identification of the old with the new, some territorial changes subsequent to the text may first briefly be noticed. These consist of the division of baronies, the creation of new civil parishes, the transfer of parishes and of lands to new locations.

Powers to divide and create new baronies date from 1772, and, in 1823 the Grand Juries were directed by 4 Geo. IV, c. 33 to divide into two parts baronies exceeding 50,000 acres (Irish measure). Both Tulla and Bunratty were divided into the categories of Upper and Lower between 1831 and 1841, Tulla Lower being given 73,454 statute acres and the Upper section 94,919; similarly, when divided Bunratty's Lower section contained 57,314 statute acres and the Upper part 53,595. This division appears for the first time in the Census of 1841, the whole baronies being the units of the 1821 and 1831 returns.

The creation of new civil parishes, and the transfer of parishes and lands from one barony to another were the outcome of powers given to the Lord Lieutenant and Grand Juries under the Boundary Code; this consisted of the following Acts: 6 Geo. IV c. 99, 6 & 7, Wm IV, c. 84, and 17 Vict. c. 17. Within this legislation seven new civil parishes came into existence in Clare. The old parishes out of which they were created are given within brackets. The new civil parishes created were (1) O Brien's Bridge, Tulla Lower B. (Killaloe), (2) St. Patrick's—remainder in Limerick, Bunratty Lower B. (Kilquane), (3) Kiltoraght, Corcomroe B. (Kilfenora), (4) Killaspuglonane, Corcomroe B, (Kilmacrehy), (5) Kilmaley, Islands B. (Drumcliff), (6) Inagh, Inchiquin B. (Dysert), (7) Ruan, Inchiquin B. (Dysert).

Transfer of parishes and lands. With the exception of the townland of Bunabbia South, two parishes of Tulla Lower barony—Kilmurry and Kilfinaghta, were transferred to the barony of Bunratty Lower. Likewise the townland of Cappaduff (Islands) and Knockaphort, in the parish of Inishcaltra, were transferred from the barony of Tulla Upper to the barony of Leitrim, Co. Galway, under the Act 6 & 7 Wm. IV, c. 84. The latter lands, and islands, were retransferred to Clare county when under the Local Government (Ireland) Act of 1898 part of the barony of Leitrim, County Galway, containing 23,162 statute acres (including 6,398 acres under water) became part of the new part barony of Leitrim, Co. Clare. Such details are necessary for students working on the old and the modern maps and, indeed, it should be added that the lands comprising Clare's new part barony were represented by the Electoral Divisions of Drummaan, Inishcaltra North and Mountshannon in Scariff union, and the parishes of Clonrush, Kilbarron—islands in Lough Derg (part)—remainder in Ormond Lower, Co. Tipperary —and Inishcaltra (part) remainder in Tulla Upper barony.

Under this readjustment in the 19th century, Clonrush parish brought to Clare 71 islands in Lough Derg, including Crane, and Illaunhobert; also the famous island of Inishcaltra (Holy Island) which gave its name to the parish, and containing approximately 50 statute acres.

The seventeenth century Strafford Survey of both these parishes of Clonrush and Inishcaltra has been published in the Galway Book of S. & D., volume III, in the present series—Clonrush at p. 222 and Inishcaltra at p. 224. The former parish, the name of which is derived from the townland so called, was then possessed by the Earl of Clanrickard, while the Earl of Cork was the proprietor of Inishcaltra.

It will be observed from the present text that while it opens with the parish of " Inishkalto " it bears the textual annotation opposite some items: " Surveyed in the county of Galway and half barony of Leitrim ". So far, however, as the whole of Inishcaltragh parish was concerned, this assignment was not entirely recognized by the local authorities, as evidenced by the Census of 1851. This returns part of Inishcaltra parish, represented by four townlands, as being located at that date in the barony of Tulla Upper. One of these identifiable townlands—Cooldorragha—is returned by the present text as " Cooledarragha " and by the Galway text as " Cooldorogh ". With the exception of certain " Liberties " there were no Down Survey maps for Galway; the maps then available were the Strafford maps which, as Hardinge confirms, included all parishes and townlands.[1]

By the transfer of the two parishes of Clonrush and Inishcaltra from Galway something of greater interest than the creation of a different county residence had been effected, namely the restitution to Clare of a part of the ancient kingdom of Thomond.

Its boundaries may here appropriately be noticed, and as given, on the authority of Keating, by the late Professor James Hogan, a distinguished member of the Commission:[2]

> " It extended from Loop Head in the south-western extremity of Co. Clare to a point in or near Ballaghmore, a townland and castle near Borris-on-Ossory, and from the Slieve Phelim mountains, which stretch from within eight miles of Limerick in the direction of Nenagh and Cashel, to the Slieve Aughty mountains on the borders of Co. Clare and Co. Galway. Prior to the Norman invasion Thomond

"had become reduced in extent. Ely O Carroll which lay within the limits of the ancient Thomond formed the diocese of Roscrea in the eleventh century and had evidently ceased to be regarded as part of Thomond. It would appear that from the close of the twelfth century the river Shannon formed the south and south-eastern limit of Thomond which was from this time forward somewhat larger than the present county of Clare. It included in addition the parishes of Inishcaltra and Clonrush now included in the county Galway, Castleconnell now part of the county of Limerick and probably part of North Tipperary in the vicinity of Killaloe."

As already stated Inishcaltra and Clonrush are now part of Clare.

It will be seen from the present text that ten columns are provided for the specification of the numerous items constituting the survey and distribution; these carry captions for three baronies only: Tulla, Bunratty and Corcomroe—the first three baronies of the text, and of the first volume in the Q.R.O. series for Clare; for the remaining baronies, beginning with Islands, and concluding with Inchiquin, the particulars follow in the exact order of the captions of the first baronies.

In the second, fifth and sixth columns of Tulla the captions specify the Down Survey as the source of authority for the respective particulars there given, that is to say:—"No. of the Plott in the Down Survey", "No. of Unprofitable Acres by the Down Survey", and "No. of Profitable Acres by the Down Survey"; at Corcomroe barony the same source is repeated save that the "Mark of the Plott" is substituted for the number. At Bunratty barony the captions, while otherwise similar, contain no reference whatever to the Down Survey being the source of authority.

While the Down Survey has been authenticated[3] to have been made of the nine Clare baronies, in respect of which three barony maps have survived—Bunratty, Moyarta and Corcomroe with Inchiquin unfinished—a complication arises in so far as the reference numbers, names of denominations, and other details relating to the nature of the land, as represented by the barony maps, correspond with the sections of the Book of S. & D. derived from the Strafford Survey.

Explanation of the circumstances is necessary. First of all, the arbitrary use of captions is illustrated by the fact that of the twenty volumes comprising the Book of S. & D. series, they appear in only nine, and of these some are more comprehensive than others. The whole purpose of the series was to exhibit and record, partly for revenue purposes, the distribution of the forfeited lands as defined by the D.S., and as confirmed by the Acts of Settlement and Explanation. But it is now well-known that owing to the existence of the books and maps of the Strafford Survey, for the counties ultimately reserved for the Transplantation, the D.S. of such counties was dispensed with, except in respect of the barony of Tirawley, county Mayo. Here a D.S. map was made, and, in conjunction with it, the usual Book of Reference or Terrier. This, with map, was printed as an Appendix to the second volume in this series—that for Mayo, which also included the Strafford Survey of the same volume. Reference to these will show that the D.S. in specifying the acreable contents of each denomination, included roods and perches, whereas in the Strafford Survey their omission is one of its characteristic features, as will be observed in the Roscommon, Galway and Mayo, (saving Tirawley) published Books of Survey and Distribution. There is also the absence of D.S. Books of Reference for Clare, and, more remarkable still, the names of the admeasurers, as in the instance of all D.S. work, have not been recorded, nor indeed for the other counties first mentioned[4]; in contrast the name of the admeasurer of Tirawley barony is given by Hardinge in his Digest of the Down Survey. Nevertheless, it has been recorded, by the same authority, that the Down Survey of Clare was undertaken by Petty in pursuance of instructions dated 18 August, 1656, but that the maps were not returned to the Surveyor-General until—and here it is believed a clue is suggested—1659.

What then happened? When in 1653 the Transplantation was directed by the Commonwealth legislation of that year, six counties were reserved for the "habitation of the Irish nation". From this fund of land assigned to "Irish Papist" proprietors, two counties (Sligo and Leitrim) were withdrawn to meet the pressing demands of the officers and soldiers of the Commonwealth Army in respect of arrears of pay; then for a similar reason the barony of Tirawley, adjoining Killala Bay, was withdrawn leaving only three counties and part of a fourth for the transplanters. But there was to be a further reduction in the extent of the land originally directed to be reserved for transplanters.

Mindful of the interests of those who had prepared the way for his entry in 1649, Cromwell directed that Clare was to be reserved for his supporters[5], hence the contract with Petty to which reference has been made. But the Down Survey of Clare was the last to be made, not reaching the Surveyor-General's Office until 1659. The delay was fatal for the Commonwealth interests, the Restoration having ensued before these were satisfied, the Royalist supporters of the House of Stuart obtaining the lands which Cromwell had designed for his own henchmen!

The inference that haste was an urgent consideration in the making of the Down Survey of Clare, suggests an explanation of the complication indicated.

It will be recalled that Strafford's proposed plantation included, besides Connacht and Clare, part of Tipperary, Limerick and part of Wicklow. When reporting to the Commissioners of the Commonwealth on the Strafford maps for Tipperary the Surveyor-General said: " That as to the quantity of land, the number of acres contained in each barony and within every parish or town nothing can be expected more exact than what may be found in the papers, books and plotts of the said baronies "[6]. Then follows: " A Particular of what books of References, Field Books, County Maps, Barony Maps or Parish Maps as were delivered to Dr. Petty this 22nd May 1655 ".

In the event, Petty decided to use the Strafford maps for Tipperary but took the precaution of appointing Dr. Patrick Raggett, to whom detailed instructions were given as to the collation of the mearings with the Civil Survey. Whatever revisions became necessary were to be made by Dr. Raggett on the back of the Strafford maps. Hence will be found in Hardinge's digest the name of Patrick Raggett as the admeasurer of certain Tipperary baronies.

A precedent was available therefore for the use of the Clare Strafford Survey. The present text amply evidences the skill and care with which it was made, particularly with regard to the parochial location of denominations, apart from the striking specification of land-holding family partnerships. The decisions of the " sworn men ", or juries, are frequently quoted. On p. 12 will be found this example:

> " Carrowkeel a parcel of mountain in common between the parish of Tomgraney and the parish of Feakle as it was given by the 18 sworn men of these parishes vizt. Tomgraney, Feakle and Moynoe ".

[5]. Petty, Hist. of the Down Survey, p. 224. ed. Larcom.
[6]. Ibid, p. 57.

Again, the land-measure of the quarter was the unit of the Survey and the pains taken to return the constituents comprising it—cartrons etc.—is apparent throughout the whole text. Names of sub-denominations are returned to an extent that should be infinitely pleasing to students of place-names. In parenthesis, attention may be called to the frequent difficulty experienced by the writer in finding in the modern Census of Townlands corresponding names. In this connection it is observed that in Larcom's Report to the Commissioners of 1844, appointed to enquire into the Ordnance Survey Memoir of Ireland, the Clare Book of S. & D. was not among the sources consulted for the names of baronies, parishes and townlands.

Other evidence which would appeal to Petty may be quoted: " There is 1/10 of 9/10 of this parcel (Ballymacdonell) for which the sworn men could find no proprietor "—Killuran parish, p. 71. So far as old land-measures are of interest, the text is a veritable encyclopaedia: quarters, ploughlands, sessiaghs, cartrons, carrowmeers and gneeves which are invariably defined: 4 cartrons to the quarter: 2 cartrons equal to ½ a sessiagh; 2½ sessiaghs to 1⅔ quarters. These denominational contents are rarely departed from, though there are exceptions as in the instance of " Carne a parcel of 12 days ploughing " (p. 230). Good land is indicated in Islands (p. 317) and Clonderalaw (p. 361) baronies where extensive acreages are described by the abbreviation " cor " meaning corcasses—land adaptable for tillage or meadow.

All this minuteness characterizes the specification of proprietorship as at 1641, particularly in regard to family partnerships or settlements suggestive of Brehon decrees. At, for example, the denomination of Skeaghvickenchroe, containing one quarter, with its ten sub-denominations, the individual shares of 15 distinct persons bearing the name of McEnchroe are recorded in fractions of 1/3, 3/20, 1/15 and 1/30 (P. 535 Inchiquin barony). The name of the denomination appears to incorporate that of the family but in the modern Census of Townlands it is given again phonetically—Skaghvick*incrow*. Incidentally the Earl of Inchiquin is returned as the proprietor at the Restoration. Other family settlements worthy of notice are those of the O Hehirs (pp. 286 to 290, barony of Islands) where remarkable fractional divisions as well as " equal shares " are recorded.

The foregoing features of the present text have been quoted not only by way of bringing to the notice of students its great importance, but by way of verification of its intrinsic value to both Petty and the Surveyor-General and, as will be seen later, to those responsible for the issue of Letters Patent. The question then arises, in the circumstances of the urgency and delay of the Down Survey of Clare, whether the precedent of the appointment of Mr. Patrick Raggett to supervise the Strafford Tipperary maps was not followed in respect of those for Clare County. In the light of the almost complete agreement between the reference numbers, and names of denominations between the present text and the Down Survey barony maps, one is compelled to say that the latter represent the adoption of those of the Strafford Survey. But there is also evidence in the Down Survey barony maps of a small measure of supervision. The Strafford Survey did not distinguish proprietors in their denominational capacities, no more than it gave land a denominational significance. These were characteristics of both the Civil and Down Surveys. The imprimatur, however, of a Down Survey examiner, is expressed on the three barony maps in the description of some denominations as representing "Protestant Land"; and where the owner was the Earl of Thomond.

Superficially, the maps bear evidence of haste, that for Bunratty carrying the date 1658-9 below its title; the caption however is incomplete in so far as after the word "By" the name of the surveyor or admeasurer is blank. Where "Protestant Land" is shown the reference numbers are those of the present text. Though "Anno" is inscribed in the caption of the Corcomroe map, the year is not given nor the name of the surveyor. Here, notably in the parish of Kilmanaheen, the reference numbers at "Protestant land" do not correspond with the present text. Finally, the Moyarta barony map is without date, or name of surveyor, but here there is agreement between the reference numbers of both documents.

The Strafford map of the barony of Athlone, published with the Roscommon volume in the present series, shows that buildings of all descriptions were recorded, but it is not easy to say if revisions in this connection appear in the D. S. barony maps.

It may be said unhesitatingly that the Clare barony maps represent the conjunction of two surveys, the one for the purpose of the Strafford plantation and the other for that by the Commonwealth, the former being preponderantly the major work. One cannot escape the similarity in procedure, Petty seeming to follow Strafford in the cartographic expression of the territorial units of parish, barony and county maps. But here it would seem a name is lost to fame—that is of the surveyor or cartographer who designed the format known as the Strafford Survey.

It should be added that the barony maps have been superimposed on the six-inch maps, original edition, of the Ordnance Survey, by Mr. Robert Johnston formerly of that Department; these have been lodged by the Manuscripts Commission in the National Library where photostats can be obtained. They readily show the old and the new place-names, and a special feature has been the inscription of the names of the proprietors before the confiscation by the Commonwealth government. With this volume is presented a specimen photostat of O.S. sheet 34, representing a section of Bunratty barony; here the place of inauguration—Maghadhair—by the MacNamaras of the kings of the O Brien race may be identified in the townlands of Corbally and part of Toonagh, the remainder of which is on sheet 35. Elsewhere, on other maps, place-names in the text have disappeared. What was Carrowatta, for example, is now Woodpark on O.S. 51. The text, occasionally, in this connection, is helpful, as at p. 176 where it is indicated that the denomination of Enagh was granted by the name of Smythstowne to Sir Henry Ingoldsby, a Cromwellian officer, and Smithstown it has remained.

The right-hand or distribution side of the text may now be noticed. It includes a wide variety of interests—persons who were restored or had received decrees of Innocence; those who had obtained Act of Settlement grants before the 1st September 1663, that is to say Protestants who had obtained lands and who were known as "Connaught Purchasers"; persons who were called the "Trustees of the '49 Officers"; transplanters who had obtained "Connaught Certificates" in 1676, and, finally, those persons who had obtained lands by purchase in 1703-4 from the Trustees of the forfeited Estates. With regard to the last-named interest there is happily available the specialized study of "The Williamite Confiscation in Ireland 1690-1703" by Dr. J. G. Simms; it is volume VII in Studies in Irish History, edited by Doctors Moody, Edwards & Beckett[7].

The sources of title of the grantees whose names appear in column 8 are as a rule indicated in the Books of S. & D., by one or other of the symbols printed at p. xlvii. Very sparing use, however, has been made of them by the 17th century compiler of the original text. For example, only one appears throughout the barony of Tulla, this indicating sales by the Trustees of the Forfeited Estates in 1703, thus ⊗; indeed this symbol appears in all the baronies except Ibrickan, then in the sole possession of the Earl of Inchiquin; it is, indeed, most prominent in the extreme south-western barony of the county indicating that the greater part of Moyarta, the estate of Lord Clare, had been sold by the Trustees. The conveyance to Francis Burton and others printed in the 15th Report of the Irish Record Commission[8] recites that in addition to Moyarta, the lands conveyed were located in the baronies of Clonderalaw, Inchiquin, Bunratty, Islands, Burren, Tulla and Corcomroe, being formerly the estate of Daniel (O Brien) late Viscount Clare, attainted.

In Bunratty, Act of Settlement Certificates and patents, when given, are indicated by ✠ while Certificates by the Court of Claims, or to transplanters under the Commission of 1676, may be indicated by the sign ∠. Except for ⊗, there are no symbols in other baronies notably Burren, Inchiquin and Ibrickan. Neither Decrees of Innocence nor Commission of Grace grants are indicated. For the former there is, however, in the Q.R.O. collection a certified return, signed by R. Chappell, Deputy Auditor-General, specifying from the " Roll of Innocents ", in the Auditor-General's office, the names of persons, lands and acreages in this category.[9] By way of guidance these are given here, the figures in brackets being the acres (Irish) decreed; the names of the baronies in which the lands resided precede the other details:

Bunratty: John McNemara (1330); Bunratty and Clonderalaw: Teige McMahon and his mother (2431); Bunratty: Pierce Creagh (1700); Burren: Lady Blake (1234); Inchiquin: Francis Browne (20), William Nealan (2098); Moyarta, Clonderalaw, Bunratty, Islands, Inchiquin, Tulla, Corcomroe, Burren: Lord Clare (27,961); Inchiquin, Tulla, Corcomroe, Burren, Islands: the Earl of Inchiquin (25,576).

To the foregoing list should be added the names of John Cooper and Mary his wife, of Meelick, who was the widow of Conor O Brien of Leamanach.[10]

Henry, the seventh Earl of Thomond, did not require a decree of Innocence. Resident in England, and being a Protestant, his vast estates escaped the general forfeiture. Frost[11] recalls that through his wife's sister, who was married to Henry Cromwell, " the Earl was allowed to enter into possession of his estates before the Restoration ". Even so he took good care to obtain a grant of all his lands from Charles II; it is dated 1st September 1661 and was based on an inquisition taken before Strafford in 1637, wherein was returned the lands of Henry and Barnaby, late earls of Thomond. By this grant the seventh earl obtained confirmation of the grant by James I dated 19th January, 1620, to his grandfather Donough, which included lands in each of the nine baronies of the county including the whole of Ibrickan, which latter contained approximately 13,000 Irish profitable acres, together with numerous chief rents.[12]

As illustrating the continuity of English interest, English law and land-tenure, it is noted that in the foregoing grant by James I, Perrott's Composition Deed of 1585 is recited, parties to which were Donogh, Earl of Thomond and Morrogh, Baron of Inchiquin.

Hardiman, (O Flaherty, The Irish of Iar Connaught p. 359) it may appropriately be recalled, prints an interesting letter from Elizabeth I, to her Lord Deputy Sidney in 1577 in which is recited the sovereignty of the claims of Connor, third Earl of Thomond, from which a very brief quotation may be made:

> " Where the said earl pretends an ancient government by way of commandment over the freeholders within Thomond especially in making of surnames and after the decease of the chief of every name, to allow the next captain or successor which, he says, hath been heretofore beneficial and profitable to him and to his ancestors . . . that the Wardships of their heirs may be at his disposition as his heir by his Tenure ought to be Ward unto us."

Though this third earl received a pension of £200 a year from Elizabeth I, he nevertheless begged to have freedom of cess on all his own lands in eight baronies besides Ibrickan.

To return to the " Innocents ", Morrogh O Brien, sixth Baron was advanced to the Earldom of Inchiquin by Charles II, by patent dated at Cologne 21 October 1654.[13] By Section XV of the Act of Settlement he was restored to his estate receiving a grant dated 22 March 1666 of his lands in the baronies of Inchiquin, Corcomroe, Burren, Bunratty, Tulla, Islands and Moyarta.[14]

Finally, Sir Daniel O Brien, who was created Viscount O Brien of Clare by patent of 11 July 1662,[15] received entire restitution of his estates by Clause CXI of the Act of Explanation.[16] The draft proviso for his restoration, printed in the Calendar of State Papers (I) 1663-65 p. 94, while expressing much gratitude cannot however, be said to have been prophetic:

> " And whereas the King is pleased to manifest his Royal apprehensions of the eminent services which the House and family of the O Briens of Thomond have upon all occasions performed to the Crown and in a particular manner of the victorious services and demonstrations of loyalty which Donogh late Earl of Thomond, and Sir Daniel O Brien, now Viscount O Brien of Clare, brother to the said Earl, have during the reigns of Queen Elizabeth and King James . . . and the great assurance his Majesty hath that Daniel O Brien grandchild to the said Viscount Clare shall succeed his ancestors in faithfulness to his Majesty who signified his desire that Viscount O Brien's estate be preserved to him and his family."

The prominence in the present text of the names of the Earls of Thomond and of Inchiquin and of Viscount Clare is thus explained. The last-named, when in exile, thinking of Moyarta, might well have reflected that were it not for the grant of the castles and lands of the MacMahons, by the first King James, he would never have followed the second.

* * *

The Commissions of Grace,[17] operating over the years 1684-86 (Charles II and James II), are represented in the present text by grants to ten persons. Their names are here given by way of further guidance in the absence of symbols. The baronies specified in the grants appear within brackets:

Hugh Brigdall (Islands), George and Simon Purdon (Tulla), Thady Quinn (Inchiquin), Thomas Power (Tulla), Managh O Grady (Bunratty), Samuel Burton (Islands), Robert Longfield (Clonderalaw and Bunratty), Thomas Hickman (Inchiquin and Bunratty), Walter Hickman (Clonderalaw).

One of these grants has an important relevance to the subject of the respective claims of the Strafford and Down Surveys discussed above. These grants it should be recalled, or rather abstracts of them, were compiled from the original inrolments in the Rolls Office by George Hatchell, who was clerk of the inrolments in Chancery.[17] The grant to Hugh Brigdall (p. 6) conveys the lands of Inch, 197 acres 1 plowland and ⅓ of a plowland—" Also a parcel of land having no denomination, marked in the plot of Strafford's Survey No. 27, belonging to the said land of Inch. 7 acres . . . Fine £10, in soccage forever, 21st November 1684."

Reference to p. 273 of the present text, parish of Drumcliff, shows complete correspondence in every detail save that the name of the grantee is William Brigdall, who, no doubt, was either a son or a brother of Hugh, the patentee. Other lands and acreages in this grant similarly agree with the text.

The grants to George and Simon Purdon will be found in the present text expressed in the name of Captain Purdon. Otherwise there is agreement with the names and quantities of the lands.

From a wide collation it may be said, that not only for the Commissions of Grace, but for these under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, the basis was that of the Strafford Survey—as regards of course only parts of Connacht and Clare.

* * *

Another interest, which may not easily be recognizable, is that of the " 49 Officers ". It had been authorized that all commissioned officers who were in regiments in Ireland and had served Charles I, any time before the 5 June 1649, were to be satisfied their respective arrears, estimated at £1,800,000 out of forfeited lands in four counties, as well as out of cities and towns, and " out of all forfeited lands undisposed of in the province of Connacht and county of Clare lying within one mile of the Shannon or of the Sea commonly called the Mile Line "

Here, the first and most obvious consideration is the length of that Line in Clare county. As this would not hitherto appear to have been ascertained, application was made to the Ordnance Survey by whom the required information was kindly given with the following reservation: that the mileages should be accepted as accurate only to the scale of O.S. ½" sheets 14, 15, 17 and 18, from which they had been taken along high-water mark " by means of a map-measurer and with due allowance for the numerous little immeasurable inlets and headlands along this stretch of water ".

Trustees of the '49 Officers recorded by the text include the Earl of Ossory, the Earl of Arran and Sir George Gore, who by patent dated[18] 17th December 1667, were granted lands in Tulla, Bunratty, Clonderalaw and Corcomroe baronies containing over 3,000 Irish acres. In different connections the Savings in the Restoration patents are revealing as, for example, those contained in the foregoing grant, thus:

> " In trust for Margaret, Viscountess Muskerry for £11,000 due to her father, Ulick, Marquis of Clanrickarde; Sir Arthur Gore £864.11.8; Edward Martin £246.13.4 and Symon Bridges £4.12.4
> " To Teige McMahon his right in law or equity to Inishacon Island by decree. To Daniel O Brien a Nominee such right as should be adjudged him to his lands in Corcomroe after reprisals ".

Other Trustees appearing in the patents are Humphrey Baggaley, Francis Colley and Henry Medcalfe whose satisfaction was given in Tulla barony. Lotteries it may be recalled constituted the basis of this distribution, both the security and the arrears of the '49 Officers being each divided into 100 lots.

[18]. Vol. III, p. 115 & 16, Rep. Ir. Rec. Comm.

The adoption at the Restoration of the confiscation and reservation of land within the " Mile Line " represented the acceptance and continuation, as in other matters, of Commonwealth policies. Coastguarding the sea and the Shannon was no doubt the particular objective. This precaution had for a long time, but particularly since Armada days, been the concern of government. Crown grants to the Earls of Thomond are open to the interpretation that they were the Lord High Admirals of the Shannon, as Sir Daniel O Brien, later Lord Clare, was of the sea at Loop Head. Indeed some thirty years before Cromwellian times a veritable inquisition was taken as to the position regarding adjoining proprietorial ownership along the Shannon and the sea. It was printed in the Calendar of Carew Papers, 1602-24, p. 431, and ascribed to the year 1619. Save as regards the intrusion of the '49 Officers, the dominion of the Shannon remained extensively under the jurisdiction of the Earls of Thomond at the Restoration, but what may be regarded as a feature of Irish historical geography, and as indicative of the close strategical surveillance of the period, the Carew document is printed here. The opening entries relate to the barony of Tulla:

The earlier section of the text may also be given.[19]

Thus, was foreshadowed the Border of the " Mile Line " of some thirty and more years later, the interval being zealously employed in providing returns to a multitude of inquisitions, revealing each landholder's possessions and accompanied by Defective Titles legislation. So in time, as from the cities and towns, from the rivers and the sea, the Irish came to be excluded, in the interests of the safety of the realm, and of the aggrandisement of adventurers and soldiers.

Surveys succeeded wars rather than victories, but the Strafford was unique. Less in territorial range than the Civil Survey, but similar in purpose, it proved a resourceful inquisition, providing for the outcome of future wars, and becoming the ultimate mentor of the Transplantation.

The present text preserves some evidence of this last-named project of 1653-59, as confirmed or determined in 1676. As originally conceived the dispersal of the Irish proved a débâcle by virtue of the elimination of extensive regions proposed for the " habitation of the Irish nation." What did materialize in Commonwealth times was, to a considerable extent, rendered nugatory by the intervention of the Restoration Settlement, under which transplanters suffered a second confiscation, by virtue of the restoration of former owners to their estates. Another explanation, under the Settlement was the presence of the ubiquitous " Connaught Purchaser." An example may be seen at the parish of Killokennedy, barony of Tulla, at the lands of Killege, and Shaneknock (p. 64). To these lands were transplanted, in 1656-57, the following persons: Donell Curtis, Swiny Fahy, Morris Fahy, Hubbert McUllick, Teige Mulrian, Margaret Brody, Conor McSyda, Teige McNamara, John Stritch, Ani McNemara, Alexander Hovenden and Margaret Bourke. Of these twelve names only two will be found on the page indicated, and where Lord Inchiquin's restoration is recorded in conjunction with two Act of Settlement patentees. Here what Captain Purefoy, a patentee, had acquired was sold in 1666 to Henry Ivers, a well-known " Connaught purchaser ".

In the absence of signs or symbols, Irish family names are the only measure of guidance in identifying transplanters, who sometimes appear in conjunction with Anglo-Irish, and, for that matter with Crown patentees, where a denomination is divided up. As to Clare family names, the text, like no other document, in its compact form, presents them parish by parish, per omnia saecula saeculorum, and since their possessors too, suffered transplantation, their origin and destiny may be determined.

It may be stated, at this juncture, that there is in progress, a volume devoted exclusively to the subject of the Transplantation. This will furnish in addition to the names of transplanters and, where available, their addresses, with the hitherto unspecified locations in Connacht and Clare within which lands had been decreed to them, as likewise their acreages. The absence of so necessary a compilation—though attention has been directed to the basic source in previous introductions—may perhaps be attributed to the unawareness by historians of the sources which yielded the necessary information.* This will include a comprehensive introduction by the present writer.

In the meantime an interesting conjunction of transplanters, from different counties, shown at p. 83 of the present text, may be quoted. Their names appear against the lands of Mountallon, parish of Clonlea: (1) Murtagh Dowling (2) Peter Bolger (3) Barth. Stacpoole and (4) Donogh O Callaghan. Here transplanters from at least three counties are recorded: Bolger from

*In this last connection an exception will be found in his history of "The Parish of Ballinasloe" by Rev. P. K. Egan.

Kilkenny, Stacpoole from Limerick, O Callaghan from Cork. It is not definite whether (1) came from Kilkenny or Carlow. In this context the name of Cransborough, or Crainsborow as it is rendered by the text, may be perplexing, but the transplanter represented by it was a merchant of Waterford. Again, the well-known name of Lysaght immediately bespeaks the Limerick minor gentry.

* * *

The sale of lands to " Connaught Purchasers " was given the imprimatur of Section 50 of the Act of Settlement where many of their names are specified. By way of guidance to those in the the present text (see particularly the barony of Corcumroe) the following may be mentioned: John, Lord Kingston, Henry Ivers, Sir William King, Sir Ralph Wilson and Francis Foster. Petitions, submitted to the Court of Claims for lands in Clare, on the grounds of Connaught purchases, include: Samuel Burton, Colonel Carey Dillon, Paul Dodd, Lt. Col. Benjamin Lucas, Captain Thomas Lucas, Sir Henry Waddington and Simon Wortham. On grounds of a " discovery " a claim was made by Arthur Hide whose name also appears in the present text.

In various capacities there was added to the nobility of the county, as already represented by the Earl of Thomond and Lord Inchiquin, the Earl of Ossory, the Earl of Arran, Lord Powerscourt, Lord Ikerrin and the Lord Massareene, baron of Lough Neagh. The last-named who as John Clotworthy was the assiduous agent in England, in 1660, for the adventurers and soldiers, gained for his diligence and affection to the throne of England, the mantle of the peerage with the trifling addition of lands in Clare and elsewhere. He was indeed a truly successful fisherman on the banks of Lough Neagh ! The title of Massareene passed to his son-in-law, Mr. Skeffington.

In connection with the nobility, and others, the text is somewhat erratic with reference to the use of the contraction, represented by the letter " P " appearing after many names. Throughout the Civil Survey transplanters are described as " Papists ". But that is not the meaning here, nor is it what biblical scholars might assume as indicating either a major or minor prophet. Where it does not appear at all, it is too frightening to think of what conclusions a century hence would be reached. It stands of course for " Protestant " which was a description of political significance, and as such applied to land as signifying a topographical or geographical reserve. Where the letter " P " does not appear after Lord Massareene's name, nor after those of other noble lords, the omission was due most likely to the fact that their advocacy of English interests was so well known that the implied qualification by contraction would be superfluous. But in one instance at least where this attribution does appear, circumstances of historical interest are recalled. At page 7 of the text appears the name of " Luke Brady P ".

Of individual conferences with the head of another state one which resulted in tragic consequences, perpetuating grave misfortunes, was that which took place in the year 1543 between Henry VIII and Murrogh O Brien, Donogh O Brien, Denis O Grady and others. The agreement reached comprehended on the one side the surrender of one nationality for another, the surrender of family nomenclature, the repudiation of native language and customs, the adoption of the English language, obedience to English laws and to the King's deputy, and, over all, the paramountcy of his Majesty in his right to enfeoff them in the lands they claimed. The rewards on the other side for these acts of homage and submission were the creation of Murrogh O Brien, Earl of Thomond, Donogh O Brien, Baron of Inchiquin and Denis as Sir Denis O Grady, and in their respective satchels, to be delivered later, letters patent of the lands claimed, with the Great Seal pendant at the bottom.[20]

It must be assumed that it was in pursuance of the foregoing submissions that the name of O'Grady was changed to Brady,[21] a degrading so to speak ! In later times, a distinguished and estimable family, indeed. Hardiman quotes (Irish Deeds, p. 77)

[20]. Frost, Hist. and Topography of Co. Clare p. 122-3 " Ui Donghaile ". " This was the tribe name of the O Gradys and it became the name of their country . . . the O Gradys were originally settled in the parish of Kilonasoolagh. After the Uí Bloid, that is the O Shanahans, O Kennedys etc. had been driven out by the descendants of Turlogh O Brien, aided by the MacNamaras, the O Gradys were placed at Tomgraney and their tribe name of Ui Donghaile transferred to the territory of which they got possession. That district comprised the parishes of Tomgraney, Moynoe, Iniscaltra and Clonrush . . ."

Frost pays tribute to the esteem in which the family was held for their kindliness; he also gives the descent from the patentee of Henry VIII and refers to an Elizabethan grant of 1582 to John O'Grady alias Brady and Hugh Brady of Tomgraney. This Hugh Brady was the Right Rev. Hugh Brady or O Grady first Protestant bishop of Meath. His will is published in vol. III of the Clerical & Parochial Records of Cork, Cloyne & Ross by W. Maziere Brady D.D.

I am indebted to Mr. Edward Keane for drawing my attention to various documents, and to the Director of the National Library for photostats.

[21]. Dr. Maziere Brady, vol. I, op. cit. p. 180 states that " The first of the O Grady family who took the name of Brady seems to have been Sir Denis O Grady to whom King Henry VIII granted Tomgraney and other lands."

the letter written by Henry VIII, 9 July 1543, authorizing the grant to " Sir Denis O Grada ", captain of his nation, and his heirs male, all the lands he " pretended a right to " and which he " had usurped " without any title from the King, including the manor of Thoymcreny (Tuamgraney).[22] These lands are set out at pages 7, 8 and 9 of the present text.

The historical interest attaching to the grants made, on the occasion of this conference, resides in their constituting the introduction to Clare of the policies of surrender and division. Their patterns were carefully preserved for future use. By analogy they represented the introduction of a malignant morbidity which, in the course of some forty years, had communicated itself to the landholders of Connacht and Clare as manifested in Perrott's Inquests and Indentures. The years brought the deception of deeds unenrolled, war, confiscation and the almost total elimination of the native landowners, as indicated by the present text.

The new titles to land created by Henry VIII in 1543 cannot but have had a disturbing influence on the land-holders of Clare but more dangerous to the permanence of other titles was an Inquisition taken in 1637: It is given by Hardiman[23] thus—

> " Edward I, by letters patent dated 26th January 1275 granted the whole land of Thomond to Thomas de Clare, and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten, who died thereof seized at Bunratty in 1287; that said land descended to Gilbert de Clare his son and heir, who having died without issue, it descended to Richard de Clare his brother, who having died in 1317 the land of Thomond, for want of heirs male of the original grantee, reverted to the Crown, and that at the time of taking the inquisition the fee and inheritance thereof were vested in King Charles I."

This inquisition was taken by order of Strafford, appointed Lord Deputy in 1632, in furtherance of his famous impolitic project, Hardiman comments, to dispossess the ancient proprietors of their estates. But the confiscation thus proposed did not materialize for some twenty years later when the Survey made by Strafford provided the Commonwealth government with a detailed account of the ownership of land in every parish and barony of the county.

Strafford, writing to Secretary Coke[24], in August 1637, said in the course of a revealing letter, that his Majesty's title to the two Ormonds had been found " And seeing we have sped so well where our Title was borrowed, or at least supported by my lord of Ormond and indeed could not have stood alone upon the King's evidence, I am most confident that we shall have like success, for Clare, where, we are able to make a clear and undoubted Title of ourselves . . . I must acknowledge the diligence of my lord of Ormond to have been very great and sincere . . ."

Later in the same month he again addressed Coke: " I must certify you that his Majesty's title to the county of Clare and Limerick is found by Inquisition with strange cheerfulness and contentment. I know it as well privately, by some intelligence I have amongst them, that my Lord of Thomond, Lt. Governor of that county hath been exceedingly diligent and forward in his service, not only leading himself but persuading others into this good conformity."

On the death in 1639 of this nobleman—Henry the 5th earl,—Strafford wrote to the King: " The point of profit to be considered whether your Majesty will extend your favour in the Plantation of the county Clare in as great measure to this Earl (Sir Barnabas) that hath merited nothing as was intended for the last Earl who deserved exceedingly much therein . . . A middle way to be taken by giving a respect in some measure to this Lord but not in so great a proportion as the other . . . In this way if it be left to us I believe we shall make it worth to your Crown at least £20,000, and give his lordship good cause to rest satisfied."[25]

Nor in this moment of magnanimous generosity would Murrogh, sixth baron, and first Earl of Inchiquin, (created 21 October 1654) be forgotten, not even by the King. His Majesty on March 15, 1639 wrote to Strafford—

23. Op. cit. p. 4.

24. Letters and dispatches of the Earl of Strafford, vol. I, page 132, 145.

25. While Strafford in his letters to the King and Coke makes clear his main motives to be the improvement of the revenue and the King's Sovereignty, he made known the names of those cooperating with him. All patents under which any claim might be made were subject to examination by the Lord Chief Justice, the Chief Baron and the Attorney-General and foresaw that most patents (Defective Titles) would be void in law. They were of two sorts, one of lands, the ancient inheritance of the Crown, the other Abbey lands. " In the former the Crown was much abused by information made by persons in England, pretending the lands they sought were their own, or concealed lands or lands escheated to the Crown by late attainders and discovered by them. And so concealing his Majesty's rights obtained those grants wherein it were just to vindicate the rights of the Crown . . ." (letters, vol. II, p. 139). The revenue from Defective Titles had already improved by £3,000.

". . . We have understood by you the readiness which has been shown by Murrogh, Baron of Inchiquin, to advance and further the plantation within our county of Clare, by submitting himself to our title there in which respect we extend our favour to him, that he may not have in the course of plantation the fourth part of his lands taken from him, as from the other natives there . . ."[26]

Thus has been preserved the circumstances under which the Crown's title to Clare was found in 1637, as well as of the rewards intended to be given to those responsible.

Some points arise with reference to the importance attached by the English authorities to the Crown's title—the Defective Titles Commission is evidence of this. The Inquisition of 1637 refers to the grant by Edward I of the whole of Thomond to Richard de Clare in 1317. But by what inquisition was this region found enabling such a grant by Edward I to be made? In the absence of this one can only infer that it took the place of the sword. This raises the question, so far as legality is concerned, of the validity of the 1637 inquisition. The same question applies to the grants made by Henry VIII, to the O Briens and others of titles and lands being based on a mixture of the surrenders made. The King granted the lands these people claimed; what knowledge had he then of such lands? but what really mattered was that they acknowledged his title. But in law did such acknowledgment constitute a title? Otherwise what was the necessity for Strafford having to dig up the grant to Richard de Clare? Here perhaps we have the explanation of the good-fellowship of Ormond, Thomond and Inchiquin with Strafford.

Again, Perrott's Inquisitions and Deeds of Indenture of 1585 are silent as to the Crown's title. All they found was that the "whole country or territory of Thomond was divided into nine principal baronies", the quantities of land each contained, and what belonged to certain persons specified, including the Queen. But here the consideration was once more the acknowledgment of the authority of the Crown by the abandonment of Irish manners and customs.

Such instruments apparently had no value as evidence for Strafford's purpose of finding a title for the King.

There is an excellent epitome of the Indentures given by the Annals of the Four Masters under the year 1585 which concludes thus: "They deprived of title and tribute every head and chief of a sept, and every other lord of a triochaced throughout the whole country except John MacNamara, lord of the West Clancuilen who did not put his hand to the composition they made."

One other notable person who would have no part in the surrender was Mahon O Brien who, alone among the O Briens held out against Sir John Perrott.[27]

According to Butler[28] Perrott's Composition was a perfectly fair and square transaction: "The inhabitants admitted that as against the Crown they had no legal title, the Crown admitted that equitably the inhabitants should have such legal title and promised to grant it. The Crown title was not based on any surrender by the chiefs but on known facts . . ." What facts?

Except "By the Sword", what did the inhabitants know of the Crown's title? Strafford, as already stated, had to go back to the questionable grant by Edward I in 1317.

There is a strong suggestion of legal chicanery characterizing all these and subsequent proceedings.

In his valuable history[29], the Rev. Mr. Philip Dwyer sums up the later developments:

"If the chieftains of Clare had on their composition with Sir John Perrott and subsequently surrendered their estates, but neglected to enrol their surrenders and take out new Letters Patent, was it not too hard that their titles should be vitiated and themselves turned adrift, because by a neglect of the Officers in Chancery the full formalities had not been complied with, though the cost of the fees had been actually paid into Court?". He then quotes from Desiderata Curiosa Hiberniae "Half of this realm was found to belong unto his Majesty, as his ancient demesne and inheritance upon old feigned titles of 300 years past, by juries, against law, their evidence and conscience, who were corrupted to find the said titles upon promise of part of those lands so found for the King, or other reward, or else were drawn thereto by threats of the judges in the circuits, or by heavy fines mulcts and censures of pillory and other like cruel and unusual punishments."

But the Deeds of Composition are of historical value in many respects, recalling as they do that the old names of Thomond regions, Corcomroe, Corcovaskin, Hy Cormaic, Hy-Fearmic and Hy-Caisin became the nine baronies of the present text.[30]

It is doubtful if any county in Ireland has attracted so much learning and industry to the study of its history as that of Clare. Its geographical position, protected by river and sea, its enduring civilization through monumental memories and tradition in stone and verse and the striking fidelity of its people to age-old customs of the Dalcassian race, enkindled many fires of historical enquiry. The intensity of internecine wars, the extremes of chivalry and treachery, of love and hate, generated in family genealogies, from century to century, conjured up mountains of history to be explored. Almost an island, within their unequalled river and sea-girt shore, the descendants of Cas seemed set apart, bequeathing a distinctive history as enduring and definitive as the Shannon itself.

Here, very briefly, may be given some sources, manuscript and printed, likely to be found useful in regard to many aspects of the present text. The names of modern pioneers in historical and topographical research have only to be mentioned to recall material of a voluminous nature—Eugene O Curry, himself a distinguished Clareman, and John O Donovan. Their Annals and Lectures are pre-eminent in printed sources, while survivals of their contributions to the progress of the Ordnance Survey are preserved in the Royal Irish Academy*; at the O.S. itself much material, believed to be of a valuable nature, still awaits the issue of a catalogue. Besides much else for Clare, the Academy's collection of O.S. documents consists of three volumes of Antiquarian Letters, six of Extracts, relative mainly to topography, and three volumes of Inquisitions. The O Gorman papers are catalogued in Fasciculus XXIII, those of interest for Clare being numbered 1040 and 1043.

Where the student will find rare documentary material, in print, for collation with the present text is in Hardiman's Ancient Irish Deeds, presented to the Academy, February 27, 1826 (Vol. xv—1825-28). This collection consists of thirty-nine deeds, and instruments, relating almost entirely to properties in Thomond. Hardiman conjectured one deed to be as early as the beginning of the 12th century, others belonging to the 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th centuries. Families whose position or professions are given include the O Briens who long possessed kingly power, the MacNamaras, who were hereditary Marshals, the MacDonnells of Darach, descended from the monarch Brian Boroimhe, the MacBruodins (MacBrodys), hereditary poets and historians to O Briens, the MacClanchys, hereditary judges and lawyers. Though not specified here one may add the O Hickeys who were hereditary physicians to the O Briens, and whose lands are also returned by the present text.

*The Preliminary Report on the O.S. documents in Analecta Hibernica No. 23, p. 279, by Professor Dudley Edwards should also be consulted.

The denomination of land to which it is thought, the MacBruodins (McBrodys) gave their name—Bally Brodie—appears on p. 553, parish of Dysert, barony of Inchiquin, but this place was then—1636-41—in the possession of "Ogane O Hogan" and "Flan O Kernie." Numerous lands of which the McBrodys were then proprietors, by virtue no doubt of their office, are given at pages 533, 534, and 557 of the text. Some ten distinct persons of the name are returned including Conor McMoylin McBrody, and Conor McDavy McBrody. It is also of interest to note that Teige McBrody, of whom Hardiman speaks as "a celebrated Irish Bard and Chief Poet of Donough Earl of Thomond", was a witness to one of the undated deeds. Sigerson in his Bards of the Gael and Gall (p. 229) prints under date of 1580 a poem by "Tadg O Bruadin" entitled "A King's Lesson"; it was addressed by the poet to Donchadh O Brien, 4th Earl of Thomond.

Translations in English accompany all the Irish instruments in Hardiman's distinguished contribution which also includes two items of outstanding interest: "O Brien's Rental" and "MacNamara's Rental"; the former he attributes "with certainty" to the middle of the 14th century and the latter to the "commencement" of that century. The collation of both deeds and rentals with the present text, particularly in the topographical sphere, should prove a study of absorbing interest. Already, Frost in his History and Topography of Co. Clare has reprinted many of these deeds in their parochial locations, as well as both rentals, and, in conjunction with many other documents, notably O Donovan's translation of an early deed of partition of the O Davorans, professors of law, at Cahermacnaghten, in Burren, where a pupil, at their famous school, was Duald MacFirbis; the partitioned lands will be found in the present text at p. 473, parish of Ragh (Rathbourney), and in the proprietorship (1636-41) of O Davorans. Frost in his valuable book also printed many inquisitions which unhappily are incomplete; likewise the Book of S. & D. for Clare which too is wanting in important references; nevertheless his text and notes are of importance and interest.

Another valuable book, to which much care in its compilation was given, is Canon Dwyer's History of the Diocese of Killaloe and similarly Father P. White's History of Clare and the Dalcassian Clans. Many interesting references to Clare will also be found in Irish Life in the Seventeenth Century after Cromwell, a scholarly retrospect by Edward MacLysaght.[31] The indexes to Transactions and Proceedings of the Royal Irish Academy provide a ready guide to many important papers under the name of Thomas Johnson Westropp.

The learned paper by the late Professor James Hogan, a former member of the Commission on the Tricha Cét and Related Land Measures also calls for notice.[32] Here it is pointed out that this ancient military and civil unit was still preserved in the baronies of Bunratty Lower, Inchiquin, Islands, Corcomroe, Burren, Clonderalaw, Moyarta and Ibrickan. Of the Tricha Ced Ua mBloid, Professor Hogan states that it seemed to be approximately preserved in the Deanery of O Mulloid, in the diocese of Killaloe . . . It was therefore of considerable extent, comprising the entire of the baronies of Tulla Lower and Tulla Upper, except the parish of Tulla which belonged to Tricha Ced Ua Caisin . . . The Ui mBloid, he adds, formed the senior branch of the Dal gCais. In 1318 they were partially dispossessed by their rivals, the MacNamaras of Tricha Ced Ua Caisin . . . Subsequent to the death of de Clare in 1318, the MacNamaras ruled " almost the entire region of the county Clare which lies between the river Fergus and river Shannon ".

Identifying Bunratty Lower with Tricha Ced an Chalaidh, less the parish of Kilmurry, Dr. Hogan says the latter was possibly still in existence at the coming of the Normans " for the Anglo-Normans established the Cantred of Tradraighe, Tradry, in the region formerly comprised in Tricha Céd an Chalaidh ". In conjunction with this study, the student has the great advantage of the learned work by Seán Ó hÓgáin, Conntae an Chláir published in 1938.

Professor Hogan's observations on land-measures, notably the quarter, which is the basis of the denominational content of each place in the present text, will be found to be of added interest. It was not, he says, a fixed unit of measurement. " For reasons which have not yet been elucidated, the quarter, the fourth part of the baile biataigh, in Connacht was a single ploughland of 120 acres of arable land, in Munster . . . three ploughlands, called vicariously seisreachs and ballyboes . . . Furthermore the quarter and the ploughland varied in extent with the quality and situation of the land. A baile biataigh was supposed to be able to carry 300 cows. Arable land was often measured by a fixed number of days ploughing, fortyeight or fifty days being allowed to the ploughland of 120 acres—12 days to a cartron."

Examples of estimation by ploughing, appearing in the present text, have already been indicated.

Any effort, however limited, of a bibliography of Clare would be bound to include family histories. There are at least two notable volumes in this connection: The Historical Memoirs of the O Briens by John O Donohue[33] and " The Story of an Irish Sept " by N. C. MacNamara.[34] Both provide genealogies beginning with progenitors, and through Patent Rolls, inquisitions and wills reach down to modern times. The contrasting history of the two families is one of the outstanding features of the present text. And in this category there is also " The Inchiquin Manuscripts " edited by John Ainsworth, M.A., and published by the Irish Manuscripts Commission in 1961. This contains a most interesting collection of deeds, inquisitions, Exchequer and Chancery bills, rentals, and accounts. Finally, in the Journal of the R.S.A.I. for the quarter ending December 1900 there is a bibliography of the " Principal Books and Papers relating to Clare ".[35] This will be found a highly useful source of reference. One other source may be added from Rev. Chancellor J. B. Leslie's Cat. of Manuscripts (p. 13) in possession of the Rep. Church Body, St. Stephen's Green: " Bp. Worth's Account Book of the Diocese of Killaloe, 1661, has much information about Clare families ".

In conclusion, the writer expresses his regret at his inability to explain the significance of the word " Single " at denominations in the baronies of Tulla, Bunratty, Corcomroe and Moyarta. A characteristic, however, of the seventy instances recorded is that the denominational content was always less than a quarter. " Single " may mean no more than that the denomination had become detached, the parent quarter being unrecognizable. On the other hand, there may be a connection with some ancient endowment, office or employment.

I have to express thanks to Miss M. C. Griffith, Deputy Keeper of the Public Records, for facilitating the photographic reproduction of the text, to the Chairman of the Irish Manuscripts Commission, Dr. Edward McLysaght, for his appreciative reading of this long introduction; to Dr. R. J. Hayes, Director of the National Library for photostats of Strafford material in the Petworth Collection; to Mr. Edward Keane of the National Library for copies of O'Grady-Brady documents, and to the Secretary of the Commission, Miss Eileen Brereton, for her continued help in preparing the material for publication.

BOOKS OF SURVEY AND DISTRIBUTION

VOL. IV

COUNTY OF CLARE

INDEXES

1. Index of persons (1641 proprietors and persons to whom lands were disposed).
2. Index of persons antecedent to 1641 Proprietors.
3. Index (supplementary) of places.
4. Index of subjects.

INDEXES

INTRODUCTION

1. GENERAL REMARKS

Indexes of persons, places and subjects, prepared for this volume of the Books of Survey and Distribution, are published in the following pages.

Of the three, the largest is the index of persons which comprises two parts:

1. Index of 1641 proprietors and of persons to whom lands were disposed.

2. Index of antecedents of the 1641 proprietors.

Surnames are followed by the christian names and, in numerous cases, by the christian names of the father or of the father and the grandfather, e.g.

Conor oge McNamara
Connor mc Teige leigh McNamara
Connor mc Rory mc Donogh McNamara

(A further generation may possibly be indicated in the entry Teige mcDan'll mc Mule mc Don'll Mc Namara but it may be a three-generation name with a mc put in in error i.e. Teige mc Dan'll mule [? maol] mc Don'll Mc Namara).

The addition of christian names of an earlier generation or generations was no doubt necessary for full and accurate recording of the 1641 proprietors. Though not as plentiful as in the book of survey and distribution for Co. Galway, there are fourteen (and possibly sixteen) three-generation names in the text for Co. Clare; eight (and possibly ten) bear the McNamara surname, two the O Hogan surname, and four other surnames which do not occur more than once.

They are:

O Hehir, Daniell mc Murtagh mc Shaen, Islands barony
O Hogan, Hugh Mc Teige mcHugh, Inchiquin barony
O Hogan, Hugh mc Teige Mlaghlin, Inchiquin barony
O Loghlin, Turlogh mc Loghlin mc Murragh, Burren barony
O Mehan, Dermott mc Murtogh mcOwen, Islands barony
McNamara, Conor mc Rory mc Donogh, Bunratty barony
——— Donell mc Teige mc Mahoneboy, Bunratty barony
——— John mc Con'r mc Teig, Bunratty barony
——— John mc Donnogh mc Conmea, Tullagh barony
———*John mc Laughlin boy mc Sheda, Tullagh barony
——— Roger mc Teige mc Rory, Bunratty barony
———*Rory mc Teige mc Sheda, Tullagh barony
——— Shaen mc Donnagh mc Sheda, Tullagh barony
——— Teige mc Dan'll mc Mule mc Don'll, Bunratty barony
——— Teige mc Donnell mc Rory, Bunratty barony
O Rudan, John mc Teige fitz Mahune fine, Tullagh barony

The same need to identify fully the 1641 proprietors probably led to the use of descriptive adjectives to qualify christian names in the text, particularly in the baronies and lesser denominations of the county where some surnames were very prevalent. Some of these descriptive adjectives are English (the elder, the younger) but most of them are Irish words rendered phonetically in English (boy, roe) and are found in the orthodox place required in the Irish language i.e. after the christian name they qualify. The following sixteen descriptive adjectives* derived from Irish words are found in the text:

Form of word in text	Irish word	Example in the text
bane	bán	Daniell mc Hugh bane Quinn boy	buí	Teige boy mc Henrias Halloran
cam	cam	Moyloghlen cam O Loghlin
crone	crón	Connor crone O Dea
down	donn	Teige down Mc Enerhiny
duffe	dubh	Mahone mc Donnogh duffe Mc Considine
fin, fine	?fionn	Dan'll Mc Namara fin
garue, garve	garbh	Murtagh garue O Bryan
granie	?gránna	Bryan mc Donnogh granie O Bryan
leagh, leigh	liath	Edmund leagh O Dea
moyle	?maol	Murrogh moyle McMahony
mergagh, merigagh, merrigagh, mirgagh, mirigagh	meirgeach	Loughlen mergagh Hychatt
moor, more	mór	Owhney moor O Loghlin
‡oge	óg	Dermot oge O Flanagee
rea, reagh, reogh	riach	Connor reagh O Hehir
roe	rua	Maughan roe McEnchroe

In the text these adjectives commence, as a general rule, with a capital letter but in the index lower case only is used.

Among the other Irish words found in the text is ginelagh (Irish geinealach, standardised ginealach) in John reagh mcShaen ne ginelagh Mc Namara. The required Ní following the name-form of an unmarried woman is found as ne or ny (examples—Ellenor ne Haher, Slany ny Donnagh Mc Guillipatrick). Also found is hy which is probably the genitive form of Ó in Donell mc Teig hy Hullarne, p. 43.

Though associated with old or native Clare and Irish surnames such as O Hehir and McNamara on the survey (i.e. 1641) side of the book, these Irish descriptive adjectives are not confined to them exclusively. They are also to be found with names such as Dexter (Shaen oge mc Shaen) and White (David oge) but they seldom occur with English, Norman or infrequent Irish names on the distribution side of the book.

The index of antecedents of the 1641 proprietors shows that many of the surnames in it occur very frequently in single (or, in a few cases, two) baronies.

* The insertion of an asterisk before the christian name indicates that the surname has been added by the compiler of the index. See also explanation on p. 589.

* venogh in John venogh O Mullowny and crive in Conor crive O Bryan may also be descriptive adjectives.

‡ This is by far the most frequently used of these adjectives.

A table showing the main baronies in which these predominant surnames are to be found and other baronies in which these same surnames occur is given below.

Antecedents of the 1641 Proprietors

The surnames predominant in the table above are to be found in the same geographical distribution in the index of 1641 proprietors and of persons to whom lands were disposed. It is clear, however, that, while they occur in the same baronies in both indexes, by 1641 they are much more widely scattered than in the table which, in a limited way, shows the location of surnames up to one generation earlier. One example may be given to illustrate the point being made here. In the table the surname Clancy occurs mainly in Corcumroe and Tullagh baronies whereas in 1641 it is to be found not only in these baronies but also in all other baronies except Clonderlaw.

Attention has been drawn in the introduction to this volume (p. xxxiii) to the pages or folios in the text which are blank: it is necessary to note here that the numbers of five folios are used twice—four with an added suprascript letter a (138 and 138[a], 238 and 238[a], 374 and 374[a], 527 and 527[a]) and one (348) without any distinguishing mark. The two folios marked 348 are distinguished in the index as 348 (1) and 348 (2); references on both folios are shown as 348 (1–2).

2. INDEX OF PERSONS

Apart from points to which particular attention is drawn, this index of persons follows, in general, the methods employed in the similar index in the Galway book of survey and distribution (vol. iii in this series).

In this volume names of persons are to be found:

(a) in the third column which shows the names of proprietors in 1641

(b) in the eighth column which shows the names of grantees under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation and other proceedings

(c) in the tenth column which shows the names of persons who in 1703 purchased lands forfeited in 1688

(d) in the fourth column in which the denominations of land are given where a comparatively small number of personal names occur.

All names of persons in the four columns have been indexed. References are to folios of the volume and, as many names occur more than once, the whole folio should be examined. As the spelling of surnames and christian names was not consistent—even within the limits of the folio—the most usual or frequent form was selected and all references grouped thereunder. After the selected form variants are given in parenthesis and the appropriate cross-references are included in the index. Entries are arranged by surname, christian names and also by baronies. Where references are grouped under given personal names in more than one barony, it is for the student to determine whether or not the references are to one person or more. Persons having titles have been identified, those occurring in the third column as persons living in 1641 and those in the eighth and tenth columns as persons living in the period of the Acts of Settlement and Explanation and in 1703. Bishops and other ecclesiastical dignitaries are indexed under the name of the bishopric but cross-references are given to their names and surnames which have been supplied, identification being on the same chronological basis as in the case of peerages.

The surnames and christian names are arranged in dictionary order but attention must be drawn to the difficulty in the surnames already encountered in earlier volumes in this series. In many cases the prefixes O and Mac or Mc were arbitrarily dropped before surnames, as shown in the examples given below:

Byran & O Bryan	Kashy (Cashy) & McKashy
Cahan & McCahan	Mahon & McMahon
Cusack & McCusack	Mahony & McMahony
Gillapatrick & McGuillipatrick	Mullony & O Mullowny
Hehir & O Hehir	Nelan & O Nelan
Hogan & O Hogan	Shaghnessey & O Sheaghnussy

In a small number of cases forms with both prefixes are found in the text:

Clancy : McClancie & O Clancie
Daverin : McDavering & O Davering
Halloran: McHollerean & O Hollerane
Loghlin : McLoghlin & O Loghlin
Quinn : McQuinn & O Quinn

To overcome the difficulty, references with and without prefixes were united in a single entry and arranged in dictionary order according to the letters following O or Mac. A few examples may help to show the method employed. The surname written O Grady and Grady are grouped together under Grady; the surname written Hehir, McHehir and O Hehir (and variations of those forms) are united in the entry Hehir.

Under the surnames christian names are arranged in dictionary order—generally but not strictly. In the case of christian names where more than one form occurs in the text, it was found necessary to depart from strict dictionary order. For example, the forms Donagh, Donnogh and Donogh (Irish Donnchadh) occur; where these variant forms are followed by a second name (i.e. that of the father) it is the second name which is allowed to determine the order in the index. The method used can best be illustrated by giving a few examples:

O Grady, Daniell mc Laughlin
—— Donell mc Murto
—— Dermond

or

McNamara, Mahone mc Connor
—— Maughan mc Daniell
—— Mohon mc Donogh
—— Mahone mc John
—— Mahan mc Shaen

The method adopted in this index is designed to bring together the variants (in the examples given above those deriving from Irish Domhnall and Mathghamhain) and thereby avoid the excessive cross-referencing which otherwise would have been necessary. One other point to be noted here is that no distinction is made between fitz and mc (e.g. Connor fitz Daniell and Connor mc Daniell) in the arrangement of entries.

Another difficulty already encountered in indexing other volumes in this series was the occurrence of a first name (or names) without a surname or of a christian name followed by mc and then another christian name. Through finding similar christian names with surnames on the same folios or elsewhere in the text and by other means (including an examination of relevant pages in the Headfort book of survey and distribution for Co. Clare), it proved possible to add the surname in many cases. Where identification of the christian names without surnames was certain, the surnames were added and the entries made in the usual way; where identification lacked certainty, an asterisk was placed before the christian name to indicate the supplied surname.

The hard residue of unresolved cases, more numerous in this county than in Co. Galway, are divided into two classes:

1. Entries in which surnames are not given.

   These entries which are set out below with notes are not included in the index.

2. Entries in which surnames are doubtful.

   These entries listed below are included in the index. Apart from cases in which information is added, the doubtful quantities are of three kinds:

   (a) names which may or may not include a surname, e.g. Terlagh mc Dermott.

   (b) christian names to which suggested surnames have been added editorially, e.g. Murragh mc Murtagh (Mc Namara). Added surnames are followed by an asterisk, as already explained.

   (c) names incomplete for a variety of other reasons. Teige ne Gorgee and Rory Memchonagh are examples.

Two lists of doubtful entries which correspond with these classes are given before the index of persons.

Owing to the large number of doubtful entries or entries incomplete in the sense explained, it became necessary to construct two working indexes, both of which were used in solving difficulties in identification. One was an index of the antecedents of the 1641 proprietors: the other was compiled to show at a glance the range of surnames used with each christian name. The former is published on p. 603. As well as showing the names of persons who were the fathers of the 1641 proprietors, it has been made to show in italics the names of their grandfathers.

3. INDEX (Supplementary) OF PLACES

The index of places given here is supplementary to the contemporary Alphabet of Lands which precedes the text on p. 1 of this volume. It includes:

1. Places in the fourth column which are not in the Alphabet;

2. Places in the third column, usually given as addresses of 1641 proprietors, which are not in the Alphabet;

3. Places on the distribution side of the text which are not in the Alphabet; and

4. Places to which incorrect references are given in the Alphabet.

Places omitted from the Alphabet are to be found in the text for all the baronies; for what it is worth it may be noted that the omissions occur least frequently in Islands, Ibrickan and Clonderlaw and most frequently in Bunratty and Tullagh. Many of the places included in this supplementary index are addresses of persons who lived in a place or barony other than the one in which the reference is given. Names of parishes are those used in the text, not the modern forms. Places incorporating the words lough or island in their name can be found under the next following word. In the case of islands, entries beginning Inis—, Enis—, and Inch— should also be examined.

4. INDEX OF SUBJECTS

In this volume a separate index of subjects has been made. The details given here include church and glebe lands (in volumes i—iii entered in the index of persons) and those of land measures—carrowmeers, cartrons, gneeves, plowlands, sesses, townlands and half-townlands. (Quarters were not indexed as they occur too frequently in the text). In general, natural descriptions of land are excluded, save references to corcus or those in which there is some mention or implied mention of human activity, e.g. dwarf underwood, ye most part destroyed.

The following abbreviations are used in the index:

Abp.	Archbishop
Add	Address given in the text
Alph.	Alphabet of Lands
als	alias or other name
Bun	Bunratty barony
Bur	Burren barony
Capt.	Captain
Clon	Clonderlaw barony
Col.	Colonel
Cor	Corcumroe barony
et al, et als	et alios
f,ff	entry occurs on following folio or folios
Ibr	Ibrickin barony
Inch	Inchiquin barony
Isl	Islands barony
Knt	Knight
Lt.	Lieutenant
Moy	Moyferta barony
quer'	querist
Tull	Tullagh barony

ENTRIES IN WHICH SURNAMES ARE NOT GIVEN

(Not included in the Index of Persons who were 1641 proprietors or to whom lands were disposed).

DANIELL ROE MC TEIGE, Tull, 41
Not in H. The two preceding entries have the surname Mc Namara. Daniell mc Teige is also found with the following surnames:—Halloran (Tull, 43), O Hehir (Isl, 294), Brody (Inch, 534), O Bryan (D. mc Teige leigh, Inch, 517), and McNamara (Tull, 25 and other references).

LOUGHLIN MC TEIGE, Inch, 535
Not in H, which has Mahone Mc Enchroe as (? chief) proprietor in the same denomination. ? surname=Mc Enchroe, but note also Loughlin mc Teige Cusack (Tull, 73) and Loughlin mc Teige oge Mc Namara (Tull, 24).

MAHON (MAHONE) MC TEIGE, Clon, 334, 340
Not in H, which has Mc Mahon as surname in the corresponding denominations. ? surname=Mc Mahon, which is in the preceding entry on both pages (Clon, 334, 340). Note also Mahoune mc Teige Mc Namara (Bun, 116).

MURHO. MC BRYAN ROE OF COOLEMINE, Clon, 346
H p. 146 has sir Teige Mahony, Coolemyne, as proprietor in the corresponding denomination. ? surname=(Mc) Mahony, which occurs three times on Clon, 346, or Mc Mahon (cf Murto mc Bryan Mc Mahon, Bun, 166).

MURTAGH MC TEIGE, Clon, 335
Surnames Mc Mahon & McDonnagh are in the two preceding entries but note Murtogh mc Teige mc Murtagh (Clon, 361) & Murragh mc Teige O Hehir (Isl, 294, 296). Not in H.

MURTOGH MC RORY GAWLAGH OF ALRON, Clon, 344
Surnames Mc Dermody & Mc Mahony (twice) occur on the same page. Not in H.

THOM MC TEIGE, Clon, 334, 340
Not in H. The note under Mahon mc Teige also applies to this entry.

TURLOGH MC CONNOR, Clon, 335
Not in H but see note under Murtagh mc Teige (opening statement).

(Included in the Index of Persons who were 1641 proprietors or to whom lands were disposed, they are to be found in the form used in the entries below, unless otherwise stated).

*indicates that the surnames given are editorially suggested as probabilities.

Mc Auley (McAuly), Dermott, Isl, 284
Note that Dermott mc Auley McCay occurs on Tull, 90 and in H, p. 27.

—— Loghlin, Isl, 296
H, p. 29, has Loghlin oge O Hehir. Note Auly mc Laughlin McCay (Isl, 284). ? surname=O Hehir or possibly McCay.

—— Teige, Isl, 284
See notes in two preceding entries. ? surname=McCay.

Mc Belim, Turlogh, Bur, 452
Note (1) Fernandus mc Felem (Bur, 482, 484), (2) surname O Loghlin in next entry, and (3) Turlogh mc Phelim O Loghlin (Bur, 468) ? surname=O Loghlin.

Brady
See introduction p. xlii for change of surname O Grady to Brady. While there is only one Brady (Luke) surname in the text, many forms shading between Brady and Brody occur. Examples are: Broadie (Luke), Mc Brady (Connor Mc Moylin), Mc Brade (James oge and Moylin). For references to Brady or Brody, both surnames should be scrutinized.

O Breine, Dermott, Inch, 543
? surname as a phonetic rendering of O Bryan.

Brody. See note under Brady.

Mc Bryan (mc Bryen), Leisagh, Bur, 457
Leisagh is a Christian name associated with the surname O Loghlin e.g. Leisagh O Loghlin (Bur, 455). In index as ? surname=O Loghlin.

—— Mahone, Bur, 456
Note Mahon mc Bryan O Loghlin on Bur, 457. In index as ? surname=O Loghlin.

Butler, Moor (Moore) alias Bryan, Bur, 489 & Cor, 248
H, p. 138, has More Butler alias Bryan.

Connor, McConnor, O Connor & O Knogher
Four separate Connor entries occur in the index of persons. As the dropping of O before surnames (Connor & O Connor) is common & as O Knogher may be from Irish Ó C(o)nchubhair (O Connor), the mc Connor entries are the ones with doubtful surnames.

McConnor, John, Clon, 339, 341
H, p. 130, has Mahone Mc Mahon as 1641 proprietor in the corresponding denominations. The surname Mc Mahon occurs frequently in the text close to these references. ? surname= Mc Mahon, but cf the following—John mc Connor oge O Mullowny (Tull, 74, 77), John mc Connor Mc Namara (Bun, 175f), John mcConnor reagh Mc Nemara (Tull, 44), and John mc Connor mc Teig Mc Namara (Bun, 175).

—— Mleaghlin, Bun, 146
H, p. 180, has Melaghlin Mc Cluone & Mleaghlin mc Connor Mc Cloone also occurs on Bun, 146. In index under McConnor & McCloone.

Mc Dermody, Donogh, Alrow, Clon, 344

Mc Dermott, Terlagh, Ibr, 425

Mc Donnell (mc Donell), Constance (Constans), Bur, 461, 463

—— Dermott, Bun, 170

—— Teige, Castletowne Moyrkirsh, Bun, 138A
? surname possibly=Mc Namara, a surname associated with Castletowne & Moyreske, but cf the following—Teige mc Daniell Mc Namara (Bun, 123f, 144), Teige mc Rory Mc Namara (Bun, 135, 138, 138A), Teige fitz Daniell O Bryan (Cor, 203) & Teig mc Daniell O Dea (Inch, 549).

Mc Donagh (Mc Donnagh, Mc Donnogh), Daniell, Cor, 215
Daniell ffz Donogh in text and H, p. 8, has a similar entry. Dan'l O Brien precedes this surname. ? surname=O Bryan, but cf Daniell mc Donnagh Clancy (Tull, 89, 94), Don'll mc Donogh Mc Enerhiny (Bun, 171) & Donell mc Donogh Mc Namara (Tull, 14 ff, 44f).

—— Dermott, Inch, 552
cf Dermot mc Donogh O Hehir (Isl, 288).

——* Donogh oge, Irrowchane, Bun, 109.
Surname Mc Quin precedes this entry. Donogh oge is also associated with surnames O Grady (Tull, 10) & O Rohan (Bun, 105).

—— James, Cooledrinagh, Clon, 348(2)

—— Mahon, Coolemine, Clon, 346
H, p. 146, has Sir Teige Mahony as proprietor. Surname Mc Mahony precedes & follows this entry. ? surname=Mc Mahony but cf Mohan mc Donogh Mc Namara (Tull, 58) and Mahone mc Donnogh duffe McConsidine (Inch, 512).

—— Mahon, Clon, 335
H, p. 145, has Mahon Mc Mahon and in the text the surname Mc Mahon precedes this entry. ? surname possibly=Mc Mahon, under which surname it is placed in the index. See also previous entry.

—— Patrick, Bun, 170
cf Patrick mc Donogh O Hehir, an infant (Isl, 282).

—— Rory, Inch, 552
cf Rory mc Donogh Mc Namara (Bun, 117, 121f).

—— Teige, Bun, 139

—— —— Clon, 335
cf Connor O Bryan mc Donagh in the following entry. ? surname possibly=O Bryan.

—— Turlogh, Bur, 455
cf Turlagh fitz Donnogh O Bryan (Cor, 228).

Donnoghah, Oughna, Tull, 80, 82
Surnames Mc Namara & Mc Cusage occur in text in close proximity.

O Downen, Teige mc Laughl, Bun, 138A
?=Teige mc Laughl whose address is Downen. In the denomination column is Ballyorla alias Downen, Dowray par.

Mc Enchroe & Mc Euchroe
Both forms found in Inch bar. Indexed under Mc Enchroe.

Mc Felem, Fernandus, Bur, 482, 484
See note under mc Belim, Turlogh, above.

Mc Finin, Donogh, Tull, 26
Note surname Mc Nemara on the survey side of this page. cf Donnogh mc Fynyn Mc Nemara. ? surname=Mc Namara.

O Foyne, Tumultagh, Cor, 233

O Grady
See note on Brady surname.

Gorgee, Teige ne, Inch, 553
H, p. 156, has Teige mc Cargy. This entry has been placed under Carga (Mc Carga etc.).

*O Hehir, Connor mc Dannill, Isl, 288
cf Connor fitz Daniell O Bryan (Cor, 204ff).

—— Cormuck mc Corm, Isl, 288

—— Don'll mc Shaen, Isl, 296
cf Daniell mc Shaen O Dea (Inch, 548) and Daniell mc Shaen Mc Namara (Tull, 14).

—— Daniell mc Teige, Isl, 294
cf Donnell mc Teige leigh O Bryan (Inch, 517) and Daniell mc Teig Mc Namara (Bun & Tull, many references). See also surnames given in note on Daniell roe mc Teige (list on p. xxx).

—— John (Shaen) mc Dermott, Isl, 296
John mc Dermott O Hehir is found in Isl, 294.

—— Mc Loghlin mc Donagh, Isl, 288
cf Melaughlin mc Donogh oge Mc Enchroe (Inch, 539).

—— —— Inch, 552
cf Connor O Bryan mc Donagh in the following entry. ? surname possibly=O Bryan.

—— Turlogh, Bur, 455
cf Turlagh fitz Donnogh O Bryan (Cor, 228).

Donnoghah, Oughna, Tull, 80, 82
Surnames Mc Namara & Mc Cusage occur in text in close proximity.

O Downen, Teige mc Laughl, Bun, 138A
?=Teige mc Laughl whose address is Downen. In the denomination column is Ballyorla alias Downen, Dowray par.

Mc Enchroe & Mc Euchroe
Both forms found in Inch bar. Indexed under Mc Enchroe.

Mc Felem, Fernandus, Bur, 482, 484
See note under mc Belim, Turlogh, above.

Mc Finin, Donogh, Tull, 26
Note surname Mc Nemara on the survey side of this page. cf Donnogh mc Fynyn Mc Nemara. ? surname=Mc Namara.

O Foyne, Tumultagh, Cor, 233

O Grady
See note on Brady surname.

Gorgee, Teige ne, Inch, 553
H, p. 156, has Teige mc Cargy. This entry has been placed under Carga (Mc Carga etc.).

*O Hehir, Connor mc Dannill, Isl, 288
cf Connor fitz Daniell O Bryan (Cor, 204ff).

—— Cormuck mc Corm, Isl, 288

—— Don'll mc Shaen, Isl, 296
cf Daniell mc Shaen O Dea (Inch, 548) and Daniell mc Shaen Mc Namara (Tull, 14).

—— Daniell mc Teige, Isl, 294
cf Donnell mc Teige leigh O Bryan (Inch, 517) and Daniell mc Teig Mc Namara (Bun & Tull, many references). See also surnames given in note on Daniell roe mc Teige (list on p. xxx).

—— John (Shaen) mc Dermott, Isl, 296
John mc Dermott O Hehir is found in Isl, 294.

—— Mc Loghlin mc Donagh, Isl, 288
cf Melaughlin mc Donogh oge Mc Enchroe (Inch, 539).

—— Murragh mc Teige, Isl, 296
cf Murrogh mc Teige Mc Murtagh, Ballyarn (Clon, 361).

Hickacc, Hychatt, Hychett
H has Lissaght or Lysaght. First letter may be a scribal error for L, giving Lysaght or form of that surname.

*Mc Kashy, Murrogh mc Owen, Bur, 451.
H, p. 129, has Murrogh oge Mc Carty.

Keinie (Kinie), Solomon, Bun, 117
? Keinie=broken down form of the surname (O Mul)kiny. cf O Mulkiny, Colla & O Mulkenry, Colla, in Index.

Mc Laghlen (Mc Loughlin).
Surname O Loghlin occurs frequently. The five following entries may be (1) christian names with surname Mc Loughlin or (2) in each case two christian names, one of which is a father's name Laghlen or Loughlin (found as first name with a wide variety of surnames). Indexed under O Loghlin.

—— Connor, Bun, 170
cf Connor mc Laughlin O Dea (Inch, 544, 546, 549) and Conr. mc Loughlin O Hehir (Isl, 275).

—— —— Inch, 535
? surname=Mc Enchroe but see reference in Inch bar. in the preceding note (Con. mc L. O Dea).

—— John, Tull, 51
H, p. 95, has John mc Laughlin. cf James mc Laughlin O Mullowny (Tull, 64). Indexed under O Mullowny.

—— Rory, Bun, 170
cf Rory mc Rossa O Loghlin (Bur, 447).

—— Turlogh (Therlagh), Bur, 457, 488
cf Turlogh mc Loghlin mc Murrogh O Loghlin, Bur, 489.

Mc Mahon, Mc Mahony & Mc Manghan
In searching, all three surnames should be checked as they may have been confused in the text.

Magila, Dermott, Clon, 326
?=Dermot Magillareagh (Clon, 349).

Memchonagh, Rory Isl, 296
It is difficult to determine whether Memchonagh is a descriptive adjective rather than a surname or a confused form of a surname e.g. Mc Mohonagh (=Mc Mahony).

Mc Murrogh, Dermott, Ballyarne, Clon, 361
cf Dermott mc Murto O Grady (Bun, 103), Dermot O Hehir mc Murtagh (Isl, 277, 287, 293) & Dermott mc Murtogh mc Owen O Mehan (Isl, 289). See also McMurtagh in Index.

Mc Murtagh, Byran, Ballyarne, Clon, 361
cf Bryan mc Murtagh O Bryan (Inch, 519, 529).

—— Teige, Clon, 333
cf Teige mc Murtagh mc Mahon (Clon, 336 & Bun, 162, 165).

*Mc Namara
The surname has been added tentatively in the seven entries which follow. See also mc Sheda, Conor (below) & following entries. Nothing helpful is found in H, except where noted. See the note under Rory mc Teige mc Sheda (below).

—— Daniell (Donnell) mc Sheda, Tull, 76f

—— Hugh mc Sida, Killcredane, Tull, 55

—— John mc Laughlin (Loughlin) boy mc Sheda, Tull, 76f

—— John mc Syda, Killcridan, Tull, 55
H, p. 96, has John McElyda (probably a scribal error for McSyda or McShyda).

—— Murragh mc Murtagh, Bun, 147

—— Rory mc Teige mc Sheda, Tull, 76f
If the surname is Mc Namara, then the names of three generations are recorded here. In most (but not all) of the three-generation entries the surname is Mc Namara; on the other hand this may point to a surname O Sheda, as three-generation christian names are relatively infrequent in the text.

—— William mc Sheda, Tull, 80

Mc Namara Fin (Mc Namara fine), Don'll & Donogh
Indexed as Mc Namara, Don'll & Donogh fin (fine). H has Mc Namara Fin.

O Nerin, Louglin mc Dermot mc [no name], Bun, 123
The surname O Nelan is found in close proximity. ? surname=O Nelan.

Mc Owen, Bryan, Bur, 453

Mc Owny, Donogh, Bur, 457

—— Turlogh, Bur, 456
H, p. 130, has ' heirs of Owny mc Laughlin.'

Quinn
Surname given in H as Mc Guin, in one case.

Mc Rory, Turlogh, Bur, 456
This name is preceded and followed by O Loghlin.

Mc Rossa (Mc Rosse), Pharis, Bur, 455
H, p. 130, has Jarcess (?) Mc Ross but not Pharis or Turlogh. See following note.

—— Turlogh, Bur, 455
See preceding note. Rossa as a christian name is associated with O Loghlin (Bur, 454–7, 469, 474, 482).

Mc Shaen (Mc Shane), Bryan, brother to Dermott, Clon, 361
On Clon, 362, Bryan mc Shaen & Connor mc Shaen are described as brothers of Connor mc Shaen Mc Mahony (Clon, 345, 362). ? surname=Mc Mahony.

—— Connor, Clon, 336
? surname= Mc Mahony. See preceding note.

—— Dermot (Dermott), Ballyarne, Clon, 361
? surname=Mc Mahony. See note under Bryan mc Shaen.

—— Donogh, of ye same (? Downen), Bun, 138A cf Donogh mc Shaen O Hehir (Isl, 285, 294) & Donnogh mc Shaen reagh Mc Namara (Tull, 88).

—— Hugh, Clon, 348(2)
cf Hugh mc Shaen Mc Namara (Tull, 42).

—— Moyler, Bun, 139

—— Murtogh, Isl, 271

—— Thomas, Aghenciogher, Clon, 348(1 & 2)
H, p. 147, has Thos. mc Shane. cf Thomas mc John O Grady (Bun, 103).

Mc Sheda
Sheda is found as a preceding generation christian name associated with the surname Mc Namara e.g. Dan'l mc Sheda Mc Namara, Tull, 3. Mc Namara entries with mc Sheda are to be found on pp. 17ff, 42, 55, 69f, 76f, 90. See (1) *Mc Namara, Daniell & following entries, and (2), particularly, the note under Rory mc Teige mc Sheda *Mc Namara.

—— Con'r, Tull, 3
Kilratera denomination, Iniskalto par, carries a note on the distribution side ' surveyed in the County of Gallway and halfe baro. of Leitrim and their set off.' The only O Sheda in the Galway book of survey & distribution (Vol. III in series) is Onnora Ny Sheeda.

—— Dan'll, Tull, 3
See note under Con'r, above.

—— John, Bun, 179
H, p. 186, has John mc Sheda.

—— —— Tull, 3
See note under Con'r, above

—— Loughlin, Tull, 3
See note under Con'r, above.

—— Mohan, Tull, 3
See note under Con'r, above.

Mc Terlagh, Murtagh, Inch, 588
This entry follows that of Donnogh mc Teige O Bryan. ? surname possibly=O Brien but cf Murt. mc Turlagh Mc Mahon (Bun, 162).
